"Strict orders have been issued from national and State headquarters that the Democratic party is not conducting a "drive", despite the urgent need of funds to defray the expense of campaigning in a few doubtful states," said Judge Matt Boykin, of Mobile, chairman of the state finance committee.

"It has not been necessary to 'beg' the Democrats of Alabama to assist in this manner to assure reelection of President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner," Boykin added.

Pitt Tyson Maner, the Governor's secretary, who is also serving or's secretary, wro is also serving as secretary of the state finance committee of the party, revealed that Montgomery, Hale, Cullman, Fayette and Washington counties have already reported cash contributions and pledges far above their respective county quotas.

Satisfactory progress was reported in Jefferson county by Chairman T. M. Murphree, despite the distraction of a bitter local controversy over a proposed constitutional amendment which will also be decided at the general election November 3.

The story of the warm personal and politiral friendship and admiration of Gov. Bibb Graves for Franklin Delano Roosevelt was heard by thousands of voters this week as "The Little Colonel" launched his speaking tour through the hustings of Missouri and Kentucky.

Beginning a series of campaign addresses last Monday afternoon at Neosho, Mo., the Alabama Governor, accompanied by Mrs. Graves proceeded by automobile to Carthage, Mo., where he spoke to a large group Monday night, thence to Lamar, Mo., Tuesday afternoon; Osceola, Tuesday evening, and Shelbyville, Ky., Thursday afternoon.

His present itinerary calls for speeches at Bardstown, Ky., Thursday night; Russellville, Ky., Friday night; Greenville, Ky., Saturday night.

Governor Graves has also been invited to make additional addresses in Ohio.

The women's division of the Democratic party in Alabama gave the campaign for reelection of President Roosevelt a rousing sendoff here last week during a three-hour rally, attended by 200 or more women from all parts of the State.

Governor Graves, Judge Leon McCord, Alabama's national committeeman; Lister Hill, of Montgomery; Mrs. A. Y. Malone, of Dothan, national committeewoman from Alabama, and Charles W. Edwards, of Auburn, were the speakers, each extolling the President and the New Deal.

Mrs. Malone, who presided, told her audience, including a sprinkling of men, that the organization "is to be a permanent arm of Democracy in Alabama." She said there was no question as to how Alabama would vote Nov. 3, but the size of the majority for the Democratic ticket was the chief concern of the women, predicting a record-breaking vote of confidence and appreciation for Roosevelt.

Governor Graves took a rap at former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, who recently bolted to Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential candidate. He charged that Smith refused to stick with his party because he couldn't be "It"!

John Kohn, of Montgomery, state president, announces that the Alabama League of Young Democrats will hold its 1936 convention at Birmingham, October 23. Kohn said that Senator-elect Claude Pepper, of Florida, a native of Alabama, would deliver the chief address at the convention's banquet. The banquet will be open to all, he said, explaining that one-half of the proceeds would be sent to the National Democratic party to be used in the campaign.

James Carter, of Montgomery, head of the First Voters Group, predicts that 40,000 young Alabama voters would cast ballots for President Roosevelt. He said organizations had been set up in 60 counties.

The government's social security program lost in a series of minor legal skirmishes last week in both Federal and States courts here, and a compromise test case of the unemployment compensation insurance laws of the State and Federal governments has been set for trial Oct. 22 before Federal Judge Charles B. Kennamer here to expedite a quick apeal to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The latest attempt to invalidate the unemployment insurance laws was contained in a suit filed last Friday in U. S. Federal Court here by Borden Burr, Birmingham attorney, representing the Southern Coal and Coke Company, a Delaware concern, doing business in Shelby County, Alabama.

Meanwhile, attorneys for hundreds of firms gathered before Federal Judge Kennamer to start hearings on suits attacking Alabama's job insurance act, but agreed to hold their cases in abeyance until the major suit, which is aimed at both State and Federal laws, is hurried through.

Under the agreement, all taxes due by the firms will be paid into the Federal depository (a Montgomery bank), and the temporary restraining orders already obtained, will be extended.

The new suit filed by Burr asks Judge Kennamer for a trial before a 3-judge Federal court in order that the losing side might appeal direct to the U. S. Supreme court.

Major A. B. Tucker, of Montgomery, chief of the gasoline tax division of the State Tax Commission, was named regional vice-president of the North American Gasoline Tax Conference for the southeastern states at the close of the 11th annual meeting of the tax experts in Richmond, Thursday.

Major Tucker and Henry S. Long, chairman of the State Tax Commission, represented Alabama at the conference.

Tucker, a former Thomasville, Ala., newspaper publisher and for many years member of the Montgomery Advertiser news staff was apointed six years ago to his present position with the State Tax Commission.

Analysis of the cotton situation in this country reveals the strongest base for price advance that has existed since pre-depression years, some of the best informed and most aggressive cotton firms of the South have declared, following completion of their latest crop surveys.

Heavy consumption at home and abroad convinces many cotton factors that high prices for the 1936 crop are inevitable, according to the Commodity Research Bureau, of New York.

At the same time the Research Bureau issued its prediction of price increases, the government's cotton estimate as of October 1 was released, indicating a yield of 1,120,000 bales of 500-pound gross weight for Alabama, compared with 1,059,000 bales last year, and a 5-year average (1928-32) production average of 1,255,000 bales.

Indications now point to a yield this year of 231 pounds an acre. This comares with an estimated yield of 226 pounds an acre in 1935, and a 10-year average (1923-32) of 172 pounds. This indicated yield is the highest on record, and is only approached by last year's production.

Thomas W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power Company, last week delivered to the State Tax Commission a check for $359,220.38 in payment of the hydro-electric kilowatt hour taxes assessed by the State which is earmarked for the educational trust fund.

It was the largest annual tax payment from this source in the history of the company, exceeding last year's payment by $30,000.

Never Before Could You Telephone "Long Distance" So Cheaply as Now

The latest long distance rate reduction, effective September 1, was the seventh reduction voluntarily made by the Company in the past ten years, and will save telephone users many millions of dollars.

You can now talk on station-to-station service a distance of 50 miles for as little as 35c or 1000 miles for $1.85 and greater or less distances at a correspondingly low cost.

Telephoning is the quick, easy, economical and personal way to keep in close touch with out-of-town relatives and friends. There is no more satisfactory and pleasing way to extend sympathy or congratulations, greetings or invitations to out-of-town friends and acquaintances, than by long distance telephone.

Isn't there someone, somewhere, father, mother, brother, sister or friend who would be made happier by hearing your voice and talking to you tonight? Ask "Long Distance" for rates.

Rural Electrification
IN ALABAMA
In the Meantime, What Happened?

By E. C. Easter

CHAPTER V

DURING the time Alabama Power Company was earnestly cooperating with the several State and Federal rural electrification agencies, and extending its service to thousands of rural customers during 1935, the Alabama Rural Electrification Authority requested a wholesale rate for service to electric membership corporations.

This Company stated that it willingly would supply electric current at wholesale to such groups and during the year Alabama Public Service Commission approved a low wholesale rate at which the Company was to supply such electric co-operative groups.

In the Meantime, TVA Begins "Raiding"

Immediately upon the appearance in the newspapers of the list of rural lines that the Company had approved for construction, the Tennessee Valley Authority began efforts to interfere with the Company's effort to build the lines particularly in the counties outside the area in which the Company had contracted to sell its lines to the TVA.

First: Officials and representatives of TVA made trips through the area, making speeches, expressing their intention to extend electricity to the farmers, and explaining the low rates and the huge success of their service in Alcorn County, Mississippi.

Second: Promoting the organization of County Membership Corporations, in the name of which the TVA agents conduct their activities, to discredit the Power Company and promote its raiding activities further into the market areas of the Company.

Third: By interfering, through activities of TVA agents or through local citizens inspired or coerced to do so by the TVA agents, with the Company's efforts to provide electric service to communities that had requested service of the Company.

In one instance representatives of the Company were invited to attend a meeting in a rural community of DeKalb County for the purpose of explaining rates, etc., applicable for service. During the meeting representatives of the Company were advised that TVA agents were stationed outside the meeting room.

While the Company representatives were in the community taking applications for service, letters were written and visits were made to the community by citizens and politicians of nearby towns urging the people of the rural community not to sign the Company's applications for service.

Federal, State and County employes were made to believe that they would lose their jobs if they signed up with the Power Company. Many of those who signed applications for service with the Company requested that their doing so be treated confidentially.

One school teacher was fired for not opposing the Company's activities in the community. Yet this community was located adjacent to the areas served by the Company and could be served more economically from the Company's system than in any other way.

Fourth: By building lines duplicating the existing and proposed lines of the Company, through the organization of the County Membership Corporations.

TVA Will Deny This
Its Denial, However, Does Not Alter the Truth of the Statement

That TVA should conduct a raid into that territory and engage in the financing of rural lines when Alabama Power Company had already agreed to do so and when there already was a government agency set up specifically for the purpose is not quite understandable! Why it should want to duplicate electric lines when there is barely sufficient available business to justify one line; why it should do this and neglect the extension of electric service to new customers in its own territory also raises a question. Why it should have extended its "raiding" lines along almost identical routes surveyed by Alabama Power Company will also be questioned by citizens with a sense of fair play and decent sportsmanship.

We Do Not Oppose Electric Membership Associations

Alabama Power Company does NOT oppose the formation of rural electric "cooperatives" or "electric membership corporations." It does believe that if prospective members of such associations can secure DIRECT electric service, rather than INDIRECTLY through membership in an association which involves legal, moral and financial responsibilities, they will find it to their best interest to take the direct service. Where for some reason service cannot be directly furnished, the electric cooperative group is as welcome a customer as the individual.

This is no new policy. It has been stated to both Federal and State officials on numerous occasions, and in each instance we have been told, "The main thing is to get rural lines extended. The more rural electrification the Company does, the more quickly the job can be accomplished."

CHAPTER VI

Questions Prospective Members of Rural Electric Associations Should Ask Themselves

WE SUGGEST a few pertinent questions which rural citizens might ask themselves when approached by smooth talking TVA representatives or their political allies who hide behind the claim that the only competition between TVA and Alabama Power Company is a competition of ideas and policies.

Any business enterprise would welcome competition of ideas and policies; no company or agency can remain static; other individuals in the same or different lines of business may make helpful suggestions, but that is not what we are talking about.

We are talking about a competitor who takes his entire capital outlay from the Federal Government and who pays neither interest nor taxes and at the same time is building competitive lines using county cooperatives to shield it in its destructive, competitive warfare.

1. Tennessee Valley Authority representatives paint a glowing picture of the advantages to farmers of organizing into a TVA-dominated association engaging in the electric light and power business. Why do they not state the disadvantages?

2. Tennessee Valley Authority presents astonishing figures supposed to prove that several of the "electric membership associations" in other states are huge successes. Do they give you all the figures, and do they include all they have taken in, but only PART of what is paid out? Will they give you detailed figures and suggest that you have an independent electrical accountant analyze them for you? Hardly, the figures wouldn't show up so well then.

3. Why does the TVA take up so much time misrepresenting Alabama Power Company when representatives of State and Federal Rural Electrification Agencies have praised the Company's rural electrification activities?

4. If the Tennessee Valley Authority proposition is so sound, why should it have to disparage rural electrification projects of an experienced and reliable organization such as Alabama Power Company?

5. If Alabama Power Company fails to extend a rural electric line because it doesn't seem to be a sound business proposition, is there any reason to believe the proposition will be any sounder for you and a group of your neighbors if you decide to build and operate the line yourselves?

For their safety and to avoid being misled, citizens should ask themselves certain further questions before embarking on TVA-inspired electric co-operatives. These questions will be suggested in the next several chapters.

This advertisement is the third of a series which has also been printed in booklet form. T. W. Martin, President of Alabama Power Company, Birmingham, will cheerfully send a copy to any interested person requesting it.

Bitsy Grant Alone Supplies Thrills to Modern Tennis

PERHAPS it is because little guys must stick together or get stuck by an unappreciative world. Anyhow the word picture that was to be painted here is all jumbled up. Every time I try to daub the paper with some pretty phrase concerning the flame-tipped racquets of such tennis genii as Helen Jacobs and Fred Perry the result somehow comes out differently. Somehow I always come up with the sharp outlines of a fighting gentleman from Georgia—Bitsy Grant.

It is a most distressing situation. After witnessing the nationa championship at Forest Hills, a while back, I got loaded with all sorts of other information. I know that the tall, blonde Alice Marble has enough strokes to win a title, but that she has not yet achieved the proper match temperament. I can gab with the best of the experts about Donald Budge's equipment.

Bitsy Grant

I can tip off one of those anti-perspiration companies that they have a good prospect in Perry. I can argue why the worst tournament in years brought out the best crowds. I can suggest that was because the celebrated gentleman conducting the affair introduced some new performers for a change. I know that Mrs. Molla Mallory is almost as active as a spectator as she was as a player and that she tried sitting on nine different chairs in the course of 75 minutes during one afternoon. But still there's the gent from Georgia.

I can wise up the gents who don't go to tennis matches, too, that they are missing something. Tha. — although tennis no longer seems to turn out such excitable sisters as Mlle. Lenglen — the girls are far prettier than they were a few seasons ago.

It's Polite to Applaud Other Fellow's Error

I know that tennis still is the only sport where the polite thing to do is to applaud some unfortunate fellow's error. I suspect that if I were a linesman and one of the boys or girls tossed a point just to show what he or she thought of my bad judgment, I'd hand him or her a couple of the best where it would do the most good.

I know that Helen Jacobs wears a gold chain on her left wrist while playing and that Miss Marble is adorned with a wrist watch. If I were Miss Pedersen I would wear shorts that did not bag around my knees. If I were one of those khaki-clad stalwarts who seem to do nothing all day long save take down nets, and then put them up again, I'd come out swinging a racquet some day just to see what would happen to the frozen faces of the elect.

I know that Frankie Parker needs a long rest so that he can get in such physical shape that he no longer needs to waft over those soft serves. I know that the ball boys get paid 75 cents a match and that some of them make as high as $25 during the tournament. I suspect that nose specialists, who see the way Perry keeps his mouth open while playing, immediately begin squirming because they want to operate on that long beak for adenoids.

I—but, as has been mentioned before, such items leave me cold. Until waning strength and Big Bill Tilden finally took the play away from him, and he retired, I used to go to tennis affairs to watch a frail little guy named Bill Johnston. Tennis did not seem then—as too often since—a dead-panned comedy of manners. Instead pulses ever strummed faster while that blazing inner urge with which few humans are blessed made Little Bill's scrawny muscles perform the impossible.

Now—for all that I would not give one Dodger double-header for all the tennis of the season—I again am willing to pay to ge. into the park. Tennis is a game where tall, strong and rangy men ever will meet with most success and Bitsy Grant probably would have to stand on tiptoes to look Rabbit Maranville in the eyes.

Yet—but come to think of it, maybe that really is why I like to watch this tiny gee.

Now Ease Neuritis Pains Fast

Bayer Tablets Dissolve Almost Instantly
In 2 seconds by stop watch, a genuine BAYER Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. What happens in this glass . . . happens in your stomach.

Hence — when you take a real Bayer Aspirin tablet it starts to dissolve almost as quickly as you swallow it. And thus is ready to start working almost instantly . . . headaches, neuralgia and neuritis pains start easing almost at once.

That's why millions never ask for aspirin by the name aspirin alone when they buy, but always say "BAYER ASPIRIN" and see that they get it.

Try it. You'll say it's marvelous.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for then enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.

If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adlerika. Adlerika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.

Adlerika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually removes bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adlerika one-half hour before breakfast or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed. Leading Druggists.

WHEN kidneys function badly and you suffer a nagging backache, with dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination and getting up at night; when you feel tired, nervous, all upset . . . use Doan's Pills.

Doan's are especially for poorly working kidneys. Millions of boxes are used every year. They are recommended the country over. Ask your neighbor!

CAROLE LOMBARD is a happy girl these days. When Alice Marble defeated Helen Jacobs at Forest Hills, N. Y., and became our national tennis champion, everybody wanted the racket with which she won. She was deluged with telegrams asking for it.

But Carole's telegram arrived first, and Carole is an old friend—so she got the racket. And as all Hollywood is tennis-mad, (as well as polo-mad and football-mad) that was something to cheer about.

Incidentally Alice Marble, who is very pretty, was asked if she'd like to go into pictures. She said she wouldn't.

Well, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell finally got married; had the ceremony performed on the ship on which they were sailing through the Panama canal and on to New York for a very gay honeymoon. They were lucky to have three whole weeks between pictures; as it was, Dick had to plan for a broadcast the minute they landed in New York. Joan and Dick are among the most popular stars of Hollywood.

Joan Blondell

That first broadcast of Major Bowes' for his new sponsors was very much a society affair, with men in formal evening attire and women in low-cut gowns crowding in to hear and see it, and policemen holding back the uninvited.

"Hollywood Boulevard" is a picture that all you old-timers certainly ought to see. John Halliday, Betty Compson, Esther Ralston, Mae Marsh, Charles Ray, Francis X. Bushman—they're all in it, and so are others who made movie history in the silent days.

The picture is interesting, too, because of the very good plot, involving pretty Marsha Hunt, who looks very much like the Gish girls in their early days.

If you have listened to the "Myrt and Marge" programs on the air you've heard a chap named Vinton Haworth, who's about to burst into fame and glory on the motion picture screen.

Some booking agents heard him on the air and got him a screen test. Then, as frequently happens, nothing happened for months. Finally Cliff Reid, who is producing "The Plough and the Stars" for RKO saw the test. He was casting "Without Orders", an aviation story, and took a terrific chance by casting Haworth as the second male lead.

Mary Carlisle has come along fast since she was just one more of the pretty, blonde girls of whom Hollywood was so full two years ago. They had pretty figures, they were cute—but it was hard, sometimes, to tell them apart.

But see Mary in "Lady, Be Careful" with Lew Ayres, Buster Crabbe, and some other awfully good young actors, and you'll realize that she had developed into a fine young leading woman. It's a riotously funny picture, made from the successful play, "Sailor Beware"

Leslie Howard has made no secret of the fact that he didn't want to go on making pictures in Hollywood. About to do "Hamlet" on the stage in New York, at last, he has also let it be announced that he is one of the organizers of a new motion picture company, called Associated Artists. Dudley Murphy, who has had some experience as a director in Hollywood, and Hugh Walpole, the novelist, are associated with him in the company, which has been formed in London.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Hollywood is still shocked by Irving Thalberg's death . . . George Brent is planning now to go to London for the coronation next spring . . . There's a dearth of young leading men in Hollywood . . . "Give Me Your Heart," Kay Francis' newest picture, is one of her best, and once again she proves her ability to wear lovely clothes better than most of the girls in Hollywood do . . . Ruby Keeler and Al Jolson celebrated their eighth wedding anniversary the other day . . . Paramount pays George Raft as much money as Metro pays Clark Gable . . . Frank Morgan's mother, one of the country's most successful business women, died recently at the age of eighty-four . . . "Sing, Baby, Sing" is breaking records and making a reputation as one of the year's funniest pictures.

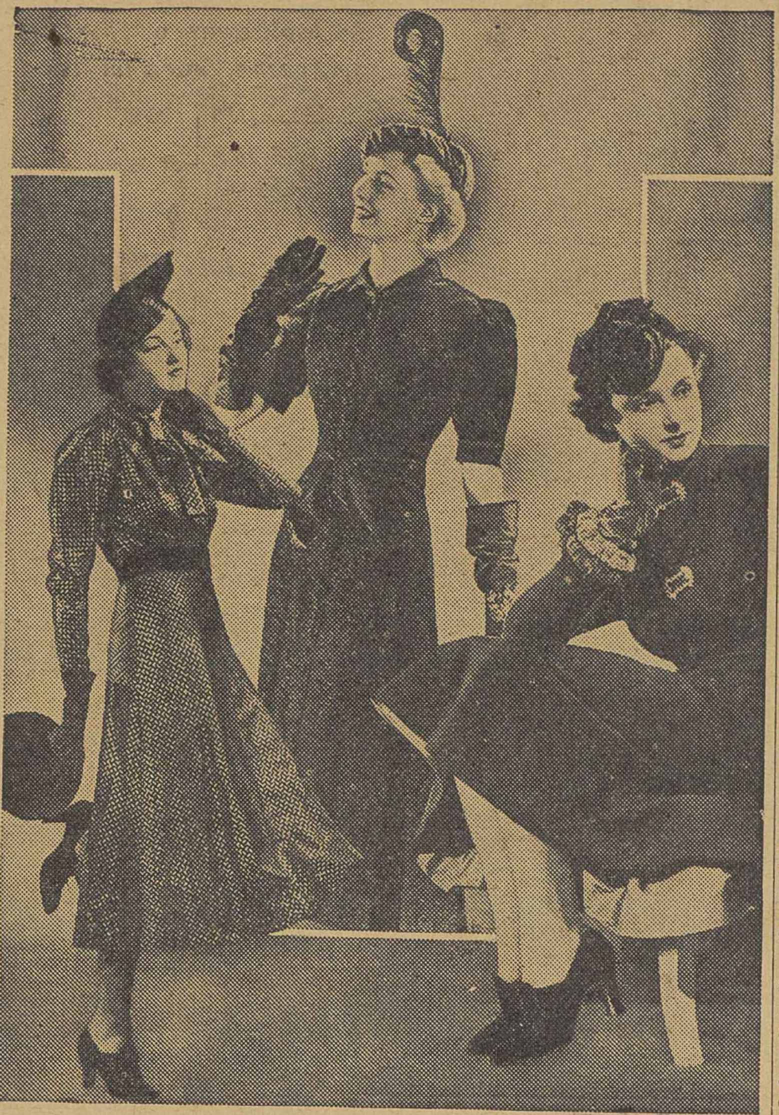
Silks in Exciting New Silhouettes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THE silk parade of fall fashions marches across the country, bringing new and dramatic silks to interpret the exciting new silhouettes. In one's approach to the all-important subject of present-day fashion one can choose their type, be it Directoire, Victorian or Edwardian, of Spanish or Tyrolean influence or unmistakably Twentieth century modernistic or whatever the period, it can be authentically followed right through from dress to related accessories in the new autumn program.

The princess lines of the turn-of-the-century Edwardian fashions are outstanding in today's mode, done with a suaveness that fits them perfectly into the tempo of modern trends. You see in all advance dress collections silk crepes, silk metals, silk satins, velvets and brocades styled in typical button-down-the-front manner with snug bodices like we see in portraits of our great-aunts and grandmammas, softened by little collars or neckline detail and with full skirts that have comfortable freedom.

Sometimes the now-so-chic princess types are true princess, with no waistline indication. Then again the princess adds a graceful soft belt or sash which makes the contour less severe while preserving the flowing line from bodice to hipline. The princess dress, centered in the illustration, done in the Edwardian manner adopts the sash idea. This very new model is styled of black silk faille shot with crimson lacquered metal. Watch these new color-metalized silks for they are the latest in rich fabric showings. Accessory details that add to the lure of this striking costume are a pert little turban of crimson silk velvet with a Victorian ostrich feather quill shooting up from the crown, stunning velvet gloves with a wrist bracelet of elaborate composition flowers like the cloissone jewelry of an earlier day. Garnet tones in jewelry or silk material are very important this season.

"Swing" skirts are sweeping the country along with swing music. For afternoon wear there is a feeling of gaiety and modernity in full-skirted frocks of rich silks patterned with metals or stiff silk satins and novelty silk crepes. It is a well known fact that silks have a lovely drape and "swing" of their own that make them the perfect medium for such styles. Elegance in the daytime mode is expressed in the afternoon dress pictured to the left. A coat of mail inspired the idea of gun metal on black silk crepe for this model which so gracefully features one of the very new swing skirts. The tiny hat is a glorified version of the overseas cap.

It's high-note fashion, too, for skirts to be lined with bright contrasting silk taffeta. Bright red silk taffeta lines the swing skirt of the black silk crepe afternoon dress worn by the figure seated. Matching silk is revealed at the throat with the color accented in ruby-and-brilliant brooches. The empire waist with unique sleeves, the skirt and the most gorgeous velvet gloves are all very 1936.

Metals for all sorts of dresses glitter in the mode. There are silk cocktail frocks in street length, often with finely pleated skirts. Silk metals and silk metal brocades make tunics to wear with afternoon suits of Lyons or taffeta-backed silk velvets, or evening tunics and redingotes worn over slim silk foundations.

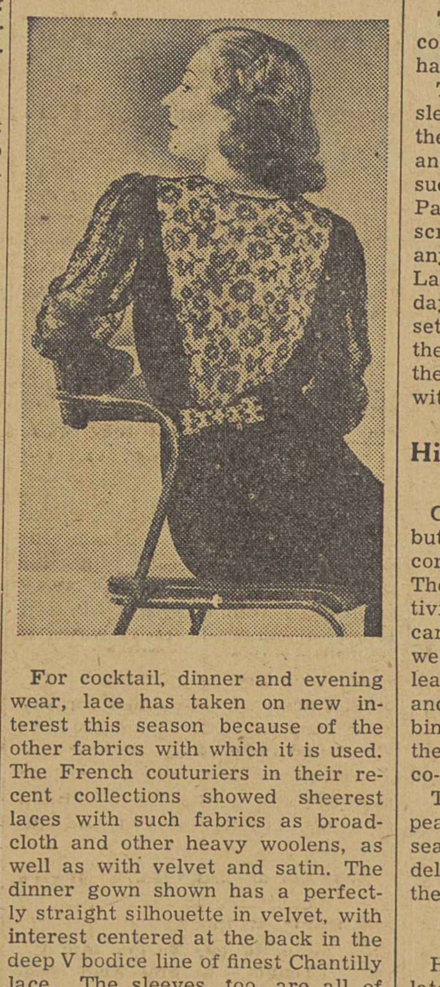
LACE WITH VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



For cocktail, dinner and evening wear, lace has taken on new interest this season because of the other fabrics with which it is used. The French couturiers in their recent collections showed sheerest laces with such fabrics as broadcloth and other heavy woolens, as well as with velvet and satin. The dinner gown shown has a perfectly straight silhouette in velvet, with interest centered at the back in the deep V bodice line of finest Chantilly lace. The sleeves, too, are all of lace, as well as the shallow V line in front, finished with a soft lace jabot. It is an admirable dress for all of the fall and winter months, and is youthful as well as suited to more mature types.

PARISIAN DESIGNS HOROSCOPE DRESS

The "horoscope dress" in the new collection of Mme. Jeanne Lanvin has caused a sensation in Paris.

These gowns, embroidered on the sleeve or on the bodice with signs of the zodiac in gold and silver beads and brightly colored beads, were a sudden inspiration of the veteran Paris couturiere who dresses more screen and stage celebrities than any other French designer. Mme. Lanvin announced that the world today is in such a topsy-turvy, unsettled state that people should wear their futures on their sleeves—hence the "horoscope" gowns embroidered with astral signs.

Higher Heels for College Girls Is Latest Fashion

College girls prefer sports shoes but are taking to higher heels, according to a nation-wide survey. These they wear for all-around activities, including shopping in town, campus and classroom and for week-end jaunts. Brown is the leading color, with dark green next and wine third in popularity. Combinations of colors with brown as the basic tone are popular with all co-eds.

The ghillie, with rubber sole, appears to be a campus "must" this season—as a companion shoe and delightful change to lend variety in the shoe wardrobe.

New Hat Styles

Hats are less conspicuous in the latest Paris showings. The new crowns stand out only in one place. They are high at some point, back, front or side. And the new shoes are also high—just to the ankle. Kid is the smartest material for evening.

"The Man Who-O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE REPUBLICAN ELEPHANT

WHY is it that the Republican party, which has dominated the American government for 60 out of the 80 years it has been in existence, should be symbolized by a beast from the African jungles instead of some typical American animal? The answer is that a cartoonist once used a jungle scene to depict a political crisis and the figure of an elephant was so appropriate for what it was supposed to represent that its symbolism persisted long after the crisis itself had passed. The cartoonist was Thomas Nast of Harper's Weekly and the crisis was this:

In 1874 it seemed certain that President Grant was determined to run again in 1876. The principal opponent to the third term idea was James Gordon Bennett's Democratic newspaper, the New York Herald, which shrieked "Caesarism!" incessantly. Taking his tip from the old fable which tells how "An ass, having put on a lion's skin, roamed about the forest and amused himself by frightening all the foolish animals he met with in his wanderings," Nast drew a cartoon which he labelled "The Third Term Panic."

It showed the Herald as a donkey in a lion's skin, labelled "Caesarism," braying loudly and all the animals fleeing in alarm. The New York Tribune was represented as a giraffe, the World as an owl dropping an arithmetic book, the Times as a unicorn with a monocle. Near-by was a half-concealed fox labelled "Democratic party."

In the foreground was an elephant, labelled "The Republican Vote" on the verge of an abyss of "Chaos" barely hidden by broken planks marked "Inflation," "Repudiation," "Reform (Tammany)" and "Reconstruction." This cartoon was not only a thrust at the Herald but also a half-affectionate jab at Nast's own "huge but timorous" party, the Republicans.

Two weeks later Nast drew another cartoon showing an elephant tumbling down into the pit with the rotten planks and the rejoicing animals following it. This was called "Caught in a Trap—the Result of the Third Term Hoax." From that time on the elephant was the symbol of the Republican party.

THEY SING THE OLD SONGS

TO THE tune of "O, Susanna!" written by Stephen Foster many years ago, supporters of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas sang him into the Republican nomination at Cleveland and this banjo-tinkling tune, which cheered westward-bound emigrants in the golden "Days of '49," is being used to cheer eastward - bound (to the White House, they believe) Republican voters in the campaign "Days of '36." Will it drown out the cheerful strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again"? November 3 will answer that!

Not the least of the interest in the renewed singing of "O, Susanna!" is the few instances in which an old familiar song is revived for campaign purposes. Setting "campaign verses" to a familiar tune and using it for political purposes has always been a common practice. As far back as 1840 the Whigs sang a song in praise of Harrison to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." In 1848, when the Free Soil party nominated Martin Van Buren, new words were written and sung to the tune of "Old Dan Tucker." The old familiar "Yankee Doodle," "Auld Lang Syne," "The Frog He Would a-Wooing Go" and "The Camptown Races" were employed as the musical setting for songs in praise of Fremont in 1856.

Considering the fact that a Spanish-American war hero was a vice-presidential candidate in 1900 it was only natural that "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" should become a Republican campaign song. But it wasn't until 1920 that an old song was revived and sung in its original form in support of a presidential candidate. In that year "The Sidewalks of New York," written in 1894 by Charles B. Lawlor and James W. Blake, was played by a band at the San Francisco Democratic convention when Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York was introduced and given a great ovation. It was his "musical trademark" when he became Candidate Smith in 1924 and Nominee Smith in 1928. Will the revival of "O, Susanna!" bring better luck to Gov. Al. Landon than the revival of "Sidewalks of New York" did to Gov. Al. Smith? Again—"read the papers on November 4."

Do Not Tire So Easily

Those whose work requires fast, but rhythmic movements, tire less easily than those who must move slowly at irregular intervals, according to psychological studies. Soldiers, it was found, march farther when keeping step to band music, the rhythm apparently causing the men to forget their fatigue instead of wasting energy thinking about how tired they are and how much farther they must

Power in Persistence

There is genius and power in persistence. It conquers all opposers; it gives confidence; it annihilates obstacles. Everybody believes in the determined man. People know that when he undertakes a thing, the battle is half won, for his rule is to accomplish whatever he sets out to do.

People know that it is useless to oppose a man who uses his stumbling blocks as stepping stones; who does not know when he is defeated; who never, because of criticism or opposition, shrinks from his task. — Orison Swett Marden.

MONTEVALLO LOCAL NEWS

Dinner At Camp

The members of the Presbyterian Student Council and the Christian Endeavor Society served dinner last Tuesday evening at the College Camp to thirty of the Presbyterian freshmen. A good time was had by all despite the showery weather.

College Girls' Circle

On Saturday, October 24, the Presbyterian College Girls will hold its Hallowe'en meeting in the church annex at 3 o'clock. The girls have chosen for their project this year the making of bedspreads for the small boys' dormitory in the Presbyterian Home at Talladega. Anyone desiring to help in this worthy cause may do so by calling Audrey McKay in Hanson Dorimtory, or Mrs. A. J. Cox.

Miss Bertie Allen of Birmingham was the guest of Mrs. M. P. Jeter this past week end.

The Society of Christian Endeavor of the Presbyterian Church will hold its regular meeting Sunday evening at 6:45. Plans will be made this Sunday for the Hallowe'en party. All young people of the community who are not members are asked to join our fellowship and share our good times.

Miss June Hamilton, who makes her home with Mrs. M. P. Jeter, went to Montgomery on official business Monday.

Mr. Sam Russell, former employee on our new bridge, was dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Jeter on Sunday. He is now at Vincent, Ala.

Mrs. Yeager Entertains With Dance Party

Mrs. Alice Yeager entertained Friday evening with a dance party honoring her sister, Mrs. Maude Hightower, of Atlanta, Ga. Guests present were Messrs. W. A. Stone, of New Castle, Pa.; J. B. Schuman and G. H. Hayes of Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie, Mr. Walter Boles, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Westbrook, Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Mr. W. H. Russell and Mrs. Weatherford, all of Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Mahaffey, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Burnett, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Simpson, Miss Lucy Hood, Miss Pearl True and Mr. Inzer Reid, all of Montevallo.

Mr. and Mrs. Olin Riser were guests of relatives here Sunday.

Mr. William Rogan made a business trip to Birmingham Tuesday.

Mrs. Stanley Mahan, Dr. Steckel, Miss Elizabeth Nolen, Home Demonstration Agent for Shelby County, Miss Bender, of the County Welfare Department, were dinner guests of Mrs. Margaret Coyle and girls of the Home Management on Monday evening.

Rev. A. J. Cox is attending the meeting of Synod in Montgomery this week.

Miss Frances Anderson, former graduate of Alabama College, visited Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Phillips last Sunday.

Spring Creek News

Miss Mary Sue Holcombe of Ebenezer spent Sunday night with Mrs. Bert Ingram.

Cozelle and Cecil Allen of Rome, Ga., spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tola Allen.

Miss Hazel Pate of Birmingham spent Sunday with home folks.

Mr. Don Eason has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Bert Ingram.

Mrs. J. H. Mauldin of Birmingham is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Lawson Ingram, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frost spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Noah Taff.

Miss Beonica Ingram was the capable leader for C. E. Program Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The topic for discussion was the "Gambling Menace." The leader was aided in her presentation of the program by selected C.E. members. Thesociety is now using "Cumberland Crusader" for program material and the change from "Standard C. E. Quarterly" is proving very successful. The attendance was excellent Sunday evening, with a large crowd of visitors also. We urge you to worship with us.

State's Aged Have Received Pensions

Montgomery, October 3—Recipients of Alabama's old age pensions got an average of $10.55 per month during July—twice as much as aged persons in Mississippi and Arkansas, a report of the Social Security Board released here revealed.

However, only 9,614 Alabamians received pensions, while Mississippi paid $3.58 a month to 15,467; and Arkansas paid $5.42 to 13,050. The national average was $16.57, with California leading the states with payments of $31.30.

Alabama was paying pensions to only eight per cent of its population of men and women over 65 years of age, while Mississipi paid 18 per cent, compared with a national average of 12.3 per cent in the 36 states paying pensions.

In the tabulations, Texas led Southern states, with individual payments of $15.82 each to 59,999 persons representing 22 per cent of its aged poulation. Texas' total payments for the month totaled $949,055, compared with Alabama's $101,000; Arkansas' $70,000; and a total national payment of $11,772,136.

A man bought a parrot and tried to teach him to talk. Going over to the bird, he repeated for several minutes the words, "Hello, hello."

Boy: "Say, dad, what does it mean when the paper says some man went to a convention as a delegate-at-large?"

Third District Asks Full School Term

RESOLUTIONS SENT TO GOVERNOR GRAVES AND THE PRESS

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 13.—At a meeting of 600 teachers and P.-T. A. members held at Opp last Saturday resolutions were adopted unanimously in which Governor Graves was asked to convene the Legislature immediately for the purpose of providing sufficient revenue to operate the public schools of the State to a minimum term of seven months.

The resolutions were introduced by James C. Dixon, Suerintendent of the schools of Elba and president of the Department of Superintendence of the Alabama Education Association. The third district includes the following counties and cities: Barbour, Eufaula, Coffee, Elba, Enterprise, Covington, Andalusia, Florala, Opp, Crenshaw, Dale, Ozark, Geneva, Henry, Houston, Dothan, Pike, Troy City, Troy State Teacher's College.

Whereas, the educational system of Alabama has been facing a critical situation for the past five years; and

Whereas, in 1935-1936 the average school term in Alabama was the shortest of any state in the Union; and

Whereas, at the present time an emergency exists in the public school system of the state, and at the same time school attendance shows a noticeable increase, thus placing the boys and girls of the State at a great disadvantage when compared with children from other states; therefore

Be it resolved, by the teachers and parents of the third district of the Alabama Education Association and of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers, assembled in Opp, on this the tenth day of October, 1936.

That we request the Governor of Alabama to call immediately an extraordinary session of the legislature for the purpose of providing funds for the operation of the schools of the state during the year and for the remainder of the quadrennium; and

That it be further resolved that we hereby affirm our unqualified support of the leadership of Superintendent J. A. Keller and likewise pledge our resources to the task of realizing the educational program of the Alabama Education Association, the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the State Department of Education; and

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Governor of Alabama, to the State Superintendent of Education, and to the press of the state.—James C. Dixon, Chairman, Elba; Solomon Baxter, Dothan; R. H. Erwin, Troy, Committee.

MONTEVALLO DID IT AGAIN

Again Montevallo defeats a foe that M. H. S. has never beaten before. Last Friday night, October 16, Montevallo defeated a strong Centreville team 19-7.

This was Montevallo's second chance under the lights, but this time they were the victors. The whole team was "fighting" more in that game than any other except the Jones-Valley game.

The first touchdown was made, for Montevallo, in the second quarter by "Trab Hartley, who ran seventy yards for the Bulldog's first score. G. Cahoon converted a replacement for the extra point Then in the third quarter "Trab" again made the tally on an end-around play. The kick went wide. The final score for Montevallo came in the fourth quarter after a long drive Harrison drove over for the last point, because he fumbled on the extra point.

Score by quarters:

Montevallo	0	7	6	6	19
Centreville	0	0	0	7	7

VINCENT HERE FRIDAY

The strong Vincent eleven will invade Montevallo Friday, October 23, at 1:00 p.m. This game is next to the last game to be played at Montevallo, so everybody should come.

Vincent always has a strong team and it should prove a tough battle, the kind you like to watch.

Men's Bible Class

The Men's Bible Class will meet next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock at the Strand Theatre.

Mr. Charles G. Dobbins, of the Alabama College faculty, will be the speaker.

Everyone is urged to be on time. There are some important matters to be considered, which will be of interest to everyone. Don't be late.

24 Shelby Men Accepted For CCC

ENLISTMENT BEING MADE THROUGH DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WELFARE

Twenty-four men from Shelby County were accepted for enrollment in CCC camps on Saturday, October 10. These twenty-four were selected from 150 men who had applitd for enrollment.

The Department of Public Welfare is the agency repsonsible for investigating the applications made and recommending men for emergency Conservation work. The men recommended must be between the ages of 17 and 28 years, unmarried, unemloyed, physically fit, citizens of the United States, with needy dependents, and willing to allot a substantial portion of the $30 which they receive monthly to their dependents. In addition the men must be willing to learn and work and be agreeable to discipline. No discrimination is made on account of race, religion, or political affiliations of applicants.

The primary objecties of Emergency Conservation work are three in number: 1. The assistance of families who are in financial distress. 2. The building of a constructive program in forest conservation, soil erosion, flood cntrol, and the development of recreational and historical areas, and 3. The objective of upbuilding the health, morale, confidence, and self-respect of the men in camp.

This last objective, which is of great social importance, is being accomplished through the work as well as through the recreational and educational opportunities which are a part of camp life. Circulating libraries, radios, educational movies, and such recreational activities as hiking, mountain climbing, fishing and swimming. There are religious services on Sunday.

The handbook of selecting men for the CCC reads, "The fact should be emphasized that because the man goes to a United States army acceptance or recruiting station for enrollment does not mean that he joins the army.

"The machinery of the army Recruiting system is used because it is the most convenient and most effective way of handling the enrollment of hundreds of thousands of men scattered over the United States. However, the man does not enlist or become a soldier. He does not become liable to military law. He remains a civilian from the beginning to the end. Emergency Conservation Work has nothing whatever to do with enlistment in the military forces of the United States, or with any military draft."

Although there is no CC Camp located in Shelby County, there is a camp near Clanton, and the writer dares to suggest that anyone of you may profit from a visit there.

STATE REPRESENTATIVES OF ORGANIZATION ATTENDED MEETINGS

Students and teachers in the school of Home Economics at Alabama College and Montevallo Training school were hostesses to the State Future Homemakers Association, Saturday, October 18. 57 girls and teachers from 14 schools attended the conference.

Future Homemakers is an honorary organization for students of Vocational Home Economics in highschool. The occasion of this meeting was the initiation of members of the club who have earned the state degree, the highest honor to be won in the organization. Montevallo girls who were initiated Saturday are: Laura Garrett, Helen Ingram, Martha Carr, Frances Reid, and Gladys Harrison.

Mrs. A. F. Harman, wife of the president of Alabama College, Mrs. T. H. Napier, wife of the Dean of the College, Mrs. J. A. Keller, wife of Alabama State Superintendent of Education and Mrs. J. B. Hobdy, wife of the Director of Vocational Education in Alabama, were initiated as honorary members. This was done in recognition of their great interest in the work of the Future Homemakers clubs.

The program, which included a welcome by Lillian Jenkins, president of the College Home Economics club, a very interesting talk, entitled, "Future Hmemakers, today and tomorrow," by Miss Ruth Simpson, assistant supervisor of Home Economics, and splendid reports and demonstrations of the home project work of the high school girls, was held in Brooklyn Hall during the morning. In the afternoon, the twenty-eight pledges were initiated into the club with beautiful services in Calkins Hall.

At the business meeting following the tea, Miss Merle Killingsworth, of Jemison, was elected president for the coming year. This is of special interest since the president of the FutureFarmers of Alabama is also from Jemison.

Anna Moon, freshman in the school of Home Economics, Alabama College, was president of tre club for the past year, and was in charge of the program, presiding at all the meetings.

LOCAL DELTA GAMA MEMBERS TO ENTERTAIN

On Saturday, October 24th, the local members of the Delta Kappa Gama Sorority will entertain at a hallowe'en luncheon to be held at the College Camp House in Sherwood Forest. Forty guests who are members of the Gama Chapter in Birmingham are expected.

The local members who will act as hostesses are Mesdames Homer Walton, Charlotte Peterson and the Misses Lela Wade Rice, Rizpah Dudley, Agnes Tutwiler, Catherine Farrar, Josephine Eddy and Sarah Weir.

New Business House To Open Here Soon

A crew of carpenters are at work renovating the store formerly occupied by E. Baer, preparatory to the opening of a new business at that place.

Hoffman's 5-cent to 5-dollar store will occupy the place as quickly as it can be made ready for business.

The interior of the building will be fitted out with the latest arrangements for proper and attractive display of merchandise, while the front is being rebuilt into most up-to-date display windows.

The proprietors of the new business give assurance that they will offer to the trade in Montevallo the finest variety of merchandise ever seen in this section.

Club Women Hold Interesting Session

STUDY EMPLOYMENT NEEDS OF SHELBY COUNTY PEOPLE

The business and professional women of Montevallo met last on October 12, and listened to a very interesting and revealing presentation of the facts about employment and unemployment in Shelby County. The speakers were Miss Doris Bender, the County Welfare worker, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Nolen, the County Demonstration Agent. Miss Bender discussed unemployment and Miss Nolen, employment. Both persons had a fund of statistical material to support their particular discussions based on their own particular case work in the field.

The members of the club who were present got a very vivid picture of the dearth of adequate relief on the one hand, and on the other hand a clear delineation of the limitation of the county's industries to absorb the available working population. Some of the reasons why relief is so inadequate in this county were presented by the speaker and discussed by the members. The effects of this on the welfare of the people involved and on the social stability of the county was also discussed.

The picture of unemployment in the county as shown by Miss Nolen, puts the number of farm families far in the lead. Next in number is the group of families whose heads are employed in coal mining. The cotton mill industries at Siluria have a comparatively large payroll. Then, there are several different kinds of occuations employing small numbers of persons, and of such nature that the business cannot be expanded to absorb any of the unemployed. The employment possibilities of the young boys and girls fresh out of college ready and eager to work, are quite inadequate to the demands. This, itself, is quite a significant problem for the citizen of the county to face.

The normal employment absorption in Shelby County at present is less than the population demands for those of working age. This truth should challenge those in our county who are interested in social welfare, especially since the county at present is so limited in its relief sources, to the end that the ratio between population and unemployment would be reduced.

Montevallo To Have New Freight Service

Mr. Milton Allen has established a business for conducting regular freight and transfer service between Montevallo and Birmingham, which will be known as the Montevallo Transfer Co.

Trips to and from Birmingham will be made three days each week, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays, for the purpose of engaging in general freight and transfer service.

This appears to give promise of a service whiih the people of this vicinity will find very useful. If you have anything to haul, get in touch with Mr. Allen for further particulars.

P.-T. A- REGULAR MEETING ON TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The P.-T. A. held its regular meeting at the Elementary Training School on Tuesday afternoon with an unusually large attendance. The president, Mrs. Murray Fancher, presided. Plans were made for the joint A. E. A. and P.-T. A. Conference to be held on October 31st. It was announced that the Parent's Day will be held on November 20th, at both the Elementary and High Schools.

Dr. J. I. Riddle was guest speaker, having as his topic "Intellegence." After the program the members adjourned to the cafeteria for the social hour, with Mrs. E. S. Lyman as chairman of the hostess committee.

New "Temporary" Gold Standard Adopted—Russia Accused of Using Spanish War to Rouse International Discord—Belgium Abandons Alliances.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

"IT IS a new gold standard, a way of doing business which has never been tried before," was Secretary Morgenthau's characterization of the agreement just entered into by the United States, Great Britain and France, whereby, subject to 24 - hours' cancellation, they will exchange gold for each other's currencies. Financiers, economists and business men were taken by surprise by the move and immediately gave it close study. Some were disposed to label the maneuver "political expediency," but experts generally said it was a logical step in the sequence of monetary events but not positively in the direction of stabilization.

Secretary Morgenthau

The new plan, Mr. Morgenthau said, differs from the old gold standard in that it will permit the export or earmarking of gold only to and between governments instead of private business institutions and traders.

"The door is wide open," said Mr. Morgenthau. "We're not going out drumming up business, but we'll welcome all other countries which want to participate."

According to the Treasury department, the United States alone will announce a selling price for gold. France and England will keep their selling prices secret, though there will be a free flow of gold between the stabilization funds of the three nations.

It was believed that Great Britain was the prime mover in this new pact. As one commentator put it: "The agreement was made necessary when France debased her currency and placed an embargo on gold exports, because Great Britain suddenly discovered that nowhere in the world was there left a fixed yardstick against which to measure internaional commitments and handle international exchange."

SOVIET RUSSIA made a second determined effort to aid the beleagured government of Spain, and sustained a second rebuff. Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to England, handed to Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the non-intervention committee, a virtual ultimatum demanding immediate convocation of the committee to consider blockading the coast of Portugal against arms shipments destined for the Spanish insurgents. It was understood in London that Lord Plymouth replied that if the proposition were seriously made, it should be presented through diplomatic channels to the governments concerned. The Russian plan was for a blockade by English of French warships.

Observers in Europe are convinced that the Soviet government does not expect the powers to agree to any such blockade as is suggested, but is chiefly interested in stirring up discord among the nations.

British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, after hearing of Lord Plymouth's reply, made a speech at Sheffield in which he pledged Great Britain's unwavering support to the policy of nonintervention in Spain. He declared the government was determined to "confine that tragedy within the boundaries of that country."

Leaders of the Fascists were reported to have planned a steady, steam - roller advance on Madrid, and this offensive was already under way. The defenders of the capital were hastily building fortifications in the suburbs and surrounding the city with trenches. In Ovied othe dynamite - armed force of loyalist miners was still battling with the garrison and rebel troops sent to the rescue were about to enter the city.

MAURICE THOREZ, French Communist leader, made a speech in Strasbourg that is causing a lot of trouble. He was charged with deliberately insulting Adolf Hitler, and the Berlin government entered formal protest. The official Nazi organ, Der Angriff, says the speech was an attempt to precipitate war between France and Germany, and also that it was an attempt "to overthrow the German reich and to achieve the definite bolshevization of France for the benefit of the Soviet Communist internationale."

The French rightist newspapers declare the Thorez incident was part of the Russian Communist scheme to throw France against Germany that Russia will not be left alone to face "any eventual German attack." The rightists were even more vigorous in ther accusations when it was learned that Maxim Litvinov, soviet foreign commissar, was secretly in Paris.

FIGURES made public by the American Navy department show that since July 1 last every great naval power except the United States has increased the number and tonnage of its war vessels.

In the 2½ months from July 1 to September 15, the United States reduced the number of its ships from 324 vessels totaling 1,080,715 tons to 306 vessels, totaling 1,062,875 tons.

Japan increased ships from 213 to 217 and tonnage from 772,797 to 776,397.

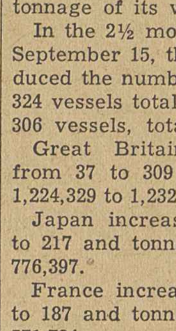
Italy increased ships from 191 to 195 and tonnage from 403,865 to 406,333.

Germany increased ships from forty-nine to fifty-three and tonnage from 113,708 to 125,458.

The British foreign office announced that France and Italy had agreed to sign that protocol of the London naval treaty forbidding the use of submarines except under strict limitations.

BELGIUM, which since the close of the World war has been tied tight to France by a military alliance, has decided to drop that and all similar alliances and to rely for her safety on strict neutrality and a larger army. King Leopold so informed the cabinet, telling the ministers that Germany's reoccupation of the Rhineland "practically puts us back where we were before the great war." Belgium's geographical position, he said "makes it imperative for us to maintain a military machine of such size as to dissuade any neighbor from using our territory to attack another state." The period of military service was extended from twelve to eighteen months.



King Leopold

"Belgium must pursue a policy exclusively and wholly Belgian," Leopold said. "In any case our engagements should not go beyond keeping off war from our own territory. Belgium must remain outside of its neighbors' conflicts."

"Any policy of alliance with a single country would weaken our position abroad. A purely defensive alliance would not meet the case because, however prompt the intervention of our ally, it would only come after the invader's blow, which would be crushing."

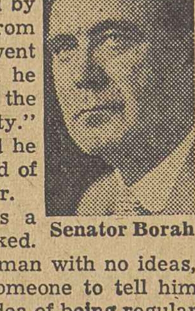
AUTHORITY of the national maritime commission to declare a permanent truce in current contract controversies is challenged by the negotiating committee for the Pacific coasst maritime unions, and members of those unions are instructed to vote on a proposal for a coast-wide waterfront strike.

The maritime commission had peremptorily demanded that the Pacific coast ports be kept open while it sent an investigator to San Francisco to discuss the conditions which have long threatened to bring on industrial warfare.

In telegrams to President Franklin Roosevelt and the commission, the committee said the commission had caused "great unrest" among the workers through its participation in negotiations between shipowners and dock and shipboard employees.

The seven unions, claiming a membership of nearly 37,000 workers, are the International Longshoremen's association, the American Radio Telegraphists' association, the Marine Engineers' Beneficial association, the Masters, Mates and Pilots of America, the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, Marine Cooks and Stewards, and the Marine Firemen. Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers' association.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho, whose attitude in the Presidential campaign is a matter of great interest to all parties, has declared he would confine his attention to state matters; but then, being irked by some criticism from Republicans he went further and said he was "going after the Republican party." The veteran said he had been accused of not being regular.



Senator Borah

"Well, what is a regular?" he asked. "A regular is a man with no ideas, who waits for someone to tell him what to do. My idea of being regular is in doing what you believe to be right in the interests of the people you represent.

"Let this be understood—I'm telling all parties, Republican, Democratic, Union—I'm going to advocate the things I believe in whether they cross party lines or not."

PESSIMISM and discontent marked the final session of the League of Nations assembly, the leaders admitting that little had been accomplished. Carlos Saavedra Lamas of Argentina, president of the assembly, even asked if he might not raise the question whether "civilization is on the verge of a final breakup."

The question of reforming the league covenant provoked a bitter controversy on whether nonmember states should be consulted. Russia was understood to be anxious particularly to bar German influence and achieved a minor triumph since no definite action to solicit nonmember co-operation was taken. A committee of twenty-eight was named to study reform proposals.

The assembly approved reports of its economic and disarmament committees. The economic report carried a British proposal to create a comission to study accessibility or raw materials. The United States and other nonmembers would be invited to participate. The report of the disarmament committee approved the reconvening of the world disarmament conference at an early date.

KURT SCHUSCHNIGG, chancellor of Austria, is taking his place among the European dictators. In order to consolidate military power in his own hands, he decreed the dissolution of all private armies, this being aimed especially at the Fascist Heimwehr headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg. The prince directed his followers to obey the edict, and Major Fey, Starhemberg's rival for control of the Heimwehr, called on the elements recognizing his leadership to preserve order.

Prince von Starhemberg.

The chancellor's order also affected his own Catholic storm troops. All the private troops were ordered consolidated with the Austrian state militia. This would increase Austria's official armed forces to about 158,000 men. The dissolution decree met strong opposition within the cabinet, and was voted after three ministers had walked out.

Schuschnigg's task now is to actually disarm the private armies. If he succeeds in doing this, his complete control over Austria may be conceded. It is recalled that the Heimwehr was ordered to disarm in 1931, that the government seized many weapons, and that a year later some 40,000 Heimwehr men appeared fully armed and uniformed. Von Starhemberg may not be really squelched this time, either. It is a certainty that he has a powerful friend in Premier Mussolini of Italy.

ARABS of Palestine, who had been on "strike" for 175 days in protest against unrestricted immigration of Jews, were persuaded by the British to call off the strike, which had been accompanied by great disorders and the killing of several hundred persons. The Arab high committee issued an appeal to Arabs throughout the country to return to work quietly, and this command was obeyed generally. Sir Arthur Wauchope, British high commissioner, was said to have informed the British government that it was now safe for the royal commission of investigation to begin its work of inquiring into the grievances of the Arabs.

According to a Hebrew newspaper of Jerusalem, the Arabs have arranged for backing by Italian Fascists for their aspirations. Also the Moslem authority administering Islamic church property is reported to be prepared to sell Catholics a Christian holy place on Mount Zion.

BASING its conclusions on a study covering the period from 1900 to 1935, the National Industrial Conference board finds that there is no evidence to support the theory that the burden of private debt upon business is excessive. Statements that private debt is "absorbing wealth" or is showing a changed and unfavorable relationship to wealth, or that the depression was precipitated by an excessive debt burden are without factual basis, the board reported.

Interest charges have not outrun the capacity to pay them, according to the board's study, which showed that the rates of growth of private long term debt and of interest charges from 1900 to 1935 were similar to those of national wealth and national income.

Since 1930 private long term debt has tended to decline. Only the public utilities have increased the amount of their outstanding debt. But the board points out that no debt problem exists in the public utility field as a whole and that expansion of the electric light and power utilities has been on a sound basis, with the industry in a safe position to meet interest charges.

The steam railroads, taken as a whole, are neither overcapitalized nor overburdened with debt, the board concludes.

ONE OF the worst typhoons in the history of the Philippines swept across Luzon island, killing scores of persons and destroying villages. At least 109 perished and the authorities feared the death list would be much larger for four hundred were reported missing. Eighty-two bodies were recovered from the city of Cabanatuan alone.

Six Men, Six Views

Washington.—Some time ago I reported in these columns that Mr. Roosevelt had sent a commission to Europe to study consumer co-operatives. I said at that time that the commission was likely to find itself unable to reach an agreement concerning a report to the President on the consumer co-operatives and that in the event they were able to reach an agreement, the publication of their findings would be delayed until after the election.

The commission has returned to this country and has gone through its labor pains to the end that there are six different views, an opinion by each of the six different commissioners concerning the value or lack of it that consumer co-operatives have.

But it is important to know developments concerning this commission because it appears that by engaging in an investigation of the consumer co-operatives, the President has awakened a number of different interests in our own country to the fact that there are some kinds of co-operatives which are not helpful. The fuss stirred up by failure of the six commissioners to reach an agreement makes it seem unlikely that there will be any unanimity of opinion in congress if and when Mr. Roosevelt attempts to gain action in a legislative way to encourage creation of these co-operatives. In other words, if a move is made in congress, or if the Chief Executive attempts to force congress to enact legislation favorable to consumer co-operatives, we are likely to see a vigorous legislative battle. Personally, I hope that happens. Unless that end materializes, there is every likelihood that the average person who has not access to full information will be inclined to favor consumer co-operatives, without realizing he is lending his influence, whatever it may be, to fostering institutions that in the end are certain to cause heartaches and financial losses.

I am in a position to say that the one thing upon which the President's commissioners were able to agree was that consumer co-operatives in Europe constitute the focal point for radicalism. Not a single consumer co-operative was found, I am told, that was not controlled, managed or inspired by radicals of one breed or another, mainly, communists. These hotbeds of radicalism constitute "pressure groups" that have been able to impress governments in the various countries of an ability and an influence that do not actually exist with them. That is to say, these groups, like minority groups everywhere, are cohesively organized and they are vocal, in addition. The result is they have been able to force upon peoples in many countries restrictions over private and independent initiative, or to gain for themselves exemptions and privileges not accorded to others. The result is an obvious alignment of peoples into fresh factions, the tendencies of which are dangerous.

Tugwell's Activities

It may be news to many persons that we have consumer co-operatives in this country and that these agencies or units already are being fostered by the United States government. I refer to the activities of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell, who has installed in the resettlement colonies various and sundry consumer co-operatives. It may be news as well to many to learn that Mr. Tugwell has spent almost two million dollars in financing these co-operatives to get them started. And the third bit of news respecting this circumstance is that a book written by James Peter Warbasse is being used as a guide for the creation of these consumer co-operatives in federal resettlement projects.

Now, the name of James Peter Warbasse may not seem important. Many persons have written books, but there are not many volumes extant in the United States that advocate changes in the form of our government. Yet, there are propositions in the volume to which I have referred which do just that and these books, as I have said, are serving more or less as a guide for the people whom Professor Tugwell has "resettled."

With this brief presentation of the facts, it seems to me it does not take much imagination to see the basis upon which the promoters of the consumer co-operatives are building their structure in this country. Taking these facts into consideration with the information brought back by those who made the study for Mr. Roosevelt, it is made to appear at least that a foreign link is somehow or other being forged, and that link, I believe, is designed as a fundamental unit in the general radical program to change the form of our government as well as the form of our national life. I can arrive at no other conclusion.

Another Phase

There is still another phase of this general proposition of consumer co-operatives that ought to be of interest to every producer in this country. Let us assume, for example, that they were perfect in organization and management; that they prospered and expanded in numbers and that they were rendering genuine service to the people. If that condition were to obtain, does it not occur as a natural question that with so much strength, the consumer co-operatives would eventually establish a class alignment between producer and consumer? It seems to me that the natural course of events would lead to this end, and if it did lead to this end I am afraid that because there are more consumers than there are producers, the producers would get the dirty end of the deal. They would be short-changed because they would be outnumbered.

This phase seems the more important because the food stores, food fields generally, are the sectors in which these consumer co-operatives operate best. As a matter of fact, the food field is the most fertile field for experiments anyway and here is quite apparently another experiment that has fastened, or is fastening itself as a parasite upon the agricultural industry of this country.

I know there has been some argument that the consumer co-operatives are the answer to the effort to destroy chain stores. That is not so. Chain stores in foreign countries have licked the co-operatives. They have virtually destroyed them where the co-operatives attempted to drive the chain stores out of business. It becomes important then to recognize that while the United States has many chain stores, it has not now and never will have as many chain stores as it has independents.

Again, here is a threat to independent business men, particularly to the small shop owner, whether he be in a large city or in the thousands of small towns and villages where the owners of such stores are important to their communities and pillars of strength in our national society. If the consumer co-operatives get going, I predict a further decline in the number of independent merchandise houses throughout the United States. For that reason, if for none of the others that I have outlined, it does seem important that the consumer co-operatives move in this country should be stopped in its tracks and that those responsible in an official way for encouraging this sort of thing should be shorn of power.

Then There's Beer

It may seem a far cry from the farm field to the price of beer as a working man finds it, but there is a direct connection and recent developments again demonstrate the fact that our whole economic structure is quite closely related. There is an increase coming in the price of beer. Either the working man and others who like beer are going to pay more for it, or else they will get a smaller glass. The answer is that ingredients entering into the production of beer have increased in price to such an extent that, according to official figures, the brewers are now paying about $1.50 more for the things that enter into the production of one barrel of beer than they did when the sale of beer again was legalized.

This circumstance is significant for the reason that it shows conclusively how tampering with the currency upsets the general balance within our economic structure and results sometimes in displacement of markets and sometimes in diminution of sales. In the case of beer it probably will resul in a displacement of markets, rather than any decline in the amount of beer consumed, despite the fact that the ultimate consumer will be paying more.

This condition is of interest to agriculture generally because it has always been contended by the proponents of open sale of beer and whiskey that a substantial new outlet for farm crops was made available by the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Rather, it was a restoration of an old outlet that existed before the Eighteenth amendment was adopted. But there has been a combination of circumstances, largely the result of governmental messing, that has mitigated against the farmers obtaining full benefit from repeal. These may be enumerated as follows: Devaluation of the dollar, crop restriction under the Agricultural Adjustment act, higher taxes, and a tendency on the part of the Roosevelt administration to increase imports from abroad.

In the case of the devaluation of the currency, the main purpose, as announced by the Roosevelt administration, was to increase prices. It has had that effect and has made the brewers pay more for the hops they must import from abroad and they must import hops because our own production is insufficient.

Science Works Two Ways

Even in this day of flaming youth, mature age still has its usefulness.

Arthur Brisbane

The average age of our Supreme Court justices is seventy - one years. Twenty-six years ago Chief Justice Hughes took his seat on the Supreme Court bench. President Taft rendered public service by appointing him to succeed Justice Brewer.

He left the bench to run for President against Woodrow Wilson, and would doubtless have been elected had he not gone to California. Had he been elected he would have remained in the United States and probably would have saved the country ten thousand million dollars that Woodrow Wilson shoveled out in his ecstacy of self-approval.

Rioting in London's "Mile End Road," in which the faces of men and women were slashed with razor blades and one man was thrown through a shop window, etc., seems rather "un-English," to put it mildly. Fist fighting has been encouraged by distinguished Englishmen, including judges, on the ground that it is "better than using knives."

It is better, doubtless, but what about the razor blades?

Germany honors its youngest grandfather, Herman Jahnke, farm laborer, thirty-six years old. Married at seventeen, his eldest daughter became a mother at seventeen.

If all you want is children, that record is satisfactory, although any mouse family could beat it by 25,000 per cent, and almost any microbe by a billion per cent.

If good children were desired, it would have been better for Mr. Jahnke to have his first child at 36, and his first grandchild at 60 or 70; at least that was Plato's opinion.

Justice uses science—the electric chair, the lethal chamber—to punish criminals. The criminal uses science to carry on his trade. An SOS signal, purporting to come from a yacht in distress, drew the coast guard away from the coast of Hawaii, making it convenient for smugglers of narcotics to bring in their cargo. Tear gas, comparatively modern, was used to empty a New York theater where there was labor trouble.

Japan, until recently convinced, mistakenly, that this country is her enemy, and for excellent reasons keeping close watch on Russia and her anti-Japanese Vladivostok airplane and submarine base, now turns suspicious attention on dear old John Bull.

Britain is supposed to have asked nine nations to protest against Japan's demands on China. That should not worry Japan too much. The same old John Bull got fifty-one nations to protest Mussolini's attack on Ethiopia; but, paying no attention, the able Italian went ahead swallowing Ethiopia; sending the little Haile Selassie to live in Switzerland.

In his villa at San Remo, the Duke of Borea D'Olmo celebrates his one hundred and sixth birthday in excellent health. He has been active in Italian court circles since 1841, before the beginning of the United States -Mexican war.

Mussolini tells 200 farmers and industrialists to prepare for a "decisive conflict" that will be necessary "to preserve order against anarchy."

Those that favor the "present civilization," he said, will have to preserve it. "We are at the dawn of a decisive conflict between the representatives of order and anarchy."

Dr. Irving Langmuir, brilliant Nobel prize winner, announced a "counterpart of life," produced chemically; interesting, probably not important. Until some professor can produce "some counterpart of life" able to think, manufacture telescopes, explore the universe and run for office, man's domination will not be threatened. A cigar store Indian is a "counterpart," but not an Indian.

European nations are preparing to recognize the Spanish rebels when they take Madrid and set up a national government.

The idea is to take prompt action and forestall the victorious insurgents' giving Spanish territory to Italy or Germany; the Balearic islands to Italy for instance, to use as naval and air bases, with Ceuta for Germany. This would upset the balance of power in the western Mediteranean and disturb old England, with Egypt and the Suez Canal on her mind.

What It Is All About

When from the human heart the cry goes up "What is it all about?" it is no true answer to look only at that part of experience which comes to us through certain sensory organs, and reply: "It is about atoms and chaos; it is about the universe of fiery globes moving on to impending gloom; it is about non-computative algebra," but rather it is about a spirit in which truth has its shrine, with potentialities of self-fulfilments in its response to beauty and right.—A. TO regain lost weight is a simple matter when certain bodily functions are restored to normal. Of foremost importance is the stimulation of digestive juices in the stomach to make better use of the food you eat...and restoration of lowered red-blood-cells to turn the digested food into firm flesh. S.S.S. Tonic does just this.

Forget about underweight worries if you are deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood-cells...just take S.S.S. Tonic immediately before each meal. Shortly you will be delighted with the way you will feel... your friends will compliment you on the way you will look.

S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build sturdy health...its remarkable value is time tried and scientifically proven...that's why it makes you feel like yourself again. Available at any drug store. © S.S.S. Co.

"Yes, you can, damn you, and you will. Let me put that bandage back where it belongs—and you keep it there. Don't talk about eyesight unless you want it back. Where the hell do I come in? What am I getting out of this?" It was a battle between two strong wills, and it was long in the waging. But when Carpy, wiping the sweat from his forehead and, himself almost unstrung, left Denison's side, his patient had ridden out the storm and had promised quiet till the two could think of what might be done, pledging in the interval mutual and absolute secrecy.

Secrecy, however well pledged, grows more difficult to control in proportion to the number of persons pledged.

Carpy swore Sawdy and Lefever to it very easily. McAlpin and Ben Page were warned that if the story leaked out, it might become unpleasant for both. As for Bob Scott, no one was ever known to worm a secret out of him; Barney, of course, dared not talk.

Yet it will easily be understood that too many people had the story; and only the continual efforts of Dr. Carpy in silencing, through threats of what might happen to them, one or another of the conspirators kept it under cover.

Jane, after the usual storm with her father, who knew what she was doing, rode next morning into town to make her visit to the hospital.

Denison was a poor actor. In his endeavor to make Jane feel there had been nothing to upset him, he was over solicitous. Carpy did better; but he was compelled to admit that Denison had not been doing quite so well—since Jane could see that for herself.

Her father continued taciturn and aloof. Jane knew she was defying him by continuing to visit Denison, yet being of much the same tenacious will as her father himself, she reckoned little of it.

But her visits and ministrations to the injured neighbor of Gunlock Ranch became so frequent, and she herself was so wholly indifferent to comment, that the situation became food for local gossip. Here was Van Tambel a deadly enemy of Denison's, with his daughter openly showing a very special interest in Denison's condition at the hospital—carrying to him delicacies and spending with him half her time in town.

Things were at this pass when one day Van Tambel told his daughter he must go to Medicine Bend on some bank business. Jane knew that he was not able to make the trip—Carpy had told her more than once that the old man's life hung by a thread. She pleaded with her father, found out what the business was, and offered to go in his stead.

She took the morning train for Medicine Bend, secured the further time on his notes at the bank, spent the night at the Mountain House, and took the afternoon train west for Sleepy Cat.

The Pullman cars were crowded. Jane was forced to find a seat in a day coach. Here she placed her handbag in the seat beside her, bought a magazine, and resigned herself to a long afternoon and evening.

Two men had taken the seat directly behind her. Jane resumed her reading until in the conversation between the two men her attention was attracted by catching the name of Bill Denison.

Her curiosity once aroused, it was easy to follow the drift of their talk. Presently she heard mention of her father's name. Aroused now to keen interest, Jane was torn between the feeling that she ought not to listen and the impulse that she must.

"Of course, nobody can prove it," were the words she heard. "I didn't say they could. That old bird knows too well how to cover his tracks. But everybody knows how he deviled Denison's brother when he lived there—tried to buy him out, then scare him out, and then smoke him out. The old devil has been crazy ever since he owned Gunlock to get hold of that little Spring Ranch. Why? Account of the water. It's the biggest spring in the hills. Now that he's back from the hospital, the first thing he thinks of is to get hold of that spring."

Jane listened with bated breath.

"Why, it's common talk in Sleepy Cat," the narrator went on, "that he paid Barney Rebstock to set Bill's ranch house afire and came damned near burning Bill up in it."

Her heart stopped beating as she heard the dreadful recital, delivered as calmly as the merest bit of current gossip would be discussed on a street corner.

"According to what I hear," continued the narrator, "Sawdy and some of Bill's friends choked the story out of Barney. Sawdy got cut up in the fracas with him—Sawdy was laid up in the hospital for a month. Barney's a mean devil with a knife."

The train was pulling into Sleepy Cat. Jane, rousing herself from a stupor, her breath choking her, her heart ready to burst with every beat, staggered to her feet, dazed, and supporting herself along the aisle with her hands alternately on the backs of the seats, stepped blindly down to the platform.

Bull Page, who was in with the team and buckboard to take her home, reached for her handbag. "No, Bull," Jane said quietly. "I'm not going out tonight."

"Not going out?"

"I'm staying in town."

"Stayin' in town?" stammered Bull, vastly surprised.

"Drive me to the hotel," Jane said wearily. "I'll take a room there. You drive home and come back for me tomorrow afternoon."

It was ten o'clock. Assigned to a room, Jane freshened herself after the long, dusty car ride, bathed her face and temples again and again in cold water, and tried to collect her throbbing thoughts.

It all seemed like a hideous dream. Surely it could be shaken off; surely men could not be so fiendish as to plot fire and so horrible a death as would follow to sleeping men.

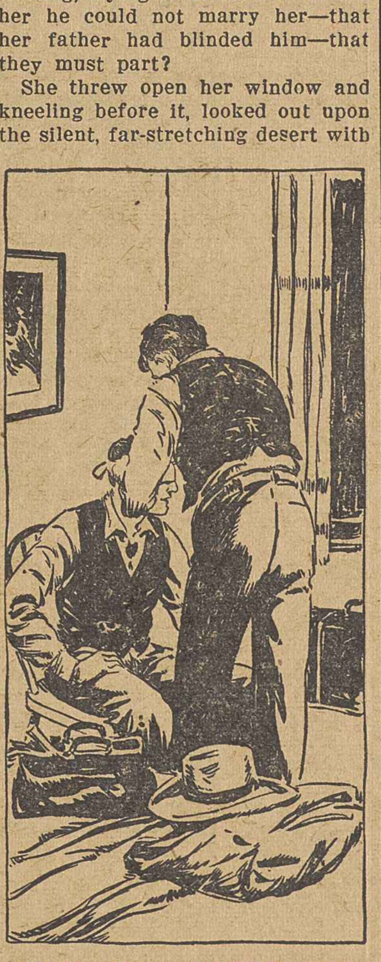
Her father! She shuddered. This thought was most horrible of all—incredible—and yet . .

Of one thing she felt certain: if it were true, she could no longer live under the same roof with him, and the terrifying duty of learning the revolting truth from his own lips confronted her.

And her lover—Bill, blinded Bill—what now of him? Could she ever face him again? What would he say? What would he do?

He knew the truth. No doubt remained in her mind on that point. No need now to ask why he seemed worried and changed. Was he only waiting, trying to decide how to tell her he could not marry her—that her father had blinded him—that they must part?

She threw open her window and kneeling before it, looked out upon the silent, far-stretching desert with its myriad of heavenly lights. The cool air cleared her head. But what could loosen the deadly grief and shame that clutched at her pounding heart?



"Let Me Put That Bandage Back Where It Belongs."

When Dr. Carpy walked into his office from the dining room after breakfast next morning, he saw Jane Van Tambel standing before the window, looking out.

"Why, Jane!" he exclaimed. "What brings you here so early?"

She looked around at him in silence. The doctor walked over to her and laid his hands on her shoulders. "Jane," he asked, "what has happened, girl?"

The grief in her sunken eyes was too apparent.

"Oh, doctor!" The exclamation came like a burst of suffering long pent. "I know everything."

He saw the fat was flatly in the fire. Indeed he had long had only a faint hope of keeping the facts from Jane. His real hope had been that she might not hear the truth till he could save Denison's eyes and thus cushion the horrid shock that the facts must bring to an innocent sufferer.

Dr. Carpy rose, walked around to the other side, lifted her head and, standing beside her, supported it in his arms. "Jane," he said slowly, looking down into her pitiful eyes, "from what you tell me, I see that you have heard loose stories floating around."

"You, too, have heard them, Doctor. Why, oh, why didn't you tell me?"

"Jane!" exclaimed the doctor, driven from his last stronghold of reserve by the poignancy of her grief. "How the hell could I tell you a story involving those it did in such an affair? Actually, nobody knows just what the facts are. Now we must get started right. First you tell me all you heard. Then I'll tell you all I've heard—is that fair?"

Carpy had bowed his head.

"Well," he commented as she looked soberly up, "that's not far from what I've been told myself. But, Jane, I'm not a bit sure we have the facts in these stories. They all depend on the word of one of the worst characters in this country. Barney Rebstock wouldn't hesitate at anything low down in the whole range of crime—anybody in town will tell you that. He's not only an ex-convict but the biggest liar in this whole country."

"Doctor," she said solemnly, "does Bill know all that you and I know?"

"Jane," he answered in like, "Bill knows all that you and I know."

"Oh, I knew it. I knew it. To think that poor I should have brought this horror into his life!"

"Jane, that's not so. This might all have happened if you never had seen this country."

"I want you to do one last favor for me, Doctor. Will you?" asked Jane.

"What is it, Jane?"

"I want you to say to Bill that I freely release him from his promise of marriage; that I beg him to forgive me all I have innocently caused him to suffer—and that I will leave here forever—"

"Jane!" exclaimed her listener.

"Go on!" he snapped, bluntly.

"My father has made me his heir to Gunlock ranch; he has no other heir. This morning I will make my will and bequeath whatever I inherit from my father to William Denison, to atone as far as I can for the wrongs my father has done him."

"Well?" remarked Carpy coldly.

"That is all."

"And that is what you want me to tell Bill?"

"That, Doctor, is what I want Bill to know. Oh, if I had another to do it for me, dear Doctor, I wouldn't put it on you."

Carpy rose to his feet.

"Jane, you're sending me on a fool's errand. But seeing I'm nothing but an old fool, I expect I'm just the man for the job. I can tell you now what he'll say as well as if I'd seen him and given him your message. But I know, of course, that wouldn't satisfy you. So I'll go—and go now.

"Now promise," he repeated, in parting, "you will stay right here in this office till I get back."

But she was ill prepared for what she saw when the office door was opened half an hour later and Dr. Carpy pushed Denison ahead of him into the office. Bill's eyes were bandaged. He groped a little with his hands, while the doctor guided him to a chair.

She had not an instant to wait. No sooner did Denison feel himself seated in a chair than he held out his arms and said, apparently not with deep feeling, not with pained emotion, but in the most commonplace, every-day, matter-of-fact manner: "Where's my girl? Come here!"

The old doctor watched Jane run timidly to Denison's side. "Bill!" she exclaimed brokenly. "Here I am!"

"What's all this talk I hear about your quitting me, Jane?" he asked unsteadily.

"Bill, I thought you ought at least to have a—"

"Well, I've had my chance, haven't I? And this is my answer. Till death us do part! Nothing less, nothing else goes! Is that plain, girlie? I gave you a chance the other day to quit me—what was your answer?"

CHAPTER XII

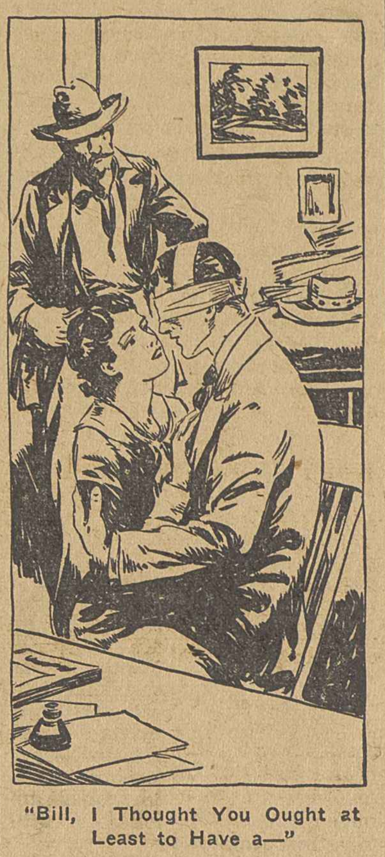
JANE did not go home that afternoon. She sent Bull and the buckboard back with instructions not to come in for her until she sent word. She wrote a brief note to her father, merely saying that she had attended to his business and would be home in a few days. Van Tambel, in an impatient rage, sent Bull back with an order to Jane to come home at once.

The harsh message made less impression on his daughter than he had intended; but it did bring back the answer that she would be out soon.

When the buckboard next day drew up at the ranchhouse door. Jane alighted with a fast-beating heart.

Fortunately, when she got home, her father was out in the hills. Her welcome came from Quong; it sort of broke the ice of the home-coming. But she went to her room, got out her two old suitcases, dusted them off, laid them on her bed and, stripping the hooks of her closet and opening the drawers of her dresser, began almost furiously to pack.

While she was at this, she heard the heavy uneven steps of her father in the living room, and the next minute his huge bulk darkened the open doorway of her bedroom.



"Bill, I Thought You Ought at Least to Have a—"

"Hello!" he snapped.

She turned. "Hello, Father," she responded simply.

"What are you doing?"

"Packing."

"What f'r?"

"Preparing to go into town."

"What you goin' in town agin f'r?"

"I've got a job in town, and I'm going there to work at it."

"What kind of a job?" he snorted.

"I'm going to study nursing at the hospital."

"What the hell you goin' to do that f'r?"

"Because things have been done from here that make this place hateful to me. I couldn't stand it here any longer."

"What things you talkin' about?'

She looked at him steadily. "I'm talking about burning Bill Denison's ranch house."

"What's that got to do with your quitting home?"

"Everything. Everybody's talking about that fire. Barney Rebstock has told that you paid him for setting fire to a neighbor's ranch house with men sleeping in it."

"Why, that fellow's the worst —— liar in Sleepy Cat. Nobody believes anything he says."

"I can tell you everybody believes it," she said, trembling.

"Do you believe it?"

"Father, I am forced to unless you can convince me you had nothing to do with it. This wretch has had a pocketful of money."

Van Tambel regarded her with perfect poise. "Why, I did give him a little money. I'll say I've been sorry for him. I know he hates Bill Denison—a good many folks in this country's got no use for that—"

"Stop!" cried Jane. "Don't say anything against Bill Denison. He saved my life!"

"—that damned, dirty, ornery rustler and thief—"

Jane's eyes blazed. She stamped her foot. "Don't you dare!" she cried. "What you're saying about him is what every one in this country says about you."

"Yes? There's some damned mean people in this country," thundered her father. "Just look out for yourself, my lady. I don't know any more about that fire than you do. If Barney Rebstock wanted to get even with Denison, that's his business, not mine. You shut your trap."

"That's not all."

"More lies, eh?"

"McCrossen has told in town that you once tried to get him to set the house on fire and he refused to do it."

"He lies! He did do it! I gave him five hundred dollars to do it. He agreed to do it and took the money to do it. If he hired Barney Rebstock to start the fire that's his lookout! I left you here to watch things, and McCrossen has been running off my steers ever since I went to the hospital. He knows I know it. He knows I'm going to get after him. And I will," he shouted with a frightful oath. "Now look here! I'll tell you where you get off. You're not going a step to town! I know your scheme; you're going to live with that man Denison—"

"Father!"

Nations Seek Monopolies

The enterprising and commercial nations of the world know there is far more money to be made securing and establishing for themselves a monopoly in the undeveloped regions of the earth than in peaceful and competitive commerce with each other.

Puttering Around the House—

Time-Wasting Work of Putting Away Things Others Have Used

WHEN a family is orderly, no one has to do much puttering about. When the members are not particular where they put their things, it becomes the undesirable duty of some person to spend much time in just this very thing, puttering. Hours are wasted daily in such trivialities as gathering up newspapers spread about, picking up and putting away gloves, hats, scissors, thimbles, pencils, etc. Whatever it may be that has been in use, and not put away by the user, or has been put in the wrong place, must be placed where it belongs or the house would reflect poor housekeeping.

Nondescript Tasks.

The time given to these nondescript jobs should be given by those who leave the work to others. Putting things away is part of the job connected with using the things, just as much as getting the things out, is part of it. The work is regular and legitimate and only becomes an annoyance when left for the wrong person to do.

No person wants her time frittered away doing the left-over jobs of others. Nobody enjoys having a person puttering around, either. It is distracting to attention, and disturbing to the nerves. From both the angle of the person who putters about and those who have to endure the annoyance of such activity, there should be some remedy found.

Remedies Suggested.

Mothers can teach their children to put their playthings away when through with them. This is the first step to take. Then she can instruct the little folk to put their outside things away when they come in from outdoors. Children can get into the habit of orderliness by being made to realize that what they don't do, has to be done by mother who is very busy and often too tired to do the extra tasks. Affection will gain the day.

Breaking the Habit.

Adults should consider how to break themselves of the reprehensible habit of leaving work they should do, to be completed by others. If they really determine to stop this bothersome fault, they will decrease the necessity of puttering about by the person who heartily dislikes the work, but who, for the sake of order prefers to do it rather than have disorder around.

Rules for Hearing, Believing, and Doing

The longer I live the more I feel the importance of adhering to the rules which I have laid down for myself in such matters: 1, To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others. 2, To believe nothing of the kind till I am absolutely forced to. 3, Never to drink in the spirit of one who circulates an ill report. 4, Always to moderate, as far as I can, the unkindness which is expressed towards others. 5, Always to believe that, if the other side were heard, a very different account would be given of the matter.

BUSINESS CO-OPERATION

The farm cooperative movement has grown steadily. More farmers belong to co-ops than ever before, and the co-ops are continually doing more in behalf of their members.

Yet the percentage of failures among cooperatives has been relatively high. A great many of them have been born, have lived a brief life and have died—because their members didn't realize that sound, hard-headed business principles are as necessary to the success of a cooperative as to any other business organization.

Some co-ops have strayed into alien fields of endeavor, and have attempted to couple foreign activities with their real urpose of selling their members' produce. The upshot has usually been failure. Other cooperatives have been managed by theorists and not practical business men—again failure has followed.

The cooperatives that have survived and grown in size and prestige and usefulness, have never lost sight of business principles. They have struck to their primary purpose of bettering production and distribution methods for their members.

OVER-CONFIDENCE THE MOTORIST'S SIN

If a 1925 model car and a recent model were to start out on a drive, which would you think most likely to become involved in an accident?

Probably you will answer, "The old car, with out-moded brakes relatively inefficient steering and general inferiority."

You're wrong. According to the National Safety Council, 24.79 per cent of the cars now in service were built from 1925 to 1928, inclusive, and they are involved in less than 12 per cent of all accidents reported.

Only 15 per cent of the cars in service were built in 1935—yet these cars figured in almost 24 per cent of all accidents.

This apparent anomaly has an obvious explanation. Drivers of new cars are over-confident. They over-rate the safety factor of better brakes, bodies, steering, lights, etc. Because a car is in A-1 mechanical shape, and is more or less new, they take chances—until the tragic day of reckoning arrives.

This is not a boost for old cars—many of which should be barred from the highways, because of mechanical dangers caused by obsolescence and neglect—but it is a plea for a different attitude on the part of owners of our modern gasoline chariots. It is a sad commentary on these drivers that better cars mean a higher accident record.

Regard your car, new or old, as a potentially lethal machine. It can spread death and destruction when mismanaged. Don't commit the great driving sin of over-confidence—its end is likely to be the cemetery.

THOMAS MARION COLLIER

On the 15th day of October, 1936, at his home near Shelby Springs, Shelby County, Alabama Thomas Marion Collier died, and was buried the following day in the family cemetery near his home.

Mr. Collier moved to Shelby from Clay County, Alabama, when he was only 14 years old, and was known as one of the best citizens of that community. Early in life he was converted and joined the Corinth Methodist Church, and lived near Shelby Springs for nearly 73 years.

As a farmer he was succeessful; as a citizen he was loyal; as a neighbor he was appreciated; and as a father he was loved by his splendid family.

Among his last words on his death bed was the prayer: O, God, let me rest until I meet Thee; and Merciful Lord, I will soon be with Thee. And to his family he said: "Don't worry about me any more. I will soon be at rest."

Mr. Collier's favorite church song was "Amazing Grace, how sweet the song, That saved a wretch like me. How precious did that grace appear, The hour I first believed."

Such Christian characters as Thomas Collier, with a living faith in God, are the beedrock foundation of our Christian citizenship and hope of eternal life.

The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. John A. May, evangelist, on the Resurrection of the Dead, God's plan to raise the body from the grave. The singing was led, the prayer prayed, and a talk made by Rev. Cox, a Baptist minister.—John A. May.

State Capitol News

Montgomery — The fact that speaking campaigns are being conducted in a few of the doubtful counties in Alabama does not mean that any doubt exists that Alabama is overwhelmingly for Roosevelt and Garner according to Judge Jas. S. Parrish, of Montgomery, chairman of he Speaker's Bureau of the Democratic campaign in Alabama. He is frequently mentioned as a candidate for lieutenant governor in the next election.

Judge Parrish points out that four or five counties in Alabama frequently elect Republican local officials, and that in this election a few races for purely local officers are the only sources of Republican opposition deserving attention.

Calling attention to the straw ballots compiled by thel nstitute of Public Opinion which he considers the comprehensive and impartial for the several pre-election ballot forecasts, Judge Parrish said that during the past two weeks the Institute's poll indicated an increase in Roosevelt's probable electoral vote ftom 294 to 306, far in excess of the number requiret for re-election. The presitent's popular vote was shown to have jumped from 52.6 per cent to 53.6 per ient during the same period.

Pointing out that the Republicans lay great stress upon the Literary Digest straw ballot, Judge Parrish declared: "They make the claim that this poll has been uncannily accurate in past campaigns, but they do not tell you that never has the Literary Digest compiled a nation-wide ballot in a close election.

"In 1916," he added, "the first ever compiled by this publication, the ballot included only five states. They do not tell you that anyone with any knowledge of affairs whatever could have accurately predicted the result of the last four presidential elections, unless the person was a hopelessly blind partisan.

The Digest ballots, he explained, are sent only to owners of automobiles and persons whose names are listed in telephone directories, though more than half of the country's voters do not own automobiles and two-thirds are not listed in telephone directories.

"If we are to argue for the re-election of Roosevelt and a continuance of Democratic policies and principles," he continued, nothing more need be said or done than to secure a copy of the local newspapers in any city or town in the country dated along in February and March of 1933, and read the headlines of business disasters, closing of banks, moratoriums, breadlines, poverty, despair and suicide. Then take a look at today's issues of these same papers, whether you are Democrat or Republican, and read the headlines telling of the rising prices, returning employment, business profits, record sales, booming industry, and last but by no means least, the farmer's return to prosperity."

The annual rally of the Alabama State League of Young Democrats will be held here Friday, October 23, instead of in Birmingham, as previously scheduled, according to John P. Kohn, league president.

Senator elect, Claude Pepper,, of Florida, a native of Camp Hill, Alabama, and Judge Leon McCord, Democratic national committeeman from Alabama, will be principal speakers at a dinner and "Roosevelt victory."

Mrs. Cora McAdory, of Auburn, was elected president of the Alabama W. C. T. U. at the close of the annual convention here last week, during which members rededicated resolutions against gambling advocating more astrigent laws "in order that officials will not be handicapped in their efforts to stop gambling devices."

An outstanding feature of the convention which was attended by 115 delegates from all sections of the State, was the formation of the Federation of Local Youth's Temperance Councils into a State-wide organization, with Miss Elaine Mason, of Florence, as president.

Other State officers of the W. C. T. U. elected for the coming year are: Mrs. J. O. Bowling, Birmingham, vice-president; Mrs. Mabel Vitu Divelbliss, Birmingham, corresponding secretary; Mrs. R. H. Sisson, Mobile, recording secretary, and Mrs. Ray Jewell, Birmingham, treasurer.

Birmingham—The gigantic industrial expansion program from Birmingham, announced last week by William A. Irvin, president of the U. S. Steel corporation, estimated to cost approximately $29,000,000, is the largest single development projected in Alabama during the past two decades, according to leading industrialists here.

Though the staggering sum of $29,000,000 will be spent in constructing new production plants, including a tin plate mill, it will mean a great deal more in the operation than in the building, said General John C. Persons, president of the First National Bank, of Birmingham.

"I think it is the greatest thing that has happened to Birmingham in 25 years," says H. A. Berg, president of the Woodward Iron Company. 'It should attract industries not allied to iron and steel as well as those which would naturally come here because of the new materials which will be available."

Business leaders here expressed the belief that the selection of the Birmingham district for the steel corperation's expansion program was largely due to the $6,000,000 industrial water system now under construction for which Federal funds were obtained by Governor Bibb Graves.

The Governor worked unceasingly over a period of several months, making numerous trips to Washington, before final approval of the project was secured. He continued to press his bid for allocation of PWA funds for this purpose after it had been formally rejected by Comptroller General McCarl.

From Kentucky, where he is delivering a series of campaign speeches for President Roosevelt, Governor Graves telegraphed J. L. Perry, president of the T. C. I. Company subsidiary U. S. Steel corporation: "Please extend Alabama's heartiest greetings to her distinguished visitors, Messrs. Irvin and Taylor and their associates. Our State welcomes them and their great company. Assure them we will cooperate with and help them in making Alabama's great district their company's great district. Let's together make Bimingham the battle groud on which to win the war for America's industrial supremacy of this world."

The additional production facilities, upon which construction will start immediately, will be completed in 1938, it was learned. It will add 2,500 men to the 17,000 now employed by the TCI company in the Birmingham district.

Montgomery—Judge Charles B. Kennamer, of U. S. District Court here granted the request of Attorney General A. A. Carmichael, for postponement until October 29, for the test suit of the Southern Coal and Coke Company, attacking the validity of the Federal and State unemployment compensation laws.

The case will be heard by a three-Judge Federal Court, and Judge Kennamer said he would announce the names of the two other judges within a few days.

A number of similar cases filed in Montgomery Circuit Court will be held in abeyance pending the outcome of the case in Federal Court.

Malcolm Harper and J. L. Kaufman, executive director and commissioner, respectively, of the Ala- Unemployment Compensation Commission, left early this week for Madison, Wisconsin, where they will attend a three-day conference of unemployment compensation officials of other States. They will study the model set-up in Wisconsin and discuss various phases of the Federal Social Security program, it was learned.

Montgomery—The State Highway Department announced low bidders on seven construction projects to cost $544,646 and predicted work would start within 30 days on all of the projects.

The projects, consisting of paving, grading, drainage and roadside imrovements and bridge construction are located in Marion, Dallas, Mobile, Barbour, Lee and Russel counties.

CHAPTER VII

6. Your TVA-inspired association will start in business with a mortgage of many thousands of dollars saddled on its back. Suppose the business does not turn out as rosily as TVA promises and the surcharges its members will have to pay are not enough to meet the interest and principal payments of the government or TVA mortgage, won't you and the other members have to pay increased charges and rates? (The TVA contract says you must.)

7. TVA requires that members commit themselves to use 662 kilowatt hours per mile a month. Suppose some of the members do not use and PAY FOR their share of these 662 kilowatt hours? Won't YOU have to use and pay for the difference so the association will have enough money to operate on?

8. There is nothing in the TVA twenty-year contract which will prohibit it from raising the rates or requiring your association to raise the rates at any time during that period. On the contrary, TVA contracts have contained this requirement:

> "If it should appear that the rates provided for in said schedule with the surcharges provided for therein do not under economical and efficient management by association produce revenues sufficient to maintain the system on a self-supporting and financially sound basis, then upon application by ASSOCIATION, AUTHORITY shall consent to such changes in rates as will provide for increased revenue as will place the system upon a self-supporting and financially sound basis when operated under economical and efficient management."

Suppose that your association's rates become higher than the low Alabama Power Company electric rates? What can you do about getting out from under that long twenty-year TVA contract with which your association will be saddled? The Legislature of Alabama has decreed that the Public Service Commission shall have no authority to regulate it.

9. If the TVA co-operative proposition is so good, why do its promoters demand a twenty-year contract? Why not a year to year contract such as Alabama Power Company offers, or a five-year contract at the most?

10. If your association loads itself up with this mortgage of many thousands of dollars and should find itself unable to make a go of the electric light and power business, and thus unable to make the payments, don't you believe Uncle Sam is going to take some steps to enforce payment? (His Home Owners' Loan Corporation has already foreclosed on many homes with government loans on them.)

CHAPTER VIII

Careful Farmers Won't Want to Take These Chances—They Have to Take Chances Enough With the Weather

ASSUMING you are considering membership in one of the TVA associations, you may want to also consider these things:

11. If at some future date a difference of opinion develops between your association or co-operative and the TVA, to whom will you appeal? The TVA will not admit that the State of Alabama has any jurisdiction over it and you can't sue the TVA without its consent. Alabama Power Company is subservient to both Federal and State laws and must also conduct its business in accordance with rules and regulations established by the Alabama Public Service Commission.

12. Do you know that the TVA may cancel the 20-year contract it will impose on your association at any time it chooses under certain conditions, but that your association cannot cancel it?

13. The TVA contracts have specified that co-operative association books be audited by TVA. Will this auditing be done according to the TVA faulty bookkeeping practices so vigorously criticised by the Comptroller General of the United States?

14. Suppose the co-operative associations fails, would you want your name connected with anything that "went bust" even though your participation in it would not make you liable for anything but your dues?

There are many other things in connection with operating a rural electric line which you, as a prospective shareholder in a TVA-inspired membership association, might overlook in your enthusiasm. Some of them will be presented for your consideration in our next several advertisements.

This advertisement is the fourth of a series which has also been printed in booklet form. T. W. Martin, President of Alabama Power Company, Birmingham, will cheerfully send a copy to any interested person requesting it.

Economic Highlights

Biggest international economic news in many a moon was the announcement that France had finally left the gold standard and devalued the franc, and that England, the United States and France were at last to cooperate in seeking to stabilize currencies.

There are various ways of looking at France's long anticipated move. Critics say that currency devaluation is simply a dubious scheme for making one dollar into two—that it is simply another word for inflation. England started it, five years ago, and was followed by the United States three years ago, when we changed the fixed price of gold from $22 to about $35 an ounce.

However, the great bulk of commentators feel that France's action and the three-power stabilization compact are good things. Even such strong anti-New Dealers as Frank Kent and Mark Sullivan have given the President credit for authorizing the agreement. The reasons for such approval are two fold: It is believed that stabilized international currencies will be a spur to lagging world trade and will better the chance for keeping world peace.

There are three main currency units in the world—the Franc, the pound, and the dollar. Other currencies hinge upon one or the other of these—that is the purchasing power of the lire, the mark and other currencies is dependent upon what happens to the currencies of the three great financial powers, with their tremendous gold reserve.

As a result, if the franc, the pound and the dollar are stabilized so that their purchasing power in relation to each other does not change from time to time, as it has in the past, the purchasing power of other currencies will likewise remain constant.

The effect of this on the world trade situation is obvious. When currencies move up and down in their relations to each other, normal trade is impossible, for the reason that a country cannot carry on import and export business when it doesn't know what a dollar will buy tomorrow in England, or what a franc will buy next week in the United States. All during depression the major currencies have been subjected to great fluctuation—and the upshot is that international trade has stayed at a very low level, while domestic trade in most countries has been expanding and approaching "normal" levels.

The effect of currency stabilization on world peace, in turn, is equally obvious. Cordell Hull once said that economic contentment is the best preventative of war. That is, countries which are enjoying normal and profitable commercial relations with each other are much less disposed to resort to military action than countries which are not. No man willingly cuts the throat of a good customer—and what is true of individuals and industries is largely true of nations.

No one, of course, expects that currency stabilization will immediately boom world trade, and send the nations' merchant marines scuttling back and forth across the ocean under forced draft to make deliveries. But in view of practically all the experts, the move will stimulate trade, which in turn will stimulate domestic business which in turn may cast some rays of peaceful light into the shadow of war.

One dramatic, if relatively unimortant aspect of the agreement was Russia's dumping of a million pounds of sterling on the New York market 24 hours later. Sec. of the Treasury Morgenthau at once purchased this out of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, intimated that Russia was attempting to wreck the three-power compact and make stabilization impossible. Most observers are of the opinion that Mr. Morgenthau exaggerated—they say that Russia certainly knows that a million pounds, which is a little less than $5,000,000, isn't enough to even faintly embarrass the three powers.

Big element, as in the past, is motors. Car builders have their new models all set for the market—some of them may be out by the time this is read. Production schedules, according to Business Week, call for 1,000,000 units during the next quarter.

The employment aspect likewise showed betterment. In manufacturing industries, total employment has at last reached the fall 1930 level, is above a year ago.

Prices continue their up-trend, but slowly. Biggest jump has been in food costs. Manufactured goods have changed little since summer.

As usual, the farmer is in the headlines. Both Roosevelt and Landon have cautiously endorsed crop insurance, both have pledged themselves to aid the farmer in other ways.

Security markets have been fairly steady, and it is not likely that any major developments will take place until after election. Investors and speculators are talking about "Roosevelt stocks" and Landon stocks" and would give a great deal to know who will take the oath of office from the Chief Justice next January.

Yanks Are Tops But Giants Rate Medal for Valor

PLENTY of people will tell you that the world champion Yankees are going to stay on the top of the baseball heap for some years to come—like their predecessors of the Ruthian age. And it looks as though plenty of people are going to be right.

The boys from the Yankee stadium are young and healthy. There's hardly a creak in a carload of them. The only spot where age insurance might be in order for Joe McCarthy is at second base and even the supposedly fading Tony Lazzeri drove in 111 runs during the American league season and had a batting average of .287. In the World Series he handled 30 fielding chances without a bobble. While his series batting average was a pallid .250, he can grin when he remembers that bases-loaded homer.

Joe McCarthy

Only Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey among the other regulars are older than twenty-eight. Dickey is a year under thirty, while Lou tops that age by three years. Of the pitchers, Ruffing and Hadley are thirty-two; Pearson twenty-seven, Gomez twenty-six and Fordham Johnny Murphy whose pitching stopped the Giants in the last game and who should be a 20 game winner in '37 is twenty-eight.

So the Yanks can give Old Man Time a race for his mazuma for a few years at least. Incidentally Marse Joe doesn't have to be ashamed of the trades he made last winter when he decided to strengthen his club. He picked up Jake Powell and Bump Hadley from the Washington club and Monte Pearson from Cleveland. How would the Yanks have looked in the World Series without them?

But on the other hand, the vanquished Giants need a lot of overhauling. Last June owner Stoneham said they wouldn't do. But the rest of the league by being woefully weak made a liar out of him. He can't take a chance with the truth another year, though.

Some so-called prognosticators go so far as to say that in their present condition the Giants will be lucky to finish in the first division next year. That five-run Yankee blast off Fitzsimmons in the final game proved he needs plenty of rest between starts. He'll be thirty-six next year and Hubbel thirty-four. Manager Bill Terry is playing on borrowed time. So is Travis Jackson. Sam Leslie's future is a question. The club will need more secondary pitching and some additional extra base punch somewhere in the lineup.

Bill Terry

While the praise for the World Series is being handed out, though, don't overlook the Giants. They did a magnificent job considering what they had to work with. Colonel Bill Terry battled as desperately for a lost cause as did that ancestor who fought for the Confederacy.

On paper the Giants were woefully outclassed by the Yankees, just as they were supposedly outclassed by two clubs in their own league—the Cubs and Cardinals. But they made a daring start by winning the opening game behind Hubbel's pitching. Then in the next they were treated to a drubbing the like of which has never before been seen in a World Series. Almost any other club would have given up. But what happened? The Giants came up with a swell pitched game by Fred Fitzsimmons and were outlucked in losing. The third game found McCarthy starting his best bet, Monte Pearson.

That left one game to go for the Yanks to sweep the series. Even that didn't stop the Giants. Terry rallied his veterans and behind the lion-hearted pitching of Hal Schumacher, won the fifth game. The Yanks couldn't figure out how they did it. In the sixth and final game, for seven innings the Giants withstood an early display of Yank power, which would have been enough to stop almost any one else cold. They were right in the thick of the argument. In the interests of efficiency, Terry made all the shifts the book called for, but in the pinch the Giants were stopped by Fordham Johnny Murphy.

My Favorite Recipe

By Barbara Stanwyck

Canapes Blanche

1 package cream cheese.
6 strips crisp bacon.
Onion juice.
Paprika.
Cayenne pepper.
Small pearl onions.

Place the cheese in a mixing bowl and mash with a wooden spoon. Crumble the bacon and stir into the cheese. Add onion juice to taste, dash of cayenne pepper and paprika. Spread this paste onto rounds of bread which have been fried in oil to a golden brown, and top each canape off with a small pickled onion.

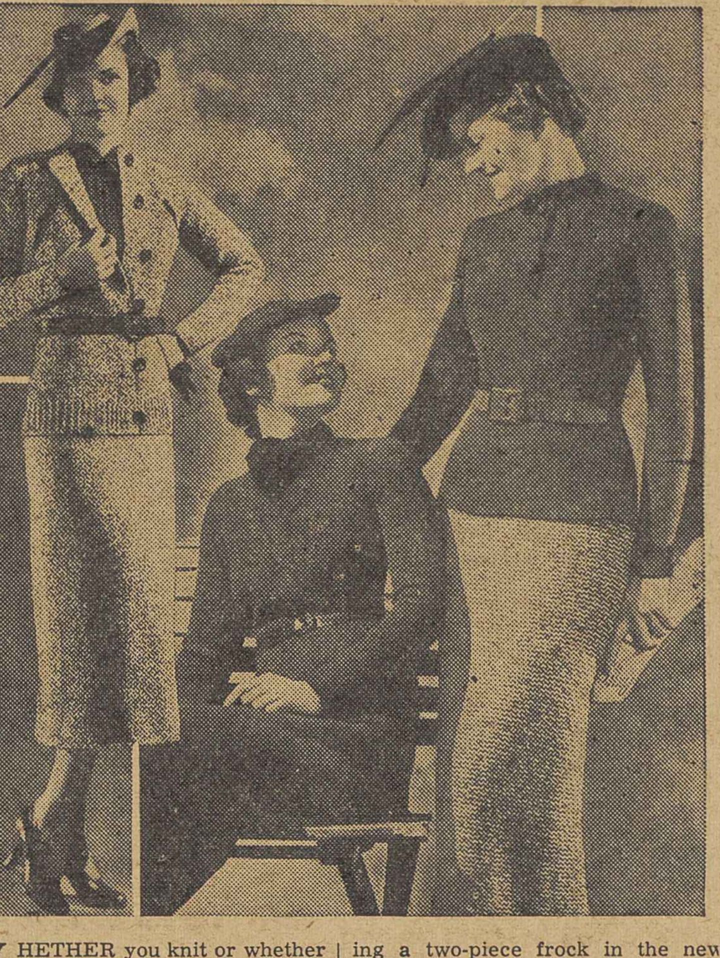
Handknit Effect in Machine Knits

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



WHETHER you knit or whether knitting is not one of your accomplishments the fact remains that, to be "in style," you simply must have a goodly collection of smart knitted clothes in your autumn and winter wardrobe.

No wonder the love of knitted outfits grows upon us, for, put to the test, there's nothing more practical for general wear, for travel, for sports, for week-end visits, no type of apparel that so retains a well-groomed, unwrinkled appearance under every circumstance as do the handsome high-styled knitted costumes that grow handsomer and smarter down to the last detail with every passing moment.

This season's knitted collections bear an especially encouraging message to non-knitters in that the machine knits now showing have taken on a patrician hand-knit look that might baffle even an expert at first glance. One of the outstanding numbers on the fall program is the tweed-knit suit that looks so convincingly hand-knit that unless you tell your friends they will never dream that it is machine done. Just to get an idea of one of these stunning tweedy knit suits we are calling your attention to the model to the left in the group illustrated. Here a multicolored tweed knit wool in handknit effect is trimly fashioned in a three-piece costume. The jacket has two set-in pockets edged in green to match the monotone self-striped blouse, and the leather belt and buttons are also in green. Can you imagine anything more fitting for a colorful autumn day?

One among many of the fascinating things in regard to knitted fashions is that they have taken on clever dressmaker details that measure up perfectly to topnotch styling. For instance there are knit costume suits that have the latest in tunic or swagger coats that are so good looking that out comes your checkbook with orders to deliver without delay. On some of the dresses and suits there are bindings and accents of velvet, of suede, of grosgrain ribbon with unique fastenings, that include zippered novelties, huge metal clips and buttons galore.

Pleated skirt effects in knits are very attractive. In some instances the skirt is widened with godets. And have you heard about the new black sweater craze? As a college fashion the black sweater worn with a bright plaid skirt is scoring a big success although every fashion alert woman is yielding to the urge of these sweaters.

The new knit fabrics are introducing such interesting themes as jacquard patternings that are knitted right into the fabric. These are perfectly stunning for the separate blouse or the swanky waistcoats that fashion is so conspicuously spotlighting this season.

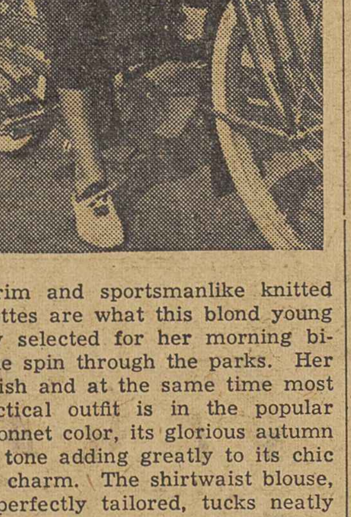
KNITTED CULOTTE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Trim and sportsmanlike knitted culottes are what this blond young lady selected for her morning bicycle spin through the parks. Her stylish and at the same time most practical outfit is in the popular dubonnet color, its glorious autumn red tone adding greatly to its chic and charm. The shirtwaist blouse, so perfectly tailored, tucks neatly into the culotte skirt. More and more sportswomen are appreciating the worthwhileness of knitted apparel. It is so dependable, so satisfactory on every count, be it comfort, dependable wearableness or good style. It is easy to be understood why knitted apparel is so outstandingly in the foreground of fashion these days.

ACCESSORIES MAKE ONE CHIC OR DOWDY

It doesn't cost one bit more to select hosiery that matches one's shoes, or harmonizes with them, than it does to pick up shades haphazardly. When buying a hat, keep in mind the color of the coat and do the same with gloves, scarves and purses.

Dress accessories form the ensemble, and it is that which makes a woman chic or dowdy. Nowadays, one must keep in mind the complete picture. Make-up should also be considered. Rouge and lipstick that glorify one outfit will kill another. Half a dozen shades of lipstick are not too many for the girl with the average wardrobe, especially now that gay colors are fashionable.

Pressed Grape Tones Now in Use for Accessories

The "pressed grape" shades in gloves, shoes and purses are featured all along Fifth avenue—burgundy, raisin, claret, muscatel . . . One window is full of aubergine, the new eggplant shade, an ideal accent for black . . . aubergine, claret and muscatel shoes are being made . . . or you can choose malaga purple accessories, and wear them with black, fog blue, spruce green or brown . . .

The smartest outfit on the avenue was an oxford gray tailored suit with a tiny black stripe, worn with a dull crepe man-tailored blouse of black, an antique silver and mother of pearl brooch at the collar, smart because the suit was perfectly tailored.

Fur-Trimmed Hats Seen in Late Paris Collections

Fur is used lavishly in the new collections in Paris. Many hats are either trimmed or made entirely of fur, and a black velvet suit trimmed with a luxurious silver fox collar is matched by a peaked velvet hat trimmed with the head of a silver fox. Bright shoe-button eyes and pointed ears give the hat a very perky look

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

FARMERS' CHAMPION

OF ALL the leaders of third party movements, probably no one has caused the two major parties more concern than did Gen. James B. Weaver of Iowa. For he was the nominee of two new parties which, at two different periods in our history, capitalized on the unrest of the farm vote and in one case he definitely contributed to the defeat of the party in power.

Weaver was first the standard-bearer for the Greenbackers, a party which came into existence in 1868 because of the dissatisfaction of the farmers with the financial policies of Grant's administration. They were inflationists who demanded that a large amount of paper money be issued without regard to specie payment. They received their name from the fact that legal-tender notes were printed in green and called greenbacks. In the campaign of 1876 they nominated Peter Cooper, the New York philanthropist, but he polled only 80,000 popular votes and did not receive a single electoral vote.

In the congressional elections of 1878 the Greenbackers cast a million votes and the Republicans in power looked apprehensively to the presidential campaign of 1880, especially when the Greenbackers nominated a man from the agricultural West. But their fears were groundless, for the Greenbackers could muster only a little more than 300,000 votes and, although Garfield won over Hancock by less than 10,000 popular votes, he got 214 electoral votes to his opponent's 155.

Twelve years later the Republicans had much more to worry over when Weaver bobbed up again, this time as the nominee of the Populist or People's party which declared for free silver, public ownership of monopolies, postal savings banks and an income tax. In the state and congressional elections of 1890 they carried the legislatures of Kansas and Nebraska, elected nine members of congress and forced 34 others, Democrats and Republicans, to pledge themselves to carry out Populist ideas. In the presidential campaign of 1892 Weaver polled more than 1,000,000 votes in the West and South and corralled 22 electoral votes. The Populists also carried several state legislatures and sent five senators to Washington.

"SMITH FOR PRESIDENT"

SINCE the United States has more people bearing the name of Smith than any other family name, it is only natural perhaps that there should have been more presidential candidates by that name than any other.

The first was Joseph E. Smith, founder of the Church of Latter Day Saints and prophet of the Mormon religion, who in 1844 condemned the policies of both the Whig and the Democratic parties and announced his candidacy for the presidency. However, his martyrdom at the hands of an Illinois mob in June of that year cut short his political career.

Four years later another Smith was in the field as a candidate—Gerrit Smith, the New York philanthropist, who was one of the founders of the Liberty party in 1840 and its candidate for President in 1848. In that year he was also indorsed for the presidency by the Industrial Congress at its convention in Philadelphia. Again in 1852 Smith was the candidate of the Liberty party and again he was indorsed by another group, this time by the Land Reformers. In neither case did Smith or his party figure very prominently in the election.

In 1876 there was another one of the name in the presidential race. He was Green Clay Smith, a native of Kentucky, a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, rising to the rank of brigadier-general in the Union army before resigning to take his seat in congress to which he had been elected while in the field. Re-elected to congress, he resigned to become the second territorial governor of Montana. After three years of service in the West he resigned to enter the ministry of the Baptist church in Washington, D. C. It was soon after his serving as a minister that he was chosen as the first presidential nominee of the modern Prohibition party.

Just as this "dry" Smith failed to win in 1876, so did a "wet" Smith fail to win half a century later. For Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic candidate in 1928, suffered defeat, as did his predecessors.

The Word "Dun"

The word "dun" is supposed by some to be derived from the French "donnez." The British Apollo of 1780 says, however, that the word owes its origin to a Joe Dun, a famous bailiff of Lincoln in the time of Henry VII. He is said to have been so successful in the collection of debts that his name became proverbial. Whenever it seemed almost impossible to make a man pay, people would say, "Why don't you Dun him?"

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

★★★ By VIRGINIA VALE ★★★

HAVE you heard Hildegarde on the radio? You must, not merely because she is delightful in a way of her own, but because it is always interesting to watch the progress of someone who is on the way to stardom.

Not so many years ago she was playing the piano in a motion picture theater. She went abroad. First thing she knew, the Milwaukee girl was singing for royalty—King Edward VIII when he was Prince of Wales, the King of Sweden, ex-King Alfonso of Spain, the Duke and Duchess of Kent—they all helped make her one of the toasts of Europe.

Now she has come back home, and broadcasts on Tuesday evenings from ten to ten-thirty, and on Saturdays from eight to eight-thirty over N. B. C.

Marlene Dietrich

Marlene Dietrich couldn't wait to get off to Europe—and now she can't wait to get home! She is making a picture in England, you know, and there have been delays (it's reported that Robert Donat walked out on it, for reasons not announced at the time) and she doesn't know when she'll return. She is so sold on Hollywood that she telephoned her studio dress designer to ask his advice on the gowns she will wear in the English picture—perhaps she was afraid that the designers over there wouldn't let her wear enough feathers.

Well, another grand picture has come along, one of the best in years. It is "My Man Godfrey," with—Carole Lombard, William Powell, Alice Brady, Gail Patrick, Jean Dixon, Eugene Pallette and Alan Mowbray. It is almost too funny—you find yourself laughing so hard at one bit of funny dialogue that you miss the next one.

Take it from Simone Simon, who has become so tremendously popular in so short a time, her name should be pronounced "Semone Semon"—but it takes a French student to get that last syllable exactly right. She is having a grand time in Hollywood; goes out practically every night, looking even younger and cuter than she does on the screen, and gets just about everything she wants at the studio by day.

No doubt you've heard Edwin C. Hill who comments to ably on news events. Well, he's starting something original with his new series. He will begin with a summary of the week's news, and after that dramatize the story of some unknown American hero or heroine.

Errol Flynn

You can't help liking Errol Flynn. He refuses to let making pictures dominate his life, perhaps because he did so many things before he became an actor. He learned to play tennis comparatively recently, entered the Pacific Southwest Tournament — and had to play Frank Shields. But he gave a good account of himself, though he was up against a champion. When he lived in New Guinea he collected rare snakes for Dr. Raymond Ditmars. Now he collects rare insects for British museums, and his wife, Lily Damita, goes along, though she loathes bugs and doesn't particularly care for the Mojave desert, where he does his collecting.

It is good news for Nelson Eddy's many admirers that his new fall series of broadcasts is under way. He began them September 27 from Hollywood, on a nation-wide Columbia network of eighty-two stations, and will continue to broadcast from there until his concert engagements take him East in January.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Buster Crabbe, after teaching Harold Lloyd's children to swim, had begun giving lessons to Shirley Temple . . . The March of Time is off the air for only a short while, just to give the people who do it a chance to rest after sixty successive weeks of broadcasting . . . Eleanor Powell ordered fifteen pairs of slacks at once; the Hollywood habit of wearing them got her, and now all she needs is a mink coat to wear with them . . . Helen Hayes, who is broadcasting again, wears a slave bracelet instead of a wedding ring . . . When Bing Crosby gets back into the harness and begins making pictures and broadcasting again, he'll have a new title—president of the Del Mar Turf club; it's near San Diego . . . Production on "Camille" has been held up indefintely by Irving Thalberg's death, which prostrated Greta Garbo.

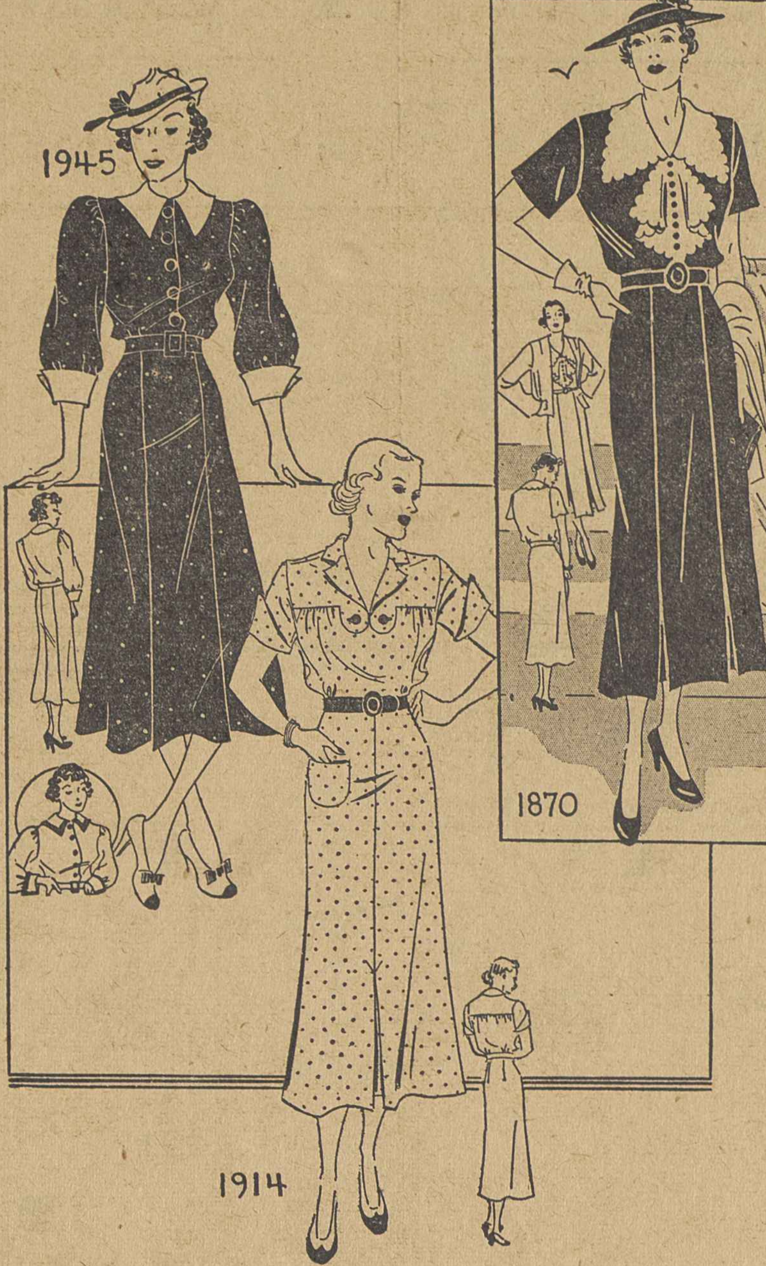
A Boost for Home Sewing!



HERE are three Sewing Circle specialties that are as easy to make as humming a tune. If you've never made a stitch before, here's your golden opportunity, for step-by-step sewing instructions are included with every pattern to direct you all the way until you've completed a frock that'll win a round of applause in any circle and flattering compliments on your slim figure and chic appearance. For an inexpensive, but extensive wardrobe just glance at this charming array of exquisite frocks.

Pattern No. 1945-B is a smashing hit in any office or social gathering and versatility personified. You can wear it as shown on the large figure with contrasting collar and cuffs and a self-fabric belt or make it with a twin collar and cuff, introducing another harmonizing color. Cotton, shantung, silk, broadcloth, crepe or satin are a few exciting fabric mediums that create excellent effects. It is available for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measures: 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 requires four yards of 39-inch material plus two-thirds yard contrast.

Pattern No. 1914-B is an alluring double duty frock; simple, inexpensive and the proud possessor of a sleek silhouette. It's a marvel for getting around the kitchen in a jiffy and just the thing for visiting, shopping or business. Depending of course on the material you select. For housewear, try a gingham, percale or cotton with a bit of color to pep you up, and for a more dressier effect choose striped shirting, broadcloth, lightweight wool or crepe. It is available for sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires three and three-fourths yards of 39-inch material.

Pattern No. 1870-B. Those of you whose figures run to width will join your slimmer sisters in choosing this gay slenderizing ensemble, with a contrasting scalloped collar and jabot, so flattering to the face. The effect is exquisite in satin, crepe, broadcloth or silk, the result wholly and completely satisfying. With or without the jacket the frock is the ultimate in utility and style. It is available for sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires six and one-fourth yards of 39-inch material plus seven-eighths yard contrast.

Household Questions

To polish a table that has become spoiled by hot dishes, apply a few drops of essence of peppermint with a clean cloth and rub briskly.

* * *

Cover small delphinium plants with excelsior or pine boughs before putting on dried leaves. They do not pack or stay damp as leaves do.

* * *

Never allow cold water to run into an aluminum pan while it is hot. If done repeatedly the rapid contraction of metal will cause pan to warp.

* * *

When whisk brooms have become worn, cut them down for sink brushes.

* * *

Uncle Phil Says:

Wisdom Is Personal

Most of the wisdom one acquires one can't communicate to anyone else. Each man's life is his own.

The "hand" who watches the clock will never be the man of the hour.

A monkey never seems to have any repose. Its life is all excitement as it is for some men.

No creature, human or otherwise, can welcome you quite as wholeheartedly as a dog.

We Are as Sheep

Most people would rather work at another's direction than to accept responsibility. That's why good executives are hard to find.

There is no such thing as rights without duties.

It isn't against the output of foolish ideas that society must be well armed. That can't be helped. It must be armed against so many people believing in them.

Get in Trouble

One's liberty may be restricted but has anyone a clear idea of what he'd do if he had a lot?

A clear conscience neither fears sound nor sight of foes.

Does pessimism cause indigestion or indigestion pessimism?

One has never fully lived until Dreams no more come true than most suspicions.

Appropriation For Shelby Reduced

HELP WILL BE TAKEN AWAY FROM MANY WHO ARE SUFFERING

The State Department of Public Welfare has reduced its approproation to Shelby County by $100, which will mean a total reduction of about $175. As was stated in an earlier issue of this paper, the Shelby County Department of Public Welfare is being supported entirely by funds from the State Department. As a general rule, however, County Departments are supported cooperatively by the Federal, State and County governments.

Just what does this reduced appropriation mean to the County? It means that twenty families, in which there are needy children, can no longer be assisted by the Department. In several of these families there are active cases of tuberculosis. The many needs of these patients—fresh milk and eggs, green vegetables, fresh truits, warm bed covering, and screened sleeping porches—will have to "go begging" unless interested citizens are able to make contributions.

To make the situation more vivid let us take the case of Mrs. T., a young mother with three small children. Mrs. T's husband deserted her two years ago. All efforts to locate him have failed; so she was forced to move into the home with her brother, who has a wife and several small children to support from WPA wages. The two families are living in an old garage, which leaks very badly. Mrs. T. has active tuberculosis and is not even able to take care of her three children. Because of the limited funds it has not been possible to isolate the mother and the children are in danger of contracting the dread disease.

Reader, just what suggestions have you for meeting this situation and others like it?

Shelby Man Held In Sister's Slaying

Columbiana, Oct. 24.—Bloomer Isbel, 27, was held in Shelby County jail here today for the shotgun slaying of his sister, Mrs. James Pyle, 29, who lives near the Jefferson-Shelby County line south of Leeds.

Claude Payne, about 25, was held by Sheriff C. H. Fore, as a material witness.

Mrs. Pyle was struck in the head by a shotgun charge shortly before noon yesterday. The shooting occurred at her home.

Isbel, according to Sheriff Fore, claimed the gun was accidentally discharged while he was holding the weapon to protect himself from Payne. The Sheriff said he had not learned the basis of the quarrel between the two men.

The officer said a warrant charging either murder or manslaughter pobably would be sworn out against Isbel during the day.

Linen Shower Given For Miss Hodo

Mrs. J. A. Burnett and Miss Louise Lucas were joint hostesses at a linen shower Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Bessie Hoskins, honoring Miss Margaret Hodo, whose marriage will be an event of Saturday. The apartment was made gay with fall flowers in Halloween colors. Tea, sandwiches and coffee ere served.

Miss Kathleen Williams played several violin selections. Mrs. J. I. Reid, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Isobel Bruce gave a short dissertation on the illusions and disillusions of marriage. Following this clever skit a witch rushed to the honoree and ushered her to where the gifts were displayed.

Those included in this happy occasion were: Misses Myrtle Brook, Nell Sanders, Mildred Moore, Sue Ingram, Cleopaus Hubbard, Jeanette Bruce, Jule Dowling, Anne Wilcox, Betsy Cox, Irene Dubberly. Clara Fisch, Margaret Ellis, Ruth Ray Wilson Virginia Evans, Doris Bender, Elizabeth Sessoms, June Hamilton. Mesdames J. I. Reid, Frank Walburn, F. L. Walburn, Johnnie Henson, Isobel C. Bruce, Bessie Hoskin and Paul Rogan.

Ban Placed On WPA Projects

SHORTAGE OF RELIEF WORKERS LIMITS PROJECTS AVAILABLE

Montgomery, Ala.—With a general state-wide increase in the volume of business and employment Ray Crowe, State WPA Director, in a letter to State, City and County officials, has announced that few, if any high cost projects can be initiated within the immediate future.

Where such projects are put into operation, he said, it will be in those instances in which communities contribute a considerable percentage of the materials and probably a large proportion of the labor.

The increased building operations that are being carried on throughout the State have drawn from WPA rolls nearly all of the skilled labor, he said.

Since projects must be designed remaining on WPA rolls, he said, primarily to provide work for those it follows that the projects must largely be of the type that unskilled labor could operate.

"The funds made available for can only be expended for the employment of relief labor and necessary supervision, together with a limited amount of materials" he said. "Therefore, to construct any considerable number of high cost projects within the state, will require that in the communities in which such operations are carried on, a considerable percentage of materials to be purchased by local funds and probably a larger proportion of skilled labor be employed from the same source."

Mr. Crowe said it was the intention of the Works Progress Administration to complete, as nearly as possible all projects now operating, and to initiate and complete any such new projects as are feasible. However, he said, it was probable that a great many worthwhile and needed projects, that have been approved in Washington, could not be released for operation.

Approval of a project by Wshington, he pointed out, merely meant that it was a good project and that it could be operated, when and if the WPA was available.

FARMERS OPPOSING NO. 1. AMENDMENT

More than 2,000 farmers meeting in Birmingham last week unanimously adopted a stinging resolution against the proposed amendment No. 1, to be voted on over Alabama on November 3rd.

The resolution charged that the "financial group in Birmingham which was opposing President Roosevelt, economy, education and the people of Alabama want to get control of the tax machinery to enable them to reduce their taxes and increase the taxes on the home owner, the farmer and the worker."

Wilton Will Have New Water System

Wilton, a small town in Shelby County, near Montevallo, is to get a new and complete waterworks system, far superior to anything the community has ever had. Charles O. Arant, acting Mayor, was notified yesterday by Col. H. S. Geissmer, State PWA Director, for the allotment of about $31,000 for the project.

Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator, advised Col Geismer that the Wilton allotment had been made, including $17,000 in a loan and $13,909 as an outright grant. The waterworks system will include an elevated storage tank with a capacity of 100,000 gallons, a sterilization plant, and other up-to-date equipment. Water distrubution is to be made throughout the town. Installation of the fire hydrants is included in the project.

The loan will be repaid from the waterworks receipts, bonds to be issued for the town's part of the financing of the new system.

During the drouth this year, Wilton, according to reports, was hard hit, and many of the people had to haul their water. The new system provides for the use of the large spring as a source of the supply.

Dr. A. F. Harman Sounds Warning

FINANCING HIGHER EDUCATION IS SUBJECT OF RADIO SPEECH

Dr. A. F. Harman, president of Alabama College, in a radio address last Sunday warned the people of Alabama that unless relief comes quickly the public schools and colleges of the state are headed toward collapse.

Declaring that in view of conditions in education today he saw no reason to apologize for, or to explain his speech on "Financing Higher Education in Alabama," Dr. Harman said it would be doubtful that in the present crisis any educational leader worthy of the name could maintain silence and his self-respect at the same time.

Quoting from President Roosevelt's Kansas City address, in which he said, "The school is the last expenditure upon which America should be willing to economize", Dr. Harman stated that Alabama seemed to be taking the opposite stand.

"In Alabama," said Dr. Harman, "the school is the first thing, and the last thing, and almost the only thing on which we do economize. Roads and prisons are provided for on an admirable scale. The State maintains creditably its obligations to agriculture. Salaries of State and County and municipal officers are paid without fail. Meanwhile education, health, and social security, into which the very roots of civilization are struck, are victims of the onslaughts of rigid economists. Schools and colleges wait and suffer and are threatened with collapse as the consequence of an inexplicable political situation."

Making it clear that he spoke as president of Alabama College and not as representative of any other institution, Dr. Harman cited the financial predicament of Alabama College as indicative of the situation at other schools and colleges of the State. He pointed out that the regular appropriation of $205,119.98 for the year ended September 30, 1936, Alabama College received only $61,535.75, of 30.1 per cent of the total. Among other hardships resulting from this reduced payment by the State, the sum of $48,451.50 was due and unpaid to Alabama College teachers on September 30. And unless relief comes quickly, Dr. Harman continued, there will be due them on September 30, 1937, not $48,000, but an additional $95,000.

Commending his faculty,, President Harman said: "The faith and loyalty of the staff of Alabama College throughout these years of depression have been surpassingly admirable. Undoubtedly this has been true of every other institution of higher learning in Alabama. But there are limits to human endurance, even on a college campus. Educational statesmanship should not and surely will not permit such loss of morale as leads headlong into collapse."

In reply to the recent criticism of educational leadership in Alabama, Dr. Harman said, "It is grossly unfair and unjust to hold up to ridicule and criticism, those who are professionally and officially engaged in education, as if they were endeavoring to feather their own nests when they fight for adequate support for schools and colleges. It is absurd to brush aside or to challenge educational records kept by public school officials as they are not to be trusted, as the basis for determining educational conditions and needs of the State. In volume 5, part 4, on page 184, "County Government in Alabama of the Report of the Brookings Institution," appear the following words: 'The most satisfactory accounts kept anywhere in the county are those of the county superintendent of education, who is guided by uniform accounting instructions, forms, and report blanks prescribed by the State Department of Education."

"No county superintendent of education has been convicted of embezzlement in Alabama in more than 25 years. The principal losses sustained by education in these more than 25 years have been due to banks that have failed. Yet the constituted educational authorities continue to be held in distrust or up to a well-feigned ridicule. When laymen who desire to obtain proper and adequate educational facilities for Alabama, and professional educators who understand the educational conditions and needs of the State can articulate their efforts, then we shall have gone a long way toward working out our educational problems."

More than 1,000 teachers and leaders of parent-teachers association will meet at Palmer Hall, Alabama College, in Montevallo, at 10:00 o'clock Saturday morning, October 31, for a district meeting. The meeting is sponsored by the Alabama Educational Association, The Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the State Department of Education, for the purpose of discussing ways and means of improving education in Alabama.

The morning session will be featured by an address by President Garland Smith, of the A. E. A., and by a symposium on teacher welfare problems, emphasizing teacher tenure, a retirement fund for teachers, and ethics for teachers.

During the afternoon session, State Superintendent J. A. Keller will discuss "the Educational outlook in Alabama." This address will be followed by a forum for the purpose of duscussing the topic, "How Can We Improve the Alabama Education Association and the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers." The forum will be led by Frank L. Grove, executive secretary of the A. E. A.

Luncheon for visitors will be served by the parent-teacher associations of the eight counties included in this district.

At the morning session Mrs. B. H. Dillon, a vice-president of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers, will preside. During the afternoon, Mr. A. S. Scott, president of the fifth district of the A. E. A., will be in the chair.

Counties, including the cities located therein, expected to send visistors to Montevallo for the meeting are: Blount, Chilton, Clay, Jefferson, Bessemer Birmingham, Fairfield, Tarrant; Shelby, Alabama College; St. Clair, Talladega, Sylacauga, Walker, Carbon Hill and Jasper.

Josef Stalin

EUROPE'S situation, according to seasoned observers, is settling down to a fight to the finish between Communism and Fascism, and the several nations are lining up accordingly. Josef Stalin, Soviet dictator, is said to be convinced that another great war is at hand and that Russia must act promptly to take what he considers her proper part in the conflict. The civil war in Spain and the developments therefrom are providing the fuel for starting the fire. Russia repeats her accusations against Germany and Italy of giving aid to the Spanish rebels; the Fascist governments deny the charges and make countercharges against Moscow; the Soviet government appears to be on the point of quitting the committee for nonintervention in Spain and sending war munitions to the hard pressed radical government at Madrid.

Dispatches from Moscow said Stalin had been informed by his military advisers that as few as 100 planes could settle the Spanish war in favor of the government and that Russia could send them almost immediately. The Russians already have sent five shiploads of food and clothing to Spain, these supplies having been bought by subscriptions from Russian workers.

Should Stalin decide to come out openly in aid of the leftist government of Spain, the Nazis and Fascists may be counted on to redouble their already existing campaign against Communism — and many nations would soon be involved in the quarrel, with possibilities that terrify thinking persons the world over.

Klementi Voroshilov, Soviet commissar for defense, didn't allay the alarm any when he said in a formal statement:

"The Soviet Union is prepared to meet the enemy anywhere he chooses to taste the force of our arms.

A Russian language paper printed in New York said the Soviet press bureau in London had announced that Stalin would come to America after the November election, for medical treatment; that he would visit President Roosevelt, and later would go to Mexico. All of this was promptly denied officially in Moscow and by the soviet embassy in Washington.

CLOSER co-operation between Germany and Italy in the fight on Communism was assured by an arrangement for "institutes" in Berlin and Rome for Italo-German youth leadership, in which the Hitler Youth organization and Mussolini's Balilla, a Fascist youth body, are to unite. Baldur von Schirach, Nazi youth leader, so announced to a great gathering in Berlin.

In the Berlin institute Italian youth leaders will be educated in conditions and achievements under the Nazi state. In Rome, Nazi youth leaders will learn what Il Duce's Fascists have done for their country. Neither institute will attempt to imitate the other, Schirach said.

GENERAL FRANCO, head of the Spanish insurgents, ordered the immediate taking of Madrid and each day the state of the defenders of the capital became more desperate. The rebels closed in relentlessly, making effective use of bombing planes and armored tanks.

President Manuel Azana and some of his cabinet ministers slipped out of Madrid and appeared in Barcelona. Ostensibly they were making a tour of the loyalist fronts, but the general opinion was that they had fled from the capital to make a "last stand" in Catalonia, which province always is radical. Anyhow, Azana took over an office in the Catalan parliament building for himself and his secretarial staff. Senora Azana has quit Spain. She appeared in Toulouse, France, and departed for an unannounced destination.

JAMES COUZENS, independent Republican senator from Michigan, died in a Detroit hospital after a long illness and immediately following an operation to relieve uremic poisoning. He was sixty-four years old.

Mr. Couzens was one of the wealthiest men in congress, his riches being a result of early association with Henry Ford in the automobile business. He was twice elected mayor of Detroit and was appointed to the senate in 1922 to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Truman H. Newberry. As a senator he frequently disregarded party lines, and since the election of President Roosevelt he had supported many New Deal measures. Before the recent primary he announced that, though a candidate for renomination as a Republican, he intended to support Mr. Roosevelt for re-election. This was an act of political suicide, and he was defeated by Wilber M. Brucker.

Senator Couzens was noted for his great contributions to charity. The chief of these was the gift of probably $20,000,000 for the help of unfortunate children. He established the Children's Fund of Michigan with an endowment of $10,000,000.

PEACE within the ranks of the American Federation of Labor has not yet been achieved, for the executive council of that body adjourned without settling the dispute between the Green and Lewis factions. The council will meet again November 14 in Tampa, and two days later the federation will open its annual convention in that Florida city. If there are developments meanwhile, the council or federation may discuss the quarrel, according to President Green. He said: "The matter is temporarily closed," and added that so far as he knew, no peace overtures had been made by the CIO leaders. Mr. Green declared the ten suspended unions could not be admitted to the convention.

King Edward

MERE scandal and gossip have no proper place in this department, but the "affaire Simpson," as the French would term it, has progressed until it assumes world importance. As arrangements are being made for the quiet and uncontested divorce of Mrs. "Wally" Simpson, American friend of King Edward VIII of England, it is rumored in London society circles that the bachelor monarch will abdicate in favor of his brother, the Duke of York, and marry the attractive woman who has shared so much of his time in recent months. In support of this rumor is the reported fact that plans are being made for renting the farms of the Sandringham estate in Norfolk, which is the king's private property. Also, there is a story that this estate may be sold to the Aga Khan, the immensely wealthy spiritual head of the Ismaili sect of Mohammedanism.

Should Edward give up the throne, it would eventually be occupied by Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke of York, and this succession would be decidedly popular with the people of England. The abdicating king might revert to the dukedom of Cornwall, which provides a net income of about $350,000.

There is nothing in British law to prevent the king from marrying whomsoever he pleases, but no ruler of the country since Henry VIII has wedded a commoner. Court gossip in London says that Prime Minister Baldwin and the archbishop of Canterbury recently appealed to Edward for greater discretion in his relations with Mrs. Simpson and were hotly rebuffed by the king.

English newspapers imposed on themselves a voluntary censorship in this affair, but it has been broken by the Sunday Referee which prints an article declaring the king "may marry by spring," that this would result in postponement of the coronation, and that tradesmen have been insuring themselves against such a delay.

PERSONAL reports of Presidential and vice presidential candidates, made public by the senate campaign expenditures committee, show that President Roosevelt gave a $500 contribution to the Democratic county committee of Dutchess county, New York, his home, and had spent $10 for postage. Vice President John N. Garner reported that he had received no contributions and made no expenditures.

The Republican candidates, Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, reported they had had no personal receipts nor expenditures since nomination, their campaigns being financed by the Republican national committee.

In getting the nomination Landon received $163,480 and spent $164,572. Knox reported personally receiving $35,754 and spending $35,557 before nomination, and the Knox for President committee received $133,818 and spent $143,259.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate, reported his party had collected $5,614 and spent $6,504 to date.

John Zahn, National Greenback party candidate, reported he had received $1 and spent $2.50 toward his election.

At the same time the American Liberty league, nonpartisan, voluntarily submitted a financial report. The report showed that the organization had received $419,282 since January 1, and spent $461,851.

PROF. JEROME DAVIS of the Yale divinity school, nationally known liberal, is being dropped from the Yale university faculty, and charges that this is because of his "economic opinions." President Angell denies this, asserting that the budgetary situation was the sole reason for allowing Davis' contract to lapse. "No abridgement of academic freedom or liberty of speech is involved in this case," said Angell.

Davis is president of the American Federation of Teachers, chairman of the National Religion and Labor foundation and president of the Eastern Sociological conference. He said he thought it likely that the teachers' federation would take some action in his case.

Sir Oswald Mosley

GREAT BRITAIN is determined to keep out of the Communist-Fascist conflict if possible. Sir Oswald Mosley and his black-shirted Fascist followers have been trying to stir up trouble in England and in consequence the cabinet decided to put a ban on all political uniforms. It was expected that when parliament reassembled the government would announce drastic action to suppress the Mosley organization or at least to put a stop to its demonstrations and parades in Leeds, Manchester and the east end of London, where these Fascists like to create ugly feeling against Jews.

The public demand in England for action against the Fascists has been strengthened by the revelation that Mosley takes his advice from Berlin and Rome. It is reported, and widely believed, that Mosley's tactics of deliberately leading his Blackshirts into Jewish communities are based on advice given him by Paul Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda minister.

AN AFTERMATH of the Lindbergh kidnaping case is the indictment of Ellis H. Parker, chief of detectives of Burlington county, N. J.; his son and three other men by a federal grand jury at Newark, N. J. The indictment charges the defendants took possession of Paul H. Wendel in New York, forced him to confess that he kidnaped Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and held him in New Jersey while revisions were made in the confessions as the older Parker ordered.

The government charges the defendants hoped to reap "large rewards and sums of money" by publishing the "true story" of the faked solution of the celebrated case.

IT WAS announced at the White House that President Roosevelt had written to heads of 100 schools and colleges throughout the country asking the educators to determine whether courses at engineering schools are so "balanced" as to give students the necessary "vision and flexibile technical capacity."

The "impact" of science on human life produces social dislocations as well as advances in productive power, he held. He mentioned "unemployment, bankruptcies and relief." The engineer, he said, has a responsibility to help design "mechanisms" to absorb the shocks of the impact of science."

FOR some time there have appeared in print stories about how Japan was establishing air and submarine bases in the former German islands of the South Pacific over which she holds a League of Nations mandate. It has been expected that the league's mandate commission would investigate these reports, and now Japan seeks to forestall such action by a formal report to the league in which she asserts she has "no fortifications, military or naval bases" in those islands. The Tokio government says it is scrupulously observing that part of the mandate which forbids the use of the islands for military purposes.

Following establishment of a south seas bureau in April, 1932, all Japanese armed forces and men of war have been withdrawn gradually from the islands, the report says, adding that the natives of the islands never have been subjected to military training.

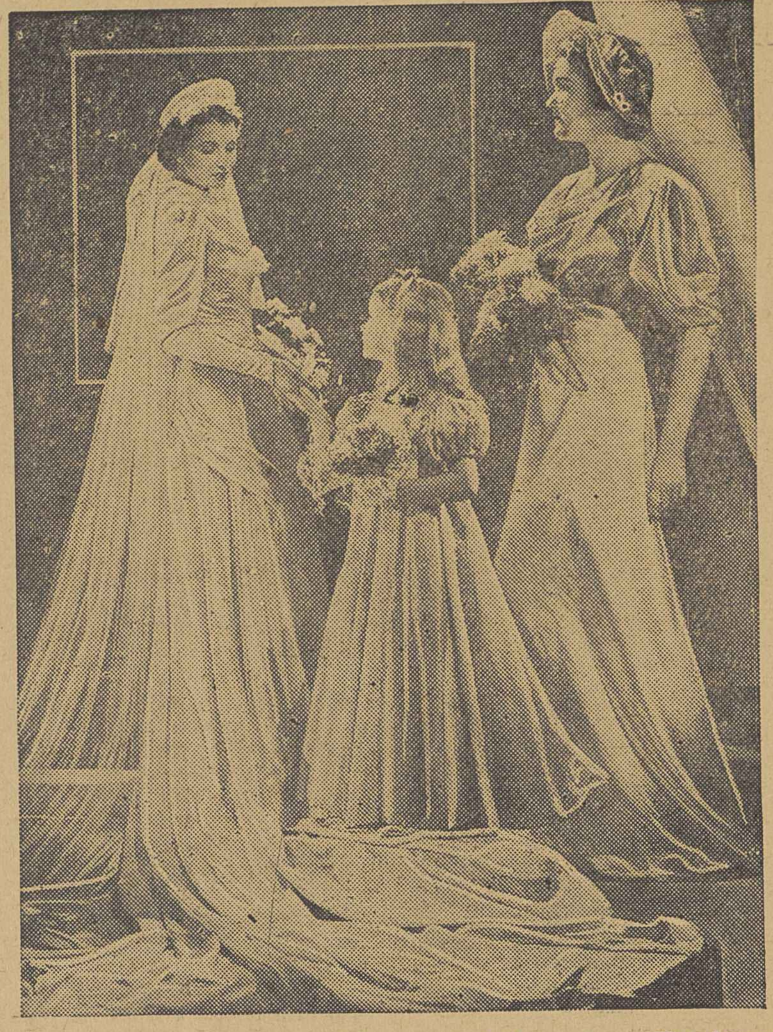
CHARGES filed in Washington by the federal trade commission accuse five trade associations of attempting to corner the automobile parts and accessories business. The groups, which were ordered to show cause why they should not be compelled to cease their alleged combine, are the National Standard Parts association, Detroit; the Motor and Equipment Wholesale association, Chicago; the Automotive Trade associations of Greater Kansas City, Mo.; Mississippi Valley Automotive Jobbers association and the Southwestern Jobbers association. Their officials also are defendants in the suit.

EIGHTEEN men and one woman perished in the waters of Lake Erie when the Canadian ship Sand Merchant foundered off Cleveland during a gale. Seven men, including the captain, were picked up after clinging to life boats for eleven hours.

Northern Italy was shaken by earthquake shocks that were felt as far away as Jugoslavia and Austria. Twenty persons were killed by tumbling walls, and thirty others were injured.

Satin-Clad Brides Go Victorian

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THE importance of period fashions for evening this year means that they will be reflected in the gowns worn at many smart autumn and winter weddings. There is a quaintness about the early Victorian fashions that especially offers alluring possibilities to brides who would have a "picture" wedding scene.

The lovely gown pictured creates romance and poetry for the modern wedding scene. This 1936 version of a Victorian wedding gown is interpreted in traditional ermine-white pure silk satin. The basque buttons quaintly down the back. The full sleeves give the broad shoulder effect that accents, by way of contrast, the slender girlish waistline. The bride carries a prayer book with gardenias.

Of course one's bridal party must carry out the idea so the flower girl has a period look in a Victorian cream silk taffeta princess dress that is gored to fit at the waistline with a widely spreading skirt which, by the way, stresses the new length for little girls party dresses this season. This wee maiden ties a lavender silk ribbon in her hair and carries a bouquet of purple asters and cream colored gladioli with a silk tulle frill.

The bridesmaid befittingly wears a cream silk satin Victorian gown. The full sleeve, slender line and back fullness are important style details that present-day designers are definitely introducing in their newest creations. A demure little brown silk net bonnet adds to the quaintness of the costume. The flowers she carries are purple and cream asters.

If one prefer that the attendants dress colorfully rather than keep strictly to cream satin, they may wear pert gowns in autumn hues of peau de soie or silk taffeta with puff sleeves and full skirts. As quaint and as "period" looking as if she had stepped form the fashion pages of a Godey appears a bridesmaid who is gowned in a frock of lavender silk taffeta with a tiny wine-colored silk velvet hat surmounted with three hyacinth blue ostrich tips. An armful of purple, rich red and cream asters adds to the color glory of the picture.

One thing is certain, whether she is a classic bride in traditional satin or in soft clinging fabrics, or a bride in quaint frock of Victorian or directoire inspiration, she will be dressed in silk of one type or another.

This year it is good style to have one's attendants wear the same style and the same fabric as one's own gown, only in different colors. If desired, the bridesmaids may all wear the same color, or that which is novel and new, different shades of a basic color giving somewhat of an sombre effect to the group as a whole.

For the important evening ensemble, smart trousseau will include a black velvet evening gown which will make the bride look like a re-incarnation of Sargent's famous "Madame X." Top it off with a matching hip-length silk velvet jacket and it can be worn on the honeymoon for dinner and formal wear.

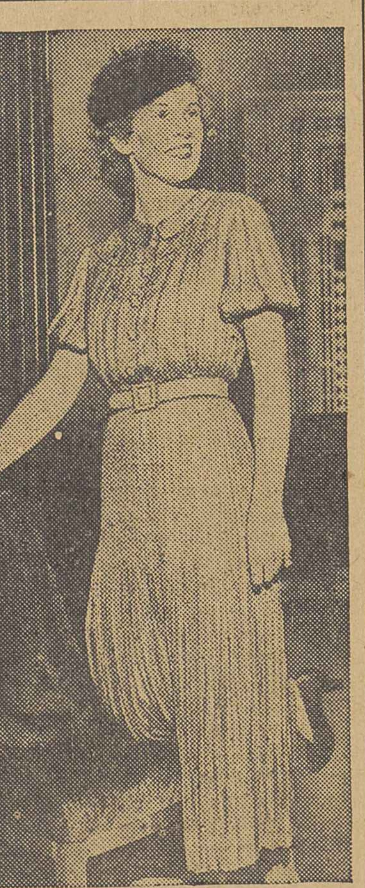
SILVER LAME GOWN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Never have gleaming metal weaves been more fashionable than they are at this very moment. They interesting note about these glamorous fabrics is the fact of their importance for dressy daytime wear as well as for formal evening. Of course their styling tunes them to afternoon as does that of the charming dress pictured. Fine allover pleating distinguishes this silver silk lame cocktail gown. This very beautiful silk silver lame comes in beguiling color tones, which makes it particularly adaptable for the making of the costume blouse or the tunic that completes color harmony for the ensembled costume.

SILHOUETTES BACK TO FORMER TRENDS

Just when we're getting used to high, broad shoulders, flares, perky short tunics and important long ones, along come Paris dispatches with the news that styles which immediately followed the war are beginning to make their influence felt. That means a neat, plain, slim silhouette.

It isn't only news from Paris that indicates the trend. A London designer sends over street frocks in the newest of woolens made on straight lines with only discreet, expertly tailored encrustations of the fabric as trimming, at belt, sleeves and occasionally on the skirt above a short, V-shaped slit in the center front-to making walking easy. Even tunics are sometimes made on straight lines.

Rich Fabrics Mark Styles for Autumn, Winter Wear

Rich fabrics always signalize the advent of the fashions of autumn and winter. Rich lames and fur for evening things will be used, and hats will be correspondingly resplendent. Bright flowers and feathers on velvet comprise the theme of the new millinery. Flowers on black velvet are especially good for a hat that is good to perk up a late summer costume or point a new autumn dress.

There is a shallow, little black velvet pillbox with dangling, stemmed pink geraniums that is our favorite, but we would settle for a tall witch's crown hat of black velvet, topped by perky red and white cellophane flowers.

Shining Furs

Fur capes of shining black caracul, nutria and Persian, from waist to three-quarter length, with squared shoulders will be a favorite choice of well-dressed women. Fur stole collars trim the coats of many three-piece ensembles, gray wolf on green wool, brown lapin on plaid and leopard with rust.

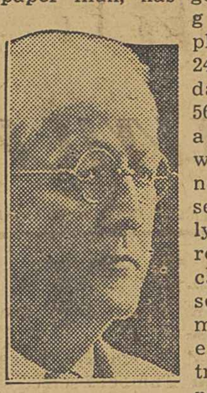
Some Ladies' Hats
Gen. Butler's Peace Plan
12 Ladies Good and True



Arthur Brisbane

H. R. Ekins, first-class newspaper man, has gone around the globe by airplane, covering 24,720 miles in 18 days, 14 hours, 56 minutes. Such a trip seems wonderfully fast now. Soon it will seem wonderfully slow. Air progress is rapid. Because it was done scientifically, by machinery, the eighteen-day trip seems less romantic than the Nelly Bly seventy-odd day trip that beat Jules Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days." Nelly Bly, clever newspaper woman, knew how to make it interesting, going out of her way to travel by elephant, camel, jinrickshas, etc. Flying around the world costs about $5,000.

Some day some woman, let us hope, will balance her fashion budget, decide just what she wants to wear, and then wear it, as men have done, but the day is far away. These are some of the hats from which your wife, daughter, sister will choose this season:

Hats shaped like East Indian war shields; hats heavy in gold embroidery; flat pillbox turbans, gold braided; Russian style hats off the face, with tall tiara fronts; hats of Persian lamb and embroidered felt; small toques, dipped down front and back, covered with soft feathers, "the military touch predominating."

Why, do you suppose, do women take so much trouble to spoil faces and heads naturally beautiful? It cannot all be the fault of hatmakers.

Gen. Smedley D. Butler, retired fighting major general of the United States marines, asks the Women's Christian temperance union to start a campaign against drunken automobile drivers, and also help peace by working for a constitutional amendment forbidding the President or congress to send troops out of the country.

You cannot change men by legislation, as was discovered in our prohibition mistake; you must change the men from the inside.

For the first time in history, New Jersey, selecting a jury all women, has surprised some, annoyed others. Why? For ages women have been judged and sentenced by individual men or groups of men. They have been ducked, branded with hot irons, put in the stocks, beheaded, hanged, burned alive.

Is there injustice in turning the thing around for a change; at least no twelve women would burn or duck anybody.

Lloyd's, British insurance concern, will insure you against anything happening, if it "guesses" that it will not happen; it usually guesses correctly. It refuses to insure against war striking England, although until lately the charge for that insurance was only one-fifth of one per cent; 200 pounds for 100,000 pounds insurance.

Somebody in Lloyd's possesses intelligence. That big organization does not like to think of war with airplanes added.

News from the East interests Americans: they might have to pay the bill. Japan and Russia, supposed recently to be on the verge of war, are said to have an understanding about things in the east that would involve depriving the British of profitable locations and rights. This does not please Britain, but that is the business of Japan, Russia and England.

Interesting flying item: Russia order in Baltimore a passenger "clipper" plane, to cost $1,000,000 and carry forty-four passengers, besides a crew of six.

The plane, very fast, can go 4,000 miles without taking on fuel, a range that would bring it across the Atlantic nicely, if it ever wanted to come back with a load of explosives instead of passengers.

The Irish Catholic hierarchy, sitting at Maynooth College, Cardinal Macrory presiding, denounces communism and persecution of the Catholic church in Spain, "mindful of Spain's kindness to our ancestors." On October 25 all Catholic churches in Ireland will take up collections "for the relief of Spanish Catholics." Mexico, once as "Catholic" as Ireland or any nation, sends, from its Chamber of Deputies, a message of sympathy to the Spanish government at Madrid.

England and France no longer guarantee any protection for Belgium in case of war, so the new King, Leopold, says all alliances are off, with France, England and everybody else.

Don't Sleep When Gas Presses Heart

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable.

You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adlerika the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adlerika rids you of gas and cleans foul poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika. Get rid of GAS. Adlerika does not gripe — is not habit forming. Leading Druggists.

"Yes, I know you. You don't leave this house!"

Loading every sentence with rage and oaths, Van Tambel seized a suitcase from the bed, dashed it to the floor, stamped on it, tore the clothes out of the second one ripped to pieces every garment in it.

"Now you go to town if you dare," he roared. "And if you leave this house today, never come back—if you do I'll kick you out. Get out of my sight, before I choke you!"

She hurried from the room and from the house.

What should she do? Escape was first in her thoughts, as she hurried up the hill trail. When she could partially collect her distracted senses, she had wandered well into the hills. She threw herself on the ground and tried to think.

She never knew how long she was there. But shadows were lengthening when she rose. She was hungry. There was nothing to do but go down and get something to eat; then, if she could keep out of sight of her father, to start for town.

She walked to the house in fear. But she reached the kitchen without seeing her father. Quong gave her dinner. He told her her father had gone to the Reservation. Afraid that her father would return before she could get away, Jane started for the corral. Bull Page was fastening the gate when Jane walked up to him. "I must go to town, Bull. I want a horse."

"It's agin orders, Miss Jane, to let a horse out for you. Gus is a-rarin' mad for some cause."

"I know, Bull. He's angry at me."

"No matter, Bull. Never mind."

She started to walk away. "What you goin' to do, Missy Jane?"

She turned with a sorry smile. "Guess I'll have to walk. Good-by." She waved her hand to him, for she was fond of poor Bull, and walked on.

"Hold on," he called, hobbling after her. "Hold on! You ain't goin' to walk clear to Sleepy Cat—not by a derned sight. Hold on!"

Jane hesitated. But, dragged out as she was by excitement and worry, she doubted whether she could make town on foot. She surrendered and climbed onto the horse he had saddled.

"Where's Jane's pony?" Van Tambel demanded.

Van Tambel flared up. "Didn't I give you and everybody else orders not to let her take a horse till I gave permission?"

"Why, yes, Gus," admitted Bull haltingly but good-naturedly, "I believe you did."

"You believe I did!" echoed Van Tambel, enraged. "How did she get a horse out of my corral?"

The veins in Van Tambel's huge neck swelled. Grabbing Bull with his powerful hands, he fastened his iron fingers on the old man's throat and choked him pitilessly, pouring on him as he did so a torrent of curses heard by Quong.

Only by struggling for his very life was Bull able to wriggle free from the deadly grip. In doing so, he fell backward, to the ground scrambled to his feet, and ran into the barn.

It was inside the barn that Bull's voice was heard by the China boy begging for mercy. "Why, Gus," he urged, "Jane's a nice girl. Don't take it so hard. I've worked for you a good many years, off an' on. You always found me honest, didn't you?"

Van Tambel uttered no word. He had pursued Bull to the farthest corner of an empty stall and, filled with silent, murderous rage, caught up a broken wagon stake and swung it over his head. "Don't hit me with that, Gus," cried the frightened man. A low, fearful imprecation from Van Tambel answered him.

"Now I'll give you what's comin' to you!"

"Why, Gus, you ain't a-goin' to kill me!"

Grunting and mad for blood, Van Tambel struck at the cowboy and rained blow after blow on him till he sank to the floor. Then, suddenly, he dropped the stake and, bespattered with blood, staggered out of the barn and over to the house. Quong, watching stealthily, fled for town.

In the cubbyhole office of McAlpin's livery barn in Sleepy Cat, Sawdy, Bob Scott, and McAlpin sat on three stools, silent and absorbed in a three-cornered bout at poker. The frightened Quong, trotting and walking from Gunlock and crossing the bridge, reached McAlpin's in pitiable condition. Throwing his hands against the glass-panel office door, he burst in and fell.

The gamesters jumped to their feet. McAlpin broke into angry exclamation: "What the devil! Can't we have a friendly game in my own quarters without a drunken bum chargin' in?"

Sawdy, less intent on saving his money and chips, had turned Quong partly over. "It's a chink, boys. There must be a tong war on."

"Who is it, Bob?" exclaimed McAlpin.

"It's Quong, the cook out at Gunlock, boys."

Laid out on the hostler's little bunk, Quong's eyes opened and closed.

"What is it, Quong? What's wrong?" asked Scott.

With his eyes popping from his head, Quong managed to form a word: "Bull!" he exclaimed, hoarse and panting. "Bull Page!"

Quong's eyes rolled in terror. "Gus."

"Yes, Gus—what about Gus?"

"He kill him."

"What do you mean? Bull killed Gus? No!"

"Gus kill Bull."

"Well, I'll be damned," exclaimed Sawdy. "It looks like a straight story, boys. That why you run into town, Quong?"

The China boy nodded.

The trio consulted together. A team was hitched to a three-seated democrat wagon, Quong was helped into it, and with McAlpin driving, the four set out for the jail to pick up Bill Pardaloe. Pardaloe was in bed. They routed him out and drove over to the hotel to pick up Doctor Carpy.

Carpy held a lantern over him. His face and head had been battered almost beyond recognition.

"He's close to dead, boys," exclaimed Carpy, low-voiced, to his companions. "Get him to the kitchen. While I'm working with him, look for Van Tambel."

They carried Bull to the kitchen door. Scott entered carefully and, groping in the dark, struck a match and lighted the lamp. Bull, breathing stertorously, was laid on the table.

Pardaloe tried the door leading to the dining room. It was locked. He rapped on it. He rapped again loudly, but the summons brought no reply.

He threw his shoulder against the door. As it crashed open, Pardaloe, followed by Scott, walked into the dining room. The door to the living room stood open. This room, inspected, revealed no sign of disturbance.

Of the two bedroom doors opening off this room, the door, one leading to Van Tambel's bedroom, was closed. Setting the lamp on the table in the middle of the room, Pardaloe knocked on Van Tambel's door, and, getting no reply, tried it. The door was locked.

Pardaloe called out, "If you're in there, Gus, unlock your door. I'm here to talk with you." Pardaloe awaited in silence a response from within.

Pardaloe threw himself into the door. It gave so easily that he stumbled across the threshold.

The bedroom was dark. Scott relighted the lamp. Pardaloe held it above his head and, followed by Scott, walked into the bedroom.

They saw the huge figure of a man lying across the bed. Pardaloe, passing the lamp to his companion, put his hand on the man's shoulder, saw that he was unconscious, and peering closer, turned the face toward him. It was Van Tambel.

When Carpy stalked into the room, Sawdy with him, the doctor, aided by his companion, turned the body partly over and examined it.

"How is he, Doc?" whispered Pardaloe.

"Dead."

Already seized by the excruciating pain that cost him his life, Van Tambel had left his victim and staggered in his distress to the house.

"It was a quick call, boys," said Carpy to those around him.

Transfixed by agony, the cruel features could not be softened.

"Nothing more to be done here," said Carpy in the living room. "Take Bull over to the bunkhouse now and lay him on his bed."

The clatter of hoofs was heard in the yard. "It's the boys back from town," said Sawdy, looking through the window. Carpy turned to Pardaloe. "Go out and tell them what's happened, and not to touch a thing until after the coroner comes out."

Doctor Carpy came into breakfast late next morning. Jane, who had finished her breakfast, rallied him, as she rose.

"I am late," he admitted.

"Night work?"

He nodded.

Standing beside the table, she was looking over the newspaper.

He put his arm around her.

"Sit down a minute, Jane. I've something to say to you. News for you."

She blanched a bit. "About Bill, Doctor?" she asked anxiously.

"Not a thing in the world about Bill. It's—about your father."

"Oh, I know he's terribly angry!"

Carpy shook his head. "Not now, Jane. He's not angry with anybody now."

"Doctor! What do you mean? Have you seen him?"

He nodded. "Yes, last night. You know how sick a man he's been—"

"Doctor!" she exclaimed faintly. "He's dead!"

"He died last night."

"Jane, your father has lived his life—there was nothing for him to look ahead to.

"This means a great change in your life, girl. I guess I'll show you up to the hospital. Bill must know this. Now I've got good news for you and no fooling. You have a big surprise and a happy one coming at the hospital. I took the bandages off Bill's eyes yesterday to examine them—and his eyes are much better. If we can only hold it now!"

CHAPTER XIII

BULL PAGE was only a broken cowboy, but Bull was loved at Sleepy Cat.

Yet even resentment at the name of Van Tambel in Sleepy Cat was softened somewhat when men heard of Jane's unremitting attention at Bull's side in the hospital.

To Jane's infinite relief, Bull recovered and went back to Gunlock.

At the ranch there was an air of cheer when Jane was installed; everybody on tiptoe to render service. McCrossen was especially eager to please.

"Well, Jane, I guess you know whatever I can do to take care of things is goin' to be done, twenty-four hours a day if need be," he said. "All you have to do is to leave it to me."

"I shall depend on you for everything," she returned.

"Everything, Jane?" he echoed.

Jane was not caught. "Everything connected with running the ranch," she said evenly.

But it became increasingly evident as the days went by that the energetic foreman still regarded himself as a suitor.

One morning they were riding together in the hills when McCrossen opened up the subject most on his mind. They had halted in their saddles to discuss some plans for a strip of land below them when McCrossen in his confident manner changed the subject.

"It's a whale of a ranch, Jane, it certainly is, an' with a thousand things to look after. You're left here alone now, girl. Why not take on a mate to help you run it? You an' I have had some little differences, I know, but nothin' to amount to anything. Why couldn't you an' I settle down here to run things together? If you'd say the word, Jane——"

Jane raised her hand. "Oh, I know, Dave, but I've got too much to worry about to think about getting married."

"But I know the big ranch so well. I know how your father ran it. Don't you like me, Jane?"

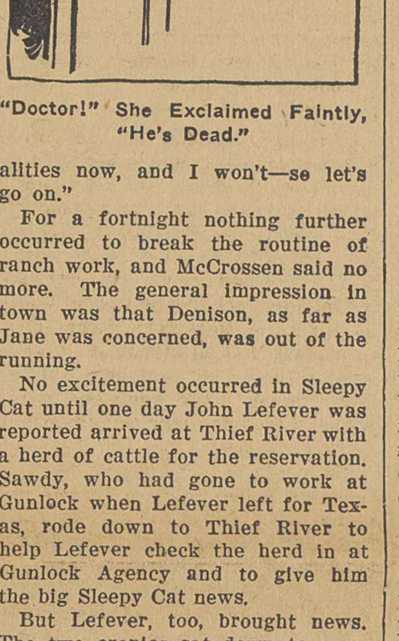
"Look here, Jane," he said aggressively, "is there another man you've got in your mind?"

She met the onslaught quietly. "I told you I wouldn't talk personalities now, and I won't—so let's go on."



"Doctor!" She Exclaimed Faintly, "He's Dead."

For a fortnight nothing further occurred to break the routine of ranch work, and McCrossen said no more. The general impression in town was that Denison, as far as Jane was concerned, was out of the running.

No excitement occurred in Sleepy Cat until one day John Lefever was reported arrived at Thief River with a herd of cattle for the reservation. Sawdy, who had gone to work at Gunlock when Lefever left for Texas, rode down to Thief River to help Lefever check the herd in at Gunlock Agency and to give him the big Sleepy Cat news.

But Lefever, too, brought news. The two cronies sat down to compare notes.

"I want to tell you somethin' I ran into nearin' Thief River," said Lefever. "There's a little slaughterin' ranch a mile south of town run by our old friend, Clubfoot, the butcher—remember how he skinned us on the horse race? While our herd was headin' for the river, I stopped for a few minutes where a couple of his boys were loadin' a wagon with hides for shipping. I happened to know one of the boys. He wrangled for us, comin' up once. And I noticed all the hides I saw him tyin' up had a Gunlock brand.

"'How's this?' I says. 'Does Van Tambel peddle his steers down this way?' He winked at me an' laughed. 'This bunch,' says he, 'was poker steers.'"

When Lefever had made his delivery, he marched with Sawdy up to the hospital to call on their disabled side partner, Denison.

"If I knew I was going to lose my eyes, boys," said he, "that would be one thing. I could end it all or settle down to making baskets for a living. But Doc keeps telling me he's going to save my eyes; and that keeps me hoping—so the days and weeks hang on. All the same, it's tough, when you never were laid up before in your life. What's the news with you fellows?"

The visitors talked about the discovery Lefever had made of the hides at Thief River.

The visitors talked about the discovery Lefever had made of the hides at Thief River.

The half-blind ranchman listened intently, not with any noticeable excitement. But Sawdy imagined he could seen Denison lighting up.

"Seein' you're not fixed up just right yet, is there anything you'd like us to do about it?" Sawdy asked.

Smallest Human

Smallest adult human being in the world is claimed to be Harold Pyott, the English midget. His age is twice his height in inches, his forty-sixth birthday being in September. He weighs 24 pounds and can sit comfortably inside an ordinary silk hat. He is of strong and healthy constitution, and his mental faculties are fully developed. He is 12 inches less than the renowned Gen. Tom Thumb of Barnum fame. He has traveled round the world, touring Africa as far back as 1903, played twice in the pantomime, "Hop-o'-my-Thumb," appeared three times before royalty.

STAR DUST

★★★By VIRGINIA VALE★★★

THE life of a motion picture star leaves a good deal to be desired, no matter how much money or fame or fun he has. There's the little matter of the effect of the studio lights on the players' eyes, for example. You don't hear so much about "Klieg eyes" now as you used to, but the danger is there just the same.

William Powell has had really serious trouble with his eyes of late, and Eric Blore is so careful of his that he will work only a certain number of hours a day—about four or five. Can't afford to take risks, you know. Blore is a delightful person. Has an English accent off the screen as well as on. Goes visiting on other sets in his favorite costume, a resplendent lounging robe and dark glasses.

When motion picture actresses come to New York for the first time they usually state for publication that they just couldn't wait to see the sights — the places like Central park and the aquarium, that all tourists want to see. But in Anne Shirley's case that was what she did really want to do first. Born in New York, she was taken west when she was five, and when she took her first eastern trip not long ago she made a bee line for Central park.

She drove around it in the morning, dashed off for lunch, and returned to walk around it in the afternoon.

"Dodsworth" is a grand picture, one of those perfectly finished pictures that Goldwyn so often gives us. In the making they seem to have done something to Mary Astor's voice; it is a velvety contralto. Walter Huston gives a superb performance, of course, in spite of the fact that he played the role so often on the stage that he might be excused for being awfully tired of it.

On the RKO sets they call Helen Broderick and Ann Sothern "The Rocking Chair Twins," because the girls insist on having rocking chairs to rest in between shots, instead of those canvas-seated arm chairs with their names on the backs.

And there the girls sit and rock and rock, for all the world like old ladies on country hotel porches.

Lily Pons will try anything. She is working hard on "Street Girl" at present; remember when it was made as a silent picture with Betty Compson? (Incidentally, the title is going to be changed.) But she is also getting ready for appearances with the Metropolitan Opera company in New York, so she is learning to dance.

She will sing in "Coq d'Or," and will also dance. Heretofore when this opera was given, the singers sat on the sides of the stage and merely sang, and the action was taken care of by trained dancers. Lily's role was danced by the premiere ballerina, the last time the opera was performed.

Jeanette MacDonald seems to like long engagements. She was engaged to Bob Ritchie for years and years, but nothing came of it—perhaps because Gene Raymond came along. Now he and she are engaged, but say that they won't be married until June.

John Boles has a new movie contract, which he wouldn't sign unless it stipulated that he wouldn't have to sing! He has been rushing about the country making personal appearances, and doing so well that he had to play return engagements almost everywhere. His delightful wife, Marcellite, journeyed to New York, planning to see him there between hops.

Meanwhile his latest picture, "Craig's Wife," has been released. Rosalind Russell is the wife, a role which permits her to be as disagreeable as she possibly can.

The Famous Men Test

In the following test there are ten problems. In each one a man's name is given, followed by the names of four professions, vocations or avocations. Cross out the particular occupation or pursuit in which the man is or was most famous.

1. Arthur Brisbane—capitalist, artist, editor, composer.
2. Vernon Gomez — explorer, baseball player, physician, pianist.
3. Benjamin N. Cardozo—religious teacher, artist, jurist, financier.
4. Sinclair Lewis — composer, socialist, author, lawyer.
5. Nellie Melba—society leader, circus performer, soprano, newspaper woman.
6. Franchot Tone — composer, actor, artist, lawyer.
7. Fritz Kreisler—brewer, football coach, violinist, pianist.
8. Walter Hampden—financier, poet, inventor, actor.
9. Macdonald Smith—diplomat, golfer, football coach, banker.
10. James Whitcomb Riley — statesman, railroad builder, poet, pianist.

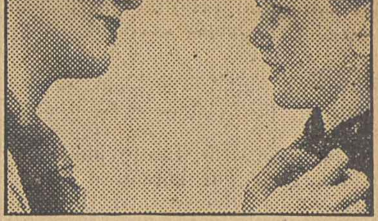
Busiest Highway

The department of public relations of the American Automobile association believes it is generally recognized that Route No. 1, running north and south along the Atlantic seaboard, actually carries more traffic on a yearly average than any other. It is also their belief that the area between New York city and New Jersey represents the greatest highway traffic density of any place in the country.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

If You Have a Child

ASK YOUR DOCTOR THIS



Ask Him Before Giving Your Child an Unknown Remedy

Practically any doctor you ask will warn: "Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first."

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy — "milk of magnesia," the standard of the world is established. For over half a century many doctors have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia." Safe for children. No other is "quite like it."

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Now also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:

SUCCEED WHERE YOU ARE, IS WORD OF HELEN KELLER

There is nothing like the pride of doing something worthwhile to make us forget the limitations, is there? We can do anything we really want to if we stick to it long enough. No matter how handicapped we are, we can always do something, if it is only a bright smile, or a kind word, or a helpful act.

Many of us make the mistake of thinking that if we were as unfortunate as our neighbors, we could live better and purer, and more useful lives. I have learned from experience that if we cannot succeed in our present position we cannot in any other. If we cannot help the world where we are, we cannot help it anywhere else. It is not the kind of environment we have, but the kind of thought we think every day and the ideals we are following—in a word, the kind of men and women we are.

We have already that within us which will respond to the right influence when that comes. Let us stand upright in our own lot, and try to discover beauty, service and happiness in our own lives.—Helen Keller LL.D.

GIRL SCOUTS

Don't forget that the week of October 25 is Girl Scout Week. Some girls are planning to wear their uniforms every day that week keeping them "spic and span". Most of the troops attend church October 25 in uniforms as it is Girl Scout Sunday.

A record in numbers of campers is reported by the Girl Scouts for the summer just ended. Over 100 camps, of which 146 were new, provided adventurous vacations for more than 100,000 girls in July and August. Two of the new camps were at extreme points of U. S. territory, one being at Balboa, canal zone, and the other atJuneau, Alaska. No major accident or illness was reported from any of the Girl Scout camps, which are conducted acording to standards established by National Headquarters.

Mrs. Niholas F. Brady, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Girl Scouts who recently returned from the World Conference of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts of Stockholm, Sweden, reported that an invitation has been issued to all member countries of the world association to send visitor campers to the United States to participate in an international encampment at Camp Edith Macy, the national training camp for Girl Scout leaders at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., the last two weeks of July, 1937.

MONTEVALLO TIES VINCENT

Last Friday, October 23, Montevallo came from behind to tie with Vincent 25-25. When the first half ended Vincent was leading 19-6. But in the last half Montevallo played inspired football and evened the score with three touchdowns and an entra point after Vincent had scored a touchdown in the first minute of play in the last half.

In the first half Vincent fooled Montevallo time and again with a short pass just over the line of scrimmage. Vincent proved that their reserves were almost as good as their first string men by substituting freely while Montevallo did not substitute so much.

Montevallo's offense and defense were not up to par in the first half but in the second half they were much better. Like Vicent, Montevallo's chief offensive weapon was the pass. Neither team seemed to be able to stop the other's passes.

The game was a thriller, and it gave one of the biggest crowds seen at a football game in Montevallo their money's worth. M. H. S. appreciates this kind of support.

Four Mile Home Club Holds Meeting

The Fourmile Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. J. W. Farmer, Sr., on Tuesday, October 13, at 2:00 o'clock.

After an interesting talk, Miss Nolen gave a demonstration of mattress making, which was enjoyed by each member present.

The club begins a new year under the leadership of our new president, Mrs. Frank McEwin. The following was elected as her co-workers: vice president, Mrs. Ruby Stone; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Ina Farmer; Demonstration Leaders, Mrs. Ruby Stone, and Mrs. Ethel Gardner; Program Committee, Mrs. Sula Davis, Miss Gladys Moore and Miss Ina Ray. After the refreshments were served the members all went home with a desire that each member be present at our next meeting, at the home of Mrs. Ruby Stone, on November 10, 1936.

The four standard railroad brotherhoods of Alabama have adopted resolutions opposing amendment No. 1, to be voted on November 3rd. Information against this amendment has been sent out to every member in Alabama.

Economic Highlights

During depression, there was almost an entire dearth of industrial construction. Industry naturally sat tight, and tried to hold on to what it had. In the darkest days, which occurred in 1932, the "new construction" sections of newspapers and periodicals practically vanished.

One sure sign of recovery is a revival of industrial building. And 1936 has witnessed an extreme encouraging trend in this field.

According to figures gathered by Engineering News-Record, construction contracts awarded during the first nine months of this year by the railroads were 84 per cent ahead of the same period last year—which in itself was a far better year for almost all industry than any since 1930. Automobile transportation company construction contracts were up 10 per cent. Public utility construction contracts rose 1393 per cent. Process industries showed an 89 per cent gain, and food industries advanced 41 per cent.

Automotive factory construction, as might be guessed, showed the greatest jump of all—2278 per cent. Aircraft factory building showed an increase of 105 per cent, textile building advanced 59 per cent, and general factories 41 per cent.

Only a few important industries showed drops in contracts awarded. These included metal refining and rolling, down 11 per cent; foundries, which dropped 47 per cent, and refrigeration and cold storage off 14 per cent.

Total industrial construction was 60 per cent above the comparative period last year, and amounted to an expenditure of $197,439,000 as against $123,101,000.

Looking at the picture in still another way, Business Week says that in the first nine months of this year, more factories have been built or started than in any full year since 1930, and textile machinery plants are going up in greater volume than in any year since 1929.

Reason for this greatly stimulated building, of course, is increased flow of orders to our major industries—an increase, in many instances, that is much larger than we anticipated even a short time ago. The utility industry is a case in point. In recent years, utility construction budgets have been held down, not only because of depressed conditions, but because executives felt that the Federal power program menaced their existence. Now power consumption has reached all-time highs, is steadily climbing. Result is that utilities have built new plants and revised old ones. It s expected that many utilities will announce big construction increases before 1936 fades into history.

Steel is in a similar position, with demand pressing mills hard. And, as everyone knows, the automobile industry is reaching almost undreamed-of levels, must rapidly expand. The industry hopes to produce over 5,000,000 units in 1937.

In a few industries, major changes in the product necessitate much new plant construction along with revamping of old plants and equipment. Such an industry is the aircraft. Obloscence in commercial airplanes is extraordinarily rapid—every year witnesses bigger, quieter, faster, more comfortable airliners.

So, in many instances, "America's capacity to consume" has run ahead of the existing "capacity to produce." That is one of the most encouraging signs in the business scene.

As the campaign enters its closing days, it is becoming the liveliest and most aggressive in many a year. Not since the war have both the principal figures in a presidential race referred so dierctly or cuttingly to each other. Recent Landon speeches offer the New Deal no quarter. And recent Roosevelt speeches have pulled no punches.

Hoover almost never referred to his opposition, either in 1928 or in 1932. And Harding and Coolidge did not have to put much effort into campaigning—their elections were foregone certainties, with the betting odds running as high as 40-to-1 in 1920.

The aggressiveness on the part of the candidates is serving to clear the air and bring the issues into relief. It is dissipating some of the tremendous vagueness that characterises both platforms, with their cautiously worded "escape clauses."

But there is considerable question as to whether the candidates' closing drives can enlist new followers in any number. Polls show relatively little change in recent weeks. All the polls indicate that the vote is extremely close in most of the big states, and that the winner will emerge victorious in only a very small percentage of the ballots, so far as the popular vote is concerned. Electoral vote is another matter—a candidate who received only a little over 50 per cent of the popular vote could attain a large majority in the Electoral College.

Before Getting Yourself Hog-Tied With a Twenty-Year Contract (That's a Long Time) Ask Yourself These Further Questions

By E. C. Easter

CHAPTER IX

LET us suppose that you have "joined" a co-operative electric membership association and have made the down payment on your dues. (Oh, yes, there are dues). Your association, let us say, is "doing business." Suppose any of the following things happen:

15. If a storm blows down hundreds of poles, as frequently happens in Alabama, who will reset these poles? How long will it take to restore service? How much will the repairs cost?

16. If there is an accident to someone, who will be liable?

17. If someone gets hurt from one of the Association's wires, can it stand to lose a damage suit? If you or some member of your family were the one hurt, would it do you any good to try to collect damages? Would your association have money enough to pay?

18. You would have to employ trained engineers and other technical experts to keep your association's electric lines in good condition. Can you stand to pay for enough experts to have the lines work safely and dependably?

19. If a transformer on the association's lines burns out, who will replace it and how quickly?

20. Have you the technical training and experience to make it wise for you to go into the electric light and power business?

You may be saying to yourself: "I had no idea there were so many things for me and my neighbors to consider." It would take a large book to list all the questions about carrying on an electrical business. We are mentioning only a few of them.

CHAPTER X

Still More Questions You Should Ask Yourself Before Joining a TVA Electric Membership Association

21. If you have installed an electric pump and it gets sand in the mechanism and refuses to work, will the Tennessee Valley Authority and the association get the pump to working properly for you? If not, will all of the other members of the association "co-operate" with you in fixing the pump, or are you going to have to get along the best you can by yourself?

22. Are you sure everybody will co-operate 100%, or is it going to happen that only a few members of the association will have to do all of the co-operating?

23. How much money will you have to spend wiring your house and other farm buildings to take care of the amount of equipment necessary for you to use your share of the 662 kilowatt hours, or any amount per month per mile of line the Tennessee Valley Authority may require?

24. If some of the members of the association fail to pay their bills on time or don't pay them at all, won't you have to help make up the amount they fail to pay?

25. Your association will be an Alabama corporation. What is to prevent the Legislature from imposing the same heavy taxes on it that other electric light and power business has to pay?

26. Will the amounts you pay your electric association help operate your schools? (Part of all money Alabama Power Company takes in goes to help operate the schools).

27. Do you want amateur electric service or do you prefer to have it from a trained organization?

Do You Want to PAY DOUBLE FOR HALF?

That important question will be among the points discussed in our next advertisement—the last of this series. Watch for it!

This advertisement is the fifth of a series which has also been printed in booklet form. T. W. Martin, President of Alabama Power Company, Birmingham, will cheerfully send a copy to any interested person requesting it.

SOME NEW FANGLED CONTRAPTIONS TO KEEP YOU FROM SUCKING YOUR THUMBS

Practical Sentiment

"Do you always stand up when the band plays 'The Star Spangled Banner'?"

"Of course," answered Miss Cayenne. "The old song holds a sentiment that I cannot resist. I wish thay would play it in passenger busses. It might make standing up seem easier."

Of Course!

The train was just pulling out when the breathless lad dashed to the ticket window. "Hurry up," he gasped, "gimme a roundtrip ticket!"

"Where to?"

Trying to Please

"Which do you think are more important, the rights of property or the rights of man?"

"Neither are of any consequence," replied Mr. Meekton, "compared to the rights of women."

Army Looms Tough for Navy, and Lion Will Roar Plenty

IF CONGRESS were in session right now the duty of all humane and forward-looking taxpayers would be quite plain. Letters could be rushed to the guardians of the public purse urging that Navy forthwith be provided with six battleships, a dozen cruisers and as many submarines as any little admiral's heart desires.

Of course that would cost a pretty penny but it would be worth it. This is a nation which yearns to keep its bluff seadogs happy and I greatly fear no other sop will be quite so effective in easing the discontent which must settle upon Annapolis sooner than usual this season.

I mention this as the result of viewing Army in some of its recent football enterprises. The Cadets seemed far better than they have seemed in any early recent season. What is more the line—the runt, right guard Kimbrell, stands six feet and weighs 175 pounds—has such a sheer, raw abundance of power that even a Pitt coach would be awed at the sight.

Naturally Gar Davidson's team is, at the moment, far from a smoothly functioning machine. General Pershing had that same trouble at the start of the World war when he was tossed 3,000,000 stalwart youngsters and stacked up against outfits which had been practicing for years. But the power and the reserves are there—where they mean the most in football—and it remains only to be seen whether proper plays can be provided along with backs to execute them.

Lou Little

Against Lou Little's Columbia Army showed little in the way of a running attack. This partly could have been due to the greasy field, the unwillingness to display cherished formations to eagerly peeping scouts, and to the fact that both teams had quick success from the "gamble for a touchdown or nothing" formula. Monk Meyer is a very good passer and he was better favored than his equally able opponent, Sid Luckman, in having skyscraping wings to grab his tosses. Then, too, his coaches seemed to have stressed this aerial preparation more than did the Columbia mentors who provided a better balanced attack.

In the second period, for instance, the way was paved for the tying touchdown by means of an aerial connection with Wilson standing on the line. On this play one side of the line stays in position until the ball is tossed to the receiver, then forms for interference down the field. Greasy Neale has been using it at Yale for several seasons—indeed the Elis scored a touchdown against Cornell with it.

It is not. It merely is a few degrees and seconds removed from the border line where illegality begins. Like that short, rifle toss over the line—first used in proper winning style by W. and J. years ago and again properly handled by Meyer and Hipps in time of need.

Defensively Army made mistakes—in mechanics as well as in cerebration—which could very well lose late season games. It is probable such defects can be remedied within another game or two. The real weakness right now exists in the backfield and there can be some wonder it was not long ago noted that Stromberg at right end has more real driving power than any Cadet ball carrier.

Columbia's problem is in the line, usually the place where Little-coached teams are at their best. Luckman, who seems likely to be the most popular football hero in local baseball parks this fall, needs more time to acquire big league savvy on the defense. That largely is because he can be drawn out of position.

Furey also is a back who would win the esteem of almost any coach for all that he weighs less than 170 pounds. Perhaps he does not catch the eye as quickly as did one or two other members of the famous Columbia football family but he is alert on the defense and may be the best interferer the Lions have had in several seasons.

Schulze, the rangy end, is another athlete who strengthens the old grad convictions that Columbia is back on its feet this year.

Household Questions

To protect paper when cleaning paint use a piece of heavy cardboard about 12 inches square, moving it along as you wash paint.

It Is My Aim

TO KEEP my health!
To do my work!
To live!
To see to it I grow and gain and give!
Never to look behind me for an hour!
To wait in weakness and to walk in power.
But always fronting forward to the light,
Always and always facing toward the right,
Robbed, starved, defeated, fallen wide astray,
On with what strength I have!
Back to the way!

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIS is the story of how America acquired a new emblem—that red poppy which you will be wearing on Armistice Day. Its flaming petals are symbols of the American blood that was shed on the battlefields of Europe during the war-torn years of 1914-18. But, more than that, it is a memorial which honors not only the men who died "over there" but also those who came back alive with the scars of that world tragedy engraved deep upon their bodies and minds—our disabled veterans.

This is also the story of how the American adoption of that emblem for Armistice Day has spread to other countries until the red poppy now has almost as much international significance as that other universal symbol—the Red Cross.

Finally, this is the story of an interesting coincidence. Rather, it is the story of two coincidences—and one of them is a shining example of how "history repeats itself."

The day was Saturday, November 9, 1918. Throughout America people were waiting—waiting for the news which would free many a home from fear and dread. Two days earlier their hopes had been raised to the skies, then dashed to the ground by that incident of the "false armistice." But now they knew the event was inevitable, that the war was almost over.

On that November morning a woman was sitting at a desk in Hamilton hall on the campus of Columbia university in New York City. She was Miss Moina Michael, a member of the Y. W. C. A. overseas headquarters staff. A soldier entered the room and placed a copy of a magazine on her desk. Leafing through it, she noticed a poem. She started to read:

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row . . ."

She read it through, then deeply stirred by the lines which had been penned by Col. John McCrae of the British army, she read it again and again. Then in sudden inspiration she seized a pen and a sheet of paper and wrote this reply to it:'

Oh! You who sleep in Flanders Fields,
Sleep sweet—to rise anew!
We caught the Torch you threw
And holding high, we keep the Faith
With all who died.
We cherish, too, the Poppy red
That grows on fields where valor led:
It seems to signal to the skies
That blood of heroes never dies.
But lends a lustre to the red
Of the flower that blooms above the dead
In Flanders Fields.
And now the Torch and Poppy red
We'll wear in honor of our dead.
Fear not that ye have died for naught;
We'll teach the lessons that ye wrought
In Flanders Fields.

When she had finished, she repeated to herself "the poppy red we'll wear in honor of our dead." She would do that herself and she would ask others to do it too. At that moment three overseas Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. workers, who had been attending a conference at Columbia, came into the room. They had brought her a check for $10 in appreciation of her efforts to make a model hostess house of their headquarters.

The First Coincidence

Immediately Miss Michael told them about the poem she had just read and the one she had written in reply to it. Furthermore she told them that the $10 would be spent to buy poppies for her friends to wear in honor of those who "lie in Flanders fields." They were as enthusiastic about the idea as she was. Returning to their conference, they spread the news among the other Y. M. an Y. W. workers. That afternoon everyone there was wearing a red poppy, provided by Miss Michael.

Thus the first coincidence in this story—a British army officers' poem, with its reference to a vivid and striking symbol, coming to the attention of an American woman just two days before the Armistice was signed; the visit of the war workers to her office at the moment when she was aglow with the inspiration of a great idea, and their gift which made it possible to put her plan into immediate effect.

MISS MOINA MICHAEL
"The Poppy Lady," Who Gave the Nation an Emblem for Armistice Day.

The next morning Miss Michael went to see her friend, Dean Talcott Williams of the Columbia school of journalism. She explained her idea to him. He was much impressed and offered to pass it along to a war workers' committee which was meeting that afternoon. On that committee were Mrs. Preston (the widow of President Cleveland), Rodman Wanamaker and other notables. Their indorsement of the idea would give its adoption a tremendous impetus. They indorsed it enthusiastically—so Dean Williams reported to Miss Michael after the meeting.

November 11—at last, the news for which everyone had been waiting. The Armistice was signed! The war was over! After the first thrill of victory had passed, after the tumult and shouting of the celebrations had subsided, people began to think solemnly, reverently of those who had helped win that victory but were denied the joy of knowing that the victory was won.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

America, thinking of them, turned a sympathetic ear to this woman who was giving all her energies to spreading the idea of the poppy as a national emblem. She wrote innumerable letters—to women's clubs, to patriotic organizations, to educational institutions, to civic bodies. "Out of every great event of the world has come an emblem." she said, "Into this war went many emblems: the flags of the nations, the Red Cross, the Red Triangle, the service flag and pin. Now out of this war should come some symbol perpetually to remind us and unfailingly to teach coming generations the value of the light of liberty and our debt to those who so valiantly saved it for us."

She pointed out that it was impossible to have triumphal arches or great memorials in all places from which came men who gave their lives in the war. But they could be honored by everyone, even the lowliest, by wearing the red poppy. As a result the poppy idea was introduced into many of the homecoming celebrations during 1919.

Adopted by Legion

On the eve of the Georgia state convention of the American Legion, August 19 and 20, 1920, in Augusta, Miss Michael went to the Legion headquarters in Atlanta and turned over to them her arguments concerning the adoption of the poppy. Charles M. Galliene of Post No. 1, Atlanta, took charge of the material and presented the movement to the convention. It was adopted and the delegation to the national convention was instructed to present it at Cleveland, Ohio, and to support the resolutions. The resolutions were presented to the national convention in September, 1920, and the poppy became the national American Legion memorial flower.

As the idea spread in this country, word of it was carried across the Atlantic. Mme. E. Guerin of Paris read Miss Michael's poem pledging to "keep the faith" and of her plan for wearing poppies to memorialize the sacrifices of the war. She immediately organized the American and French children's league and sold poppies for the benefit of war orphans in France.

An International Emblem

In an official report which she issued from Canada early in February she announced: "The World war veterans have sold 1,000,000 small poppies and 200,000 large ones, clearing $90,000 for their relief work and for the French, $80,000 to go to the poor French children of the battlefields."

In England the poppy program flourished tremendously. Earl Haig's British Legion adopted the selling and wearing of poppies in 1921 and since that time more than $11,000,000 has been cleared for ex-service men. In 1927 alone the British legionnaires sold 28,000,000 poppies and made a profit of $2,522,000. In 1928 the sales reached the $3,000,000 mark.

Instead of the poppy becoming a national emblem, as Miss Michael first dreamed, it has become an international emblem. In Europe, besides the British Isles and France, 19 countries wear the blood-colored blossoms in their lapels: Italy, Holland, Germany, Spain, Belgium, Sweden, Switzerland, Poland, Greece and Rumania. Poppies are even worn in Japan, China, Mexico, Asia Minor and in every country of North and South America.

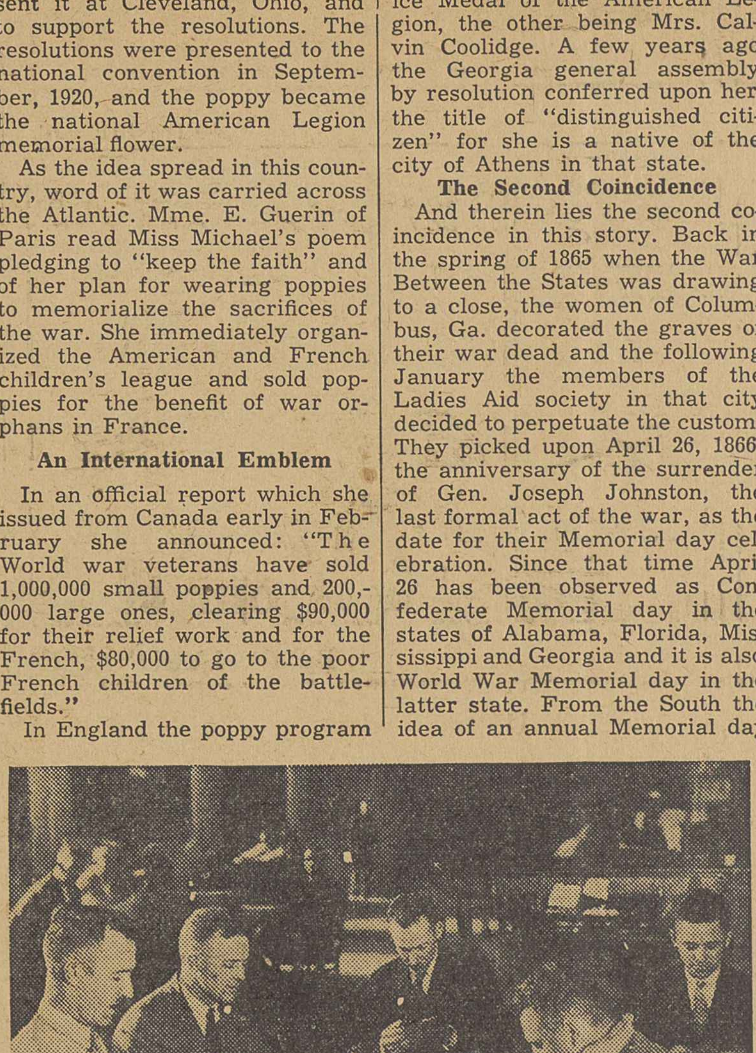
In this country the making of "buddy poppies," as they are called, has become an important factor in the disabled veterans' rehabilitation work. They are made by disabled ex-service men in hospitals in the East, at piece-work cost and the state departments of the Veterans of Foreign Wars all taken certain quotas. A small amount is deducted for national and state relief and the rest goes to the posts that sell the poppies to be used as their relief needs arise. The veterans are paid one and one-quarter cents for every poppy they make.

As for the woman who started all this — today the name of Moina Michael means "The Poppy Lady" throughout the world. She is one of two women who received the Distinguished Service Medal of the American Legion, the other being Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. A few years ago the Georgia general assembly by resolution conferred upon her the title of "distinguished citizen" for she is a native of the city of Athens in that state.

The Second Coincidence

And therein lies the second coincidence in this story. Back in the spring of 1865 when the War Between the States was drawing to a close, the women of Columbus, Ga. decorated the graves of their war dead and the following January the members of the Ladies Aid society in that city decided to perpetuate the custom. They picked upon April 26, 1866, the anniversary of the surrender of Gen. Joseph Johnston, the last formal act of the war, as the date for their Memorial day celebration. Since that time April 26 has been observed as Confederate Memorial day in the states of Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and Georgia and it is also World War Memorial day in the latter state. From the South the idea of an annual Memorial day for decorating the graves of the war dead spread to the North, even though a different day, May 30, was chosen.

But it was a group of Georgia women who gave to the nation the idea of Memorial day and it was a Georgia woman who gave to it the idea of the red poppy as a symbol of that other day of memory—Armistice Day.



Disabled World war veterans making "buddy poppies" to be sold throughout the country by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, the proceeds being devoted exclusively to welfare work among disabled veterans and ex-service men.

"The Man Who-O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AN EARLY "BLACK LEGION"

ON TREES were posted mysterious squares of paper, black, or white or red, summoning men to midnight meetings. At these meetings there were oaths and grips and pass-words.

That was more than three-quarters of a century ago, but members of the "Black Legion," who created such a furore early in 1936, would have felt pretty much at home in those meetings back in the forties and fifties. There they would have fraternized with members of "The Supreme Order of the Star-Spangled Banner," a secret society which grew into a political party, the Native Americans, with a platform of opposition to foreigners, the papacy, infidelity and socialism.

Later they became known as the Know Nothings because, when a member was questioned about the order, he invariably answered "I don't know." In New York and Pennsylvania they elected several men to congress and in 1847 they held a national convention at Philadelphia. There they nominated Gen. Henry Dearborn for vice-president and recommended, but did not formally nominate, Gen. Zachary Taylor for President. Taylor and Millard Fillmore, the Whig candidates, were elected in 1848.

In 1854-55 the Know Nothings carried Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Kentucky and California and looked forward to the election of 1856 with high hopes. Soon the party threw off its secret character and it became apparent that they were mostly Whigs. In February they held another convention in Philadelphia at which they formally renamed their party the American party. They nominated for President Millard Fillmore, the Whig vice-president who had served all but one month of the term to which Zachary Taylor had been elected, and gave him for a running mate Andrew Donelson of Tennessee, the ward of "Old Hickory" Jackson. Fillmore carried only one state in the election which sent James Buchanan, the Democratic candidate, to the White House and the Know Nothings passed out of the political picture soon afterwards.

"TO THE VICTORS—"

"TO THE victors belong the spoils!"

Although Andrew Jackson was the first exponent of that political creed, he was not the first man to express it in so many words. The man who did was William L. Marcy of New York, leader of a faction in the Democratic party when Polk was President.

The division in the Democratic ranks was over the distribution of federal patronage and it centered, as it has so often since, in New York state. The faction, led by Marcy, was called the "Hunkers" who were supported by Tammny and who were given that name because they were always inclined to hunger, or "hunker," for office.

The other faction, led by Silas Wright, was composed of disappointed Van Burenites — disappointed because Van Buren, whom Jackson had made his successor, had been refused a second term by the party which took Polk, a "dark horse," instead. This faction was called the "Barnburners," because, like the Dutch farmer in New York state who burned his barn to get rid of the rats in it, they declared they were ready to "burn their barns to get rid of the rats," the upstart "Hunkers."

As a matter of fact they did just that in the campaign of 1848. Opposed to slavery, they joined forces with the Liberty party, took the name of the Free Soil party and nominated Martin Van Buren and Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts. This split in the Democratic party resulted in a victory for Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate.

Along with "Hunker" and "Barnburner" is another interesting name once applied to the Democrats, growing out of the rivalry of these two factions. In the campaign of 1840 the Whigs called their opponents the Locofocos, because at a meeting of the New York Democrats the two factions were trying to get control of the meeting. One gang turned off the gas lights and in the darkness, the other gang, which had come prepared for just such a stunt, took from their pockets the new friction matches, called "locofocos," struck them and by thus lighting the room were able to continue the session and dominate it.

The First Psychologist

The history of psychology may be said to begin with Plato, who was the first influential scientist to draw a clear distinction between the mind and the body. Aristotle went farther than Plato in distinguishing different faculties of the mind and attempted to solve the relation of the mind and the body. His acute analysis of the human organism, "De Anima," remained the standard work on psychology for nearly 2,000 years.

Montgomery, Ala.—A new system of keeping case records was introduced at a series of three warden's meetings held in the State during the month of October.

The meetings, called annually by Conservation Commissioner, I. T. Quinn, were held at the Tutwiler Hotel in Birmingham on October 13, at the Jefferson Davis Hotel in Montgomery on October 16, and the the Cawthon Hotel in Mobile on October 20.

These meetings revealed that Graham Hixon, district game warden at Union Springs, had completed more cases than any other warden during the past year and that the team of Ted Cottrell and Marvin Whatley, working out of Birmingham, had compiled the highest team average.

The work of the wardens was discussed in detail by Commissioner Quinn, Chief Warden W. G. Wharton and Field Assistant, J. M. White, new regulations were carefully studied and other steps taken to improve the enforcement of the game and fish laws.

The meetings were arranged so that the wardens could attend and return to their districts the same day.

Montgomery, Ala.—The science of trapping slowly but surely is outsmarting the wily wolves that had everybody in Southeast Alabama believing that coyotes were raiding their farm lots.

Andy Ray, the Government trapper stationed at Hatchichubbee, in Russel County, is matching his cunning against that of the wolves and his score to date shows one male and three females.

Two of the latter were black and from four to five months old. They weighed about fifteen pounds each. The third female was an old mother wolf. She was gray and weighed 50 to 55 pounds. The male was a big black fellow weighing in the neighborhood of 45 pounds.

Although Ray originally was sent into Alabama to trap coyotes, the coyotes have turned out to be wolves and are not near as numerous as first pictured. The wolves, he says, have been chased by dogs so much that they have no certain place to stay and roam far and wide.

However, Ray has pitched camp at Hatchechubbee, and expects to stay camped on their trail until he rids this section of the State of these animals. He has planted out from two to three dozen traps and, although there is no way of estimating how long the job will require, he is sure to get the fugitives before he quits.

Montgomery—"I feel that the president's re-election is certain—that New York will give him a quarter of a million majority, and that there is an even chance of his carrying Pennsylvania," declared Governor Bibb Graves early this week on his return from a speaking tour of two weeks in Missouri, Kentucky and Pennsylvania.

In an address delivered at Marietta, Pa., last week, the Governor was credited with coining one of the most humorous and sage observations of the entire Presidential campaign.

"There has been a joke on the donkey and elephant—the animals that have been used to cartoon the two great parties. The donkey is at least good for Service—the elephant good only for show," he remarked.

"There never has been a time when the elephant was such a fit emblem to show for the Republican party as the present. You know the elephant is the only animal in the world that is tail at both ends—not headed for anywhere, going both ways from nowhere. Today he truly typifies the Party that in the Progressive West is headed from Wall Street, N. Y., and is at the same time the Party that is Conservative in Wall Street and is headed from the Progressive West.

"Carping critics try to show that in some ways the Democratic Party has not lived up to the Chicago platform. These critics may have read, but surely they never understood the Chicago platform.

"The master taught us of the Pharisees and hypocrites that strain the gnats and swallow camels, and his lessons are eternally true.

"That platform has as its last plank a short simple sentence that is the foundation of it all. In these simple words: "We advocate the continuous responsibility of government for human welfare, especially the protection of children." Until the adoption of America's Second Declaration of Independence in the Philadelphia platform, that was the greatest Magna Charta of human rights in our times. Never before in my time had any party had the heart, the vision and the courage to go to the nation, putting the human first of all earthly considerations.

"Let these critics show one single thing in all this administration where there has been the deviation of one iota from the fundamental responsibility of government to human welfare. Let these Pharisees and hypocrits first confront the doctrine of the Apostle Paul, who said: 'the letter killeth but the spirit giveth life.' To that spirit of human welfare there has been an unswerving devotion and an efficient performance unequalled in the politics."

Lancaster, Pa.—That the Literary Digest poll is misleading even in Pennsylvania, was declared by Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama in a statement here.

"Most of the people it polled were those that had voted Republican four years ago," Governor Graves asserted. His statement follows.

The Republican bosses are desparate. Never before have we seen a campaign management try in so many ways to deceive our American people. Take the selected poll of the Literary Digest. It uses figures which show that in the last election Hoover should have beaten Roosevelt in every state in the Union. It determined the result of the poll by picking the people it polled. Most of the people it polled were those that had voted Republican four years ago. In Massachusetts it polled 24,000 who then voted Republican to 8,000 who then voted Democratic. If those polls were a fair sample of the vote, Massachusetts should have gone for Hoover 3 to 1. Out of every 29 who had voted Republican there four years ago, one is counted in last week's Digest poll. While only one of every 88 who had voted Democratic there four years ago is counted in that last week's Digest poll. The poll is carefully selected 29 to 88, and thus makes the false appear true. It was really a Democratic landslide.

Come over and look at New York. Of those polled, 69,000 had voted Republican four years ago to 64,000 that had then voted Democratic. If these polls were a fair sample, New York should have given 600,000 majority for Hoover, but the fact is it went 600,000 for Roosevelt. Look on to Ohio, Indiana, Illinois,, Michigan, Missouri, and clear on to California.

In each and every one the poll is carefully selected in the same way. This tabulation is misleading and if not analyzed, may catch some little fellow by the band-wagon bally-hoo, and may encourage some big fellows to contribute large sums of money to buy the election corrupt the ballot and destroy the foundation of Americanism. In Pennsylvania this selection is not so bad, but even here, look and you will see that 1-17th of all the Republican votes of four years ago is counted in this poll, while only 1-19 of the then Democratic vote is counted. Eliminate this partial selection and this great State is neck and neck now, and two weeks from now will surely line up on the Human Side.

It might be added that this partial selection is made to look plausible in national totals by including an undue proportion of Democratic votes in such States as Texas.

Governor Graves will speak at Clanton Wednesday evening, October 28th, and at Jasper Saturday, October 31.

Montgomery—Mrs. Janette Kerlin, of Birmingham, was seated as worthy grand matron of the Alabama chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, at the conclusion of the 36th annual session of the order last Thursday.

Mrs. Dorothy Gillette, of Montgomery, was elected grand conductress, and Buford McGowan, Birmingham, was chosen associate grand patron. John Wilson, of Florence, was advanced to worthy grand patron, succeeding Fitz L. Hoffman, Birmingham. Mrs. Kerlin succeeds Mrs. Irma Southall, Mobile, who presided through the convention, attended by approximately 1,000 members from all sections of the State.

Montgomery — Governor Bibb Graves is expected to ask the Alabama Supreme Court this week for an advisory opinion concerning the validity of the Harrison Act, by which the State Highway Department may issue $2,000,000 of interest-bearing warrants to match federal funds for road construction.

Under provisions of the act, one half a cent of the State's share of gasoline taxes would be hypothecated for this purpose. The Governor hopes to float the $2,000,000 warrant issue which would be matched by an equal amount from the Federal Government, thus securing a $4,000,000 road building program for the State.

Montgomery—The income of the farmers of Alabama increased $3,006,,000 the first eight months of 1936 compared with the corresponding period of 1935, according to R. J. Goode, commissioner of the State Department of Agriculture and Industries.

The 1936 income from the sale of farm products for the January-August period was $43,921,000, commissioner Goode said. Last year it was $40,915,000.

In the eight months period of this year, Alabama crops brought $31,562,000 and the income from livestock and livestock products was $12,359,000. For the same eight months of 1935, the total for crops was $30,687,000, and for livestock, $10,228,000.

The national farm income for the first eight months of 1936 according to the Agricultural Economics Bureau, was $4,472,000,000, compared with $3,775,000,000 for the same period of 1935.

Montgomery—A match carelessly thrown on a bale of cotton by a five-year-old negro boy, Lozelle Bell, caused the fire that destroyed the Southeastern Railroad's passenger depot at Union Springs Sunday afternoon, October 18th, with a resulting loss of $25,000, according to a report of Chief Deputy Fire Marshall, H. J. McDowell.

The small negro said he "didn't know it would hurt anything," the report added.

THE DOCTRINE OF SIN

The English word sin is derived from a Greek word, anomia, which means lawlessness in Divine government, law and order. Therefore sin means the transgression of Divine laws, with the logical result of a death penalty, manifested in the corruption of the human nature and the degeneration of the moral character of all men, women, and children born in the world.

Sin is divided. (1) Original sin—That corruption of the human nature of all men which was caused by the temptation and fall of Adam and Eve, of Federal head, in the Garden of Eden, some 6,000 years ago when God said to them: "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." They did eat, and the penalty fell upon them and all of their decendants.

Exodus 2:3—For I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquities of the father upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me."

(2) Actual sin—Webster says: Actual sin is that act of a moral agent in the violation of a known rule of duty. The Westminster Confession says: Actal sin is any want of conformity unto, or transgression of the law of God.

We say that actual sin is a disobedience to the will of God, our Father, with the rejection of the ten Commandments and Christ's Sermon on the Mount.

Actual sin is divided. (1) The sin of omission—This law is broken by neglect to accept Jesus Christ for personal salvation. Hebrews 2:3 "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation." And, "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is a sin."

(2) The sin of Commission—This sin is committed as an act of any moral agent, by the transgression of any law of God, in thought, word or deed, expressed or unexpressed, as God taught Moses in the Ten Commandments and Christ taught in the Sermon on the Mount.

Warning—Life here is short and Eternity there is long, therefore, let us hear Solomon, in Ecclesiastes 12: 13-14. Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter, Fear God, and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."—John A. May.

Hayes Chevrolet Agency Is Purchased By C. D. Tatum

FORMER TUSCALOOSA MAN TO OPERATE CHEVROLET AGENCY HERE

Announcement is made this week of the sale of the Hayes Chevrolet Company, of Montevallo, to Mr. C. D. Tatum, formerly of Tuscaloosa, who will in the future operate the business as the Tatum Chevrolet Company, Mr. Tatum being general manager.

The location of the business will be the same as that formerly occupied by Hayes. The place is being renovated throughout, and will be ready on Saturday to present the new 1937 Chevrolet in grand style.

Mr. Tatum is an automobile man of several years experience in the business. At one time he was Chevrolet dealer in Centreville, later at Jasper, and more recently has been engaged in the automobile business at Tuscaloosa for a period of two years.

The many friends of Barney Burnett, former manager of the business for Hayes will be glad of the announcement of the new owner of the business that Mr. Burnett will continue with the new organization in the capacity of general sales manager. Other members of the sales force will be Burr Harris, Cassie Blankenship, John Hardy, and Ike Harrison. "Turkey" Burnett will continue his duties as book keeper.

In the shop Phillip Arnold will continue in his capacity as service manager and shop foreman. He will have with him in this department Howard Weaver, W. A. Estes, and L. L. Scarborough. Hiene Chappel, the colored wash boy, will continue to function as heretofore, in the various and sundry capacities that fall to his lot.

The coming of Mr. Tatum to Montevallo is hailed as a wholesome addition to the business interests of the community. He was a member of the Exchange Club, of Tuscaloosa, taking an active interest in the affairs of the club. This fact at first identifies him as a man who will promptly take his place in support and advancement of civic affairs in Montevallo.

Mr. Tatum extends a cordial invitation to the many friends and customers of Chevrolet to continue to allow him and his organization to serve them. The entire public is especially invited to visit the Tatum showrooms on next Saturday, November 7, and see the wonderful new Chevrolet for 1937.

PLUMBING SERVICE

Adrian Wooley and R. L. Wooley announce that they will engage in the plumbing business in Montevallo, offering prompt and efficient service to all who need work in this line.

Call phone 154 for engagements. Adrain Wooley has been connected with the Southern Railway shops at Wilton for some time. R. L. Wooley has heretofore been with Maywood Dairy.

TURKEY SHOOTING

Cecil Wells, Fred Frost and Bob Holcomb, as a committee of the American Legion, are planning a turkey shoot to be staged at Fancher Field, Montevallo, on Saturday, November 21.

The event will begin about nine o'clock in the morning ,and continue throughout the day, until about 4 in the afternoon.

About twenty nice young fat turkeys will be ut up as the target for the one who can display the best marksmanship. Remember the date, and watch for further detailed announcements.

The streets of Montevallo were spattered with blood Sunday night as the result of a cutting scrape in which a negro woman severely slashed a negro man.

C. D. TATUM

Mr. Tatum has bought out the business of Hayes Chevrolet Company in Montevallo, and will continue to operate the business at the same location, under the name of Tatum Chevrolet Company.

Hallowe'en Party Saturday Night

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Stinson, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Love and Miss Beatrice Fancher entertained at their home Friday night with a Hallowe'en tacky party from 9 til 2. The Hallowe'en motif was carried out with decorations of black cats on the walls, and gold and black streamers suspended from the center lights. Radio music was concealed in a hut built of corn stalks and topped with a Jack O' Lantern made of a huge pumpkin. Peanuts were placed at convenient places for everyone to enjoy, also orange fruit jello and chocolate cookies were served to the guests. Round and square dancing offered diversion during the evening from several unique tricks. Mrs. Roy Hicks won the prize for the tackiest costume, while Mr. Otis Freeman took honor for his sex. Mrs. Hicks was attired in a long-waisted short skirted model of blue flowered chiffon with black velvet collar and pink sash. She wore sport sox with sandals. Mr. Freeman was attired as a typical country boy, with the usual patches and straw hat, ragged coat, etc.

Those enjoying this unique party were:

WEEK OF PRAYER OBSERVED AT METHODIST CHURCH

The Methodist Missionary Society observed the Week-Of-Prayer on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The subject of these retreats was "The Quest of God Through Worship."

Leaders of these programs were: Mrs. J. A. Moore Monday, Mrs. T. H. Napier Tuesday, Mrs. O. R. Burns, Wednesday.

Special contributions were given for Home and Foreign Missions. Offerings from the Week of Prayer to the Foreign Special this year will go to Hiroshima Girls School in Japan. This college, wihch accommodates about 100 girls, is to be relocated and rebuilt.

ENGAGEMENT SEEN AS BIG EVENT OF THE YEAR

A contract signed by the American Association of University Woemn will bring to the Strand Theatre, Tuesday November 17th, "The Human Adventure," an eight reel talking picture which sketches the rise of man from savagry to civilization. This picture was produced by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, and is being shown before schools in various parts of the country.

I regard this engagement of "The Human Adventure" as one of the finest educational pictures," declared Dr. Hallie Farmer, head of the History Department of Alabama College. The Human Adventure is not just another talking picture. It is, in reality, the air cruise and expedition into the lands where man rose up out of the jungles and made his conquest of civilization. I know of no other way in which we can gain as rapid and clear conception of ancient man and his achievements as by seeing "The Human Adventure."

A special morning performance will be given in order that every pupil of Montevallo schools, and many of the neighboring county schools may take advantage of one of the greatest educational oportunities that could come to any school.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Circle No. 1, of W. M. S. will meet Monday, November 9th, at 3:00 o'clock, for a regular meeting. Mrs. G. T. Towery and Mrs. E. E. Craig are to be the hostesses at this time.

MASONIC CONFERENCE

The Shelby County Masonic Conference will meet at Columbiana on next Tuesday, November 10. All Masons are welcome and invited to attend.

Armistice Day Program At Palmer Hall

Sponsored by the local organizations of the American Legion and Auxiliary, an Armistice Day program will be presented next Wednesday, November 11, at Palmer Hall, at 11 a.m., featuring an address by Hon. Lister Hill, representative of the Second Alabama District in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. Reese Woolley, chairman of the legion committee on arrangements, states that Alabama College, the High school and the Elementary school, will cooperate with the program, which will occupy one hour, from 11 to 12 o'clock.

The citizens of Montevallo and vicinity are earnestly requested to attend the program. It will be an unusual treat to hear Congressman Hill, and every person in Montevallo should do so.

MONTEVALLO WINS AGAIN

On Friday, October 31, Montevallo emerged the victor of the Montevallo-Clanton game. Though Montevallo won, they didn't seem to be getting the breaks. Montevallo played much harder against Clanton than they did against Vincent, but they were still not playing the type of game they had played against several other opponents.

Clanton's team was organized around their quarterback, Williamson, and a fast little halfback named Armstrong. These two backs did almost all the running for Clanton. Clanton made their touchdown in the fourth quarter, when, after a series of penalties Williamson drove over for the score.

Montevallo's passing attack won the game for them. Both touchdowns were made on passes from Lee to Hartley. Montevallo now has two sets of guards that are of almost equal ability; consequently, Coach Hicks was able to keep fresh guards in play during the game. Captain Lee's punting was probably the best he has ever done in a game. Montevallo failed to convert either of her extra points, thereby leaving the score 12-6 in Montevallo's favor.

MONTEVALLO UNDEFEATED

Word was received from the principal of the Jones Valley High School, that they had played a man who was over-age in the Montevallo-Jones Valley game, thereby forfeiting the game to Montevallo. He also stated that Jones Valley wanted a game with Montevallo under the same conditions as this previous game (same date, time, place, etc.)

PIPER NEXT FOE

Next Friday Montevallo plays probably the toughest opponent on their schedule, excet Jones Valley. Piper has one of the best charging lines in this section and with their fast backfield behind it, Montevallo will have to play the best game of their career to beat Piper. This game will be played on Friday, November 6th, at Piper.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

During the worship service, which begins at 11 o'clock a.m., on Sunday, November 8th, the pastor will use as his sermon theme "Brotherhood First." One might well ask, in these days of confusion, "What is important in Religion—in Life?" In his sermon Sunday morning, Mr. Cox will endeavor to interpret the mind of Christ himself in answering this profound question. Also a special vocal selection, "I Will Extol Thee, O Lord," by Liddle, will be rendered by Miss Mary Newman Graves, of Alabama College. You are cordially invited and urged to participate in our worship.

The Church School and the Christian Endeavor Society will convene in the church annex at 9:45 a.m. and 6:45 p. m., respetively. Both of these organizations are making wonderful strides toward their objectives. It is our desire to be of service to as many of our community as possible. You, too, can find a place among us and discover a "lift" for your own daily living. Come and bring a friend with you.

LUNCHEON KNITTING CLUB ORGANIZED

A luncheon knitting club composed of popular matrons, of Montevallo, has been organized. The first meeting was held at the home of Mrs. E. P. Hood on Wednesday, October 28. A delicious lunch was served to the folloying at 1:00 o'clock: Mesdames. E. H. Wills, W. J. Kennerly, Frances Givhan, Bill Tidwell, G. T. Towery, F. W. Lacey, L. C. Parnell, and E. P. Hood. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Frances Givhan.

Mrs. R. A. Reid and Mrs. M. P. Jeter shopped in Birmingham last Wednesday.

Achievements Of Red Cross In Alabama For Past Year

ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP ROLL CALL IN SHELBY COUNTY BEGINS ARMISTICE DAY AND EXTENDS TO THANKSGIVING DAY

Fire, floods and the back lash of the lethal, twisting winds which tore through the South last spring combined to boost Alabama's 1936 disaster rating higher than it has been in years, Miss Myrtle Brooke, chairman of the Shelby County Chapter said today in her annual summation of Red Cross accomplishments in Alabama.

"Five times the crushing hand of disaster struck the State," she said. "And though these catastrophes were not so severe as those which Tupelo, Gainesville and other places in the South this past spring, they nevertheless brought death to 10 persons, injured hundreds and left many homeless in their wake.

"The first blow fell on January 18th when a tornado swept through DeKalb County. Three weeks later rivers and creeks in Dallas County, swollen by early rains, forced hundreds of people from their homes. Nine hundred people received Red Cross aid during and following the flood. Then, during the first week in April, two tornadoes, only 48 hours apart, twisted and tore through North Pickens and Colbert Counties. The Colbert County twister struck late at night, an hour after it had leveled Tupelo, Mississippi. One person was killed in the County and many injured. In the middle of May a fire in Huntsville added another 58 names to the list of those aided.

"In all, the disaster toll in Alabama took a score of lives, destroying over 50 homes and necessitated Red Cross relief for over 6,000 people.

"Though less spectacular than disaster relief, other Red Cross achievements in the State are much more pleasant and gratifying to contemplate," she continued. "These include a very substantial increase in Junior Red Cross membership and an equally gratifying increase in First Aid, Life Saving and Home Hygiene instruction.

"Alabama's Junior membership made perhaps the largest gain the State has ever known in a single year. The total enrollment of boys and girls in this organization whose aim is to instill the habit of doing good for others and the fostering of international good will, jumped from 82,146 to 105,642.

"Alabama's Juniors, with their 8,351,289 fellow members throughout the country, assisted in raising many thousands of dollars for the relief of young storm and flood sufferers this spring. Their activities included sending books, toys, clothing and similar gifts to children in the stricken areas.

"Few organizations equal the record growth achievements shown by the American Junior Red Cross. Today its 8,351,289 members are scattered through 34,882 elementary, Junior high and Senior high schools; of this number 599,055 boys and girls were enrolled during the past year.

"During the year Alabama Chapters continued active in behalf of War Veterans and men in active military service. In the twelve month's period, 3,173 cases of service or ex-service men or their families were given some form of assistance by the Red Cross in Alabama. Nationally, a total of 256,988 ex-service and service men were helped by the Red Cross throughout the country.

"In first aid classes throughout the State last year 2,631 men, women and children were taught the proper emergency treatment for accidental injuries. This reresents an increase of 642 over the certificates awarded in 1935. During the same period a total of 912 persons learned Red Cross life saving and water safety, while 141 Life Saving Examiners were re-appointed after additional instruction.

"In Birmingham, 300 WPA workers were taught First Aid. At the same time, boys in the Ft. McClellan CCC Camp at Anniston, received life saving instruction from certain camp leaders who attended Red Cross Aquatic schools of District Life Saving Classes in the summer of 1935 and early in 1936.

"Similarly, from camps all over the country, leaders attended these schools and then returned to their camps to instruct fellow workers.

"Throughout the State, 46 chapters are participating in the Red Cross Home and Farm Accident Prevention Program, seeking to remove the many accident hazards which have placed the home and farm first in the number of accidental deaths and injuries. Twenty-five hundred chapters all over the country are carrying on similar programs.

"Alabama also has eight highway emergency first aid stations in operation and another 34 ready to open shortly," she said. "This is part of the Red Cross plan to establish First Aid units on highways all over the nation so that immediate treatment may be given those injured on the highways. Altogether, over 1,000 such stations are now in operation in 45 states, and 3,500 others have been planned.

"In the field of health, nursing care was given 177 persons by Red-Cross health nurses in the state, and a total of 1,282 to or in behalf of the sick were made. At the same time over 180 women and girls received Red Cross certificates for successfully completing the course in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick. And in numerous Alabama chapters projects in pellagra control, diphtheria immunization, oral hygiene and similar activities were continued.

"In addition to these many activities," Miss Brooke said in conclusion, "social volunteer services were carried on by chapters all over the state. These included the making of hundreds of garments for needy, surgical dressings, renovating and collecting clothing for disaster victims, producing braille books for the blind and similar activities.

"The work of the Red Cross goes forward daily in your name, made possible through your annual membership dues. This is your organization—the people's Red Cross—it represents you; in times of emergency it does for the victims of disaster that which you yourself would do, were it possible for you to visit each one of them individually.

"Here in Shelby County the Red Cross Roll Call starts November 11. Within the next few days, a Roll Call worker will call for your membership dues. Be prepared—we need your help."

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Wilson, of Clanton, are spending a few days with their sons, P. C. and Bloomer Wilson.

Miss Mary Nell Lewis, of Birmingham was the week end guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lewis Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Christian, of Columbiana, motored over Sunday afternoon for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Latham.

Recognition For Alabama College Study

Montevallo, Ala.—Marked recognition has come to a recent publication of Alabama College, "A Study of the Employability of Women in Alabama, 1929-1935." Dr. Minnie L. Steckel, of the college faculty, who made the analysis and interpretation of data reveals that among persons of national reputation showing interest in the study is Miss Kathryn M. Williams, Haverford, Pennsylvania, executive secretary of Pi Lambda Theta, national education fraternity for women, who has written over sixty copies of this publication to be used in the program of her organization for the coming year.

This study of women's employment experience and opportunities in Alabama was sponsored by both the National and the Alabama Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, which secured the services of Dr. Iva Lowther Peters, chairman of the national committee on employability of women, as director of the project.

Pi Lambda Theta, the education fraternity which will use the Alabama College publication as a text for study this year, has 32 chapters in the country's leading universities, and 17 alumnae chapters. Its national president is Miss Bess Goodkoontz, of the Office of Education, Department of Interior, Washington, D. C.

Recognition has come also from national figures in the field of education and social service, among them Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, who wrote for additional copies; William H. Bristow, general secretary, National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Illen S. Woodward, assistant administrator, Works Progress Administration, Washington.

MONTEVALLO STUDY CLUB MET ON OCTOBER 28

The Montevallo Study Club met on Wednesday, October 28, for its second meeting of the club year. Mrs. E. H. Wills and Mrs. Frances P. Givhan were hostesses at the home of Mrs. Wills.

All members of the club were present for the meeting. The club was very glad to welcome Mrs. G. T. Towery as a new member.

Mrs. E. D. Reynolds, President of the club, called the meeting to order and presided over the business session.

Mrs. L. C. Parnell, program leader, announced that the topic of the program was "Woman's Contribution to Music". Mrs. Givhan played two piano solos and Miss Mary Newman Graves, student at Alabama College, sang two songs that were composed by a former Alabama College student. Mrs. N. E. Phillips discussed in a most interesting manner, "The Life of Madame Ernestine Schuman Heink."

At the conclusion of the program, the hostesses served refreshments to sixteen members.

HOFFMAN'S NEW STORE

Hoffman's new 5c to $5 Store is about ready to open for business in Montevallo at the former location of E. Baer. The store fixtures and stock are being installed this week and it will not be long until this new business will open its doors with the finest variety of merchandise ever seen here.

MEN'S CLASS

The Men's Brotherhood Class will meet next Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock at the Strand Theatre.

The speaker will be Mrs. Mary McCoy, who will have for her subject, "The Christian Social Teachings in Relation With the State."

Mrs. Mattie Hubbard and daughter, Cleophus, were week end visitors to Talladega. Mrs. Hubbard has an appointment with Mrs. Lola Horn.

Dr. Keller Pleads For Education

STATE SUPT. URGES EARMARKED FUNDS FOR SCHOOLS

The Legislature will meet to raise more funds, but unless education people watch out, the money will be used for other purposes, Dr. J. A. Keller, State Superintendent of Education, told a joint meeting of P.-T. A. and A. E. A. members from eight counties in the Birmingham area Saturday.

Charging that education in Alabama is faring as badly as education in Governor Landon'sKansas, Keller said that these two states, along with Georgia, are the laughing stock of the nation's educational people.

He struck out also at the campaign of Harry M. Ayers, Anniston newspaper publisher, toward unification of State Colleges. Keller said Rotary's governor was stumping the State preaching that unification of colleges would save $1,000,000, when in fact the State last year spent $700,000 on higher education.

More than 500 parents and teachers and school officials were in Montevallo for the morning and afternoon sessions. Dinner on the grounds was served by the P.-T. A. organizations and Alabama College. Garland S. Smith, Vernon, president of the Alabama Education Association, in the morning address, declared that Alabama's shame in having the shortest school term last year of any state in the Union was not the result of poverty, but the result of parents failure to demand of their elected representatives a decent standard of education for their children.

Other talks were by Frank L. Grove, secretary of the A. E. A., who spoke on teacher's tenure and retirement, and by Patterson Hicks, of Chilton County High School, Clanton, who discussed the work of the commission on ethics.

SPECIAL LEGION MEETING ON NOVEMBER 19TH

A special joint meeting of the American Legion and Auxiliary is announced for Thursday night, November 17, at the Legion hut in Montevallo. Visiting representatives of the Legion and Auxiliary from Calera and Columbiana are expected.

Honored guests for the occasion will be Dr. Austin, vice commander of the Alabama Department, and Mrs. Richard Redwood, State President of the Auxiliary.

Refreshments will be served by the ladies of the Montevallo unit of the Auxiliary. All World War veterans and their ladies are urged to attend.

MISS MARGARET HODO IS BRIDE OF PERCY WALBURN

The marriage of Miss Margaret Hodo, daughter of Mr. Henry Gunter Hodo, of Millport, Alabama, to Mr. Percy Walburn, of Bessemer, was solemnized Saturday, October 31, in Marion, Alabama. Rev. S. H. Jones performed the impressive ring ceremony in his study at 4:00 o'clock.

The bride was gowned in a smart brown jacket frock of corded crepe with trimming in stitched braid. Her accessories were of brown doe skin with gold trimmings. Her bouquet was yellow roses.

After a short wedding trip to New Orleans, Louisiana, Mr. and Mrs. Walburn will be at home in Montevallo, where they have an apartment in the home of Mrs. Bessie Hoskins.

The bride is a graduate of Judson College and has her Masters' Degree from the University of Chicago. She is now connected with the Public Welfare as a Community Worker. She possessas a sweet personality that has endeared her to many friends.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walburn, of Bessemer. He, has business connections with the Wilson Company, of Birmingham.

Trade Balance for Nine Months Is Unfavorable—Mrs. "Wally" Simpson Gets Divorce—Goering Launches Nazi Economic Plan.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

EXPORTS of manufactured goods and raw materials exceeded imports into the United States during September by more than four million dollars, according to a report released by Secretary of Commerce Roper. But the flow the other way was so strong during the previous three months that the country suffered an unfavorable balance of trade during the first nine months of the year amounting to $33,136,000. This is in contrast with a favorable balance of $66,496,000 in the corresponding period of 1935.

Secretary Roper

Roper minimized the situation, declaring that heavy exports of raw cotton, tobacco and automobiles would probably bring the trade balance more into line with previous years. Pressed for further explanation Roper insisted that "our government as such does not compete with other governments in the selling of goods," and this was the province of private business. On reciprocal trade agreements he was mum.

"We'd like to end the year with a favorable trade balance, naturally," he said, "but we are going through a period of study and readjustment in world trade."

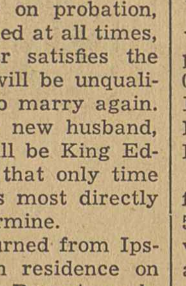
In fact, Roper found the increase in import trade to be "encouraging." He said that it showed our industries were buying raw materials abroad for expansion of their production in this country. Heavy increases in wheat and meats resulted from the drouth, according to Roper, rather than from the killing of six million pigs and nonraising of grain under the AAA.

UNCLE SAM'S nephews and nieces now number 128,429,000, according to the estimate of Director William L. Austin of the bureau of census. The new figure, as of July 1, represented an increase of 908,000 or 0.71 per cent, since July 1, 1935. It was based on the number of births and deaths during the year ending June 30, 1936, and the excess of immigration over emigration.

Births exceeded deaths by 899,956 and the net immigration was 8,044, according to the data taken by Austin. The population figure on the basis of the 1930 census was 122,775,046, and the biggest annual increase since then was 1,022,000, for the year ending July 1, 1931.

The bureau of agricultural economics also has been doing some population estimating. It says the back to the farm movement of the depression years has halted and that the farm population remained practically stationary during 1935, being 31,809,000 at the end of that year. This figure, the bureau says, was only slightly greater than in 1920 and "somewhat less" than in 1910.

PROCEEDINGS lasting nineteen minutes in the court of assizes at Ipswich, England, sufficed to give marital freedom to Mrs. "Wally" Simpson. Justice Sir Anthony Hawke heard neatly arranged evidence of the infidelity of Ernest Simpson, who was not represented, and gruffly gave a decree nisi to the attractive American woman who has been and is the close friend of King Edward VIII. For six months she will be on probation, technically chaperoned at all times, and if her behavior satisfies the king's proctor she will be unqualifiedly free April 2 to marry again. Whether or not her new husband, if she takes one, will be King Edward is a question that only time and the two persons most directly concerned can determine.



Mrs. Simpson.

Mrs. Simpson returned from Ipswich to her London residence on Cumberland terrace, Regents park, and there told interviewers that she was angered and humiliated by the international sensation her divorce has caused. She said she might go abroad for a time but that she would never return to the United States because of "all the nasty things" said of her here.

The Week, a radical London weekly, was the first English newspaper to carry an open reference to Mrs. Simpson's friendship with King Edward. The article was at the same time a denunciation of the American ress for giving the story such prom-ce and of the British press for essing it entirely. It also made that there would be widepposition to a marriage

SPURRED to quick action by the new accord between Germany and Italy, Leon Blum's popular front cabinet approved a large increase in France's military air force, already reputed to be one of the most powerful in the world. To modernize and build up the aerial squadrons the government will spend $230,000,000 at once. It was reported, too, that the cabinet decided to ask parliament to vote extraordinary funds for the fortification of the northern frontier because of Belgium's reversion to a policy of armed neutrality.

BENITO MUSSOLINI rattled his sword again on the occasion of the fourteenth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome. "The Italian people," he proclaimed, "today are ready and determined to defend as never before—with all their force right up to the last drop of blood—victory and empire."

As for Fascism, he said, "When it finds obstacles in its path, it throws itself against them and burns its bridges behind it."

NOT to be outdone in martial gestures by other nations, Japan trotted out her entire navy for review by Emperor Hirohito. It was the greatest fleet ever brought together in Asiatic waters, comprising 108 warships aggregating nearly 700,000 tons and manned by 40,000 men. Large numbers of aircraft also took part in the evolution in Osaka bay.

GEN. HERMANN WILHELM GOERING, German minister of air and now the director of the Nazi four-year economic scheme to make the reich independent of the rest of the world in raw materials, launched his program at a great Nazi rally in Berlin. "We shall hack finger after finger off the foreign hand clutching at Germany's throat within the next four years," he declared.

Gen. Goering

Outlining his plans, Goering said no German had starved, nor would starve. The high seas fishing fleet will be increased, he asserted, so the people can eat fish when meat is not available. Whale fishing will be developed for the margarine it can produce, he promised.

Goering urged all Germans to follow the example of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler who, he said, eats neither meat nor butter. The audience yelled with delight when the robust Goering told them he had lost 22 pounds by eating less butter.

Germany would prefer the old system of international exchange of wares, but this now is impossible in a mad world, so Germany will build her factories, produce her own synthetic rubber and her own substitutes for cotton and other materials for which she now must spend millions of dollars yearly, the general declared.

MANY American travelers join the English in mourning the death of Sir Edgar Britten, commander of the great liner Queen Mary and commodore of the Cunard-White Star lines. He was stricken with paralysis in Southampton and died within a few hours. Sir Edgar was sixty-two years old and first went to sea as a lad of eighteen in sailing ships. He was knighted by King George V in 1934.

EIGHT armored cars escorted by armed private guards and state police, carried a fortune of $25,000,000 from the estate of the late Col. E. H. R. Green in South Dartmouth, Mass., to the First National bank of Boston.

The fortune, which consists of the famous coin collection, valued at 5 millions; the stamp collection, valued at 3½ millions; a large amount of cash and securities, and a quantity of uncut diamonds, has been under constant guard at the Green home since his death.

BEFORE taking a recess of two weeks the United States Supreme court announced that it would review and hand down a decision at this term upon the Wagner labor relations act. Many lawyers believe this law will be held unconstitutional, for in the Guffey coal act decision the Supreme court held that the relationship between employers and employees was local and beyond the power of congressional regulation.

SECRETARY OF LABOR FRANCES PERKINS announced that the third national conference on labor legislation, designed to stimulate the raising of work standards through federal and state co-operative efforts, will be called into session in Washington on November 9, and will last three days.

JUST about everything necessary to a general European war is now ready. At this distance it seems that Josef Stalin, dictator of Soviet Russia, will be the man to fire the starting pistol and he is reported to be convinced that another great conflict is unavoidable. The nations of the continent are lining up as Communist or Fascist, either in the constitution of their governments or in their active sympathies. The immediate occasion for their disputes is the civil war in Spain. Nearly all the continental governments and that of Great Britain joined in an agreement of nonintervention, but that pact is about played out. Russia, accusing Portugal, Germany and Italy of aiding the Fascist Spanish rebels, has denounced the agreement and declared she reserves freedom to help the Madrid government; the accused nations deny the Soviet charges, and the nonintervention committee voted that Italy and Portugal were not guilty, the accusations either not being proved or referring to what happened before the international agreement went into effect. Italian countercharges, detailing 20 alleged acts of Russian aid to Spanish Socialists were laid before the committee for action.

Portugal severed diplomatic relations with the Madrid government, and the representatives of the two countries were recalled. Dr. Armindo Monteiro, Portuguese foreign minister, followed up this action by sending to Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the nonintervention committee, a long document accusing Russia of having planned and brought about the Spanish civil war. He named the Russian diplomats, agitators and soldiers who, he charged, were directing the operations. He alleged that Moscow sought to start a revolution in Portugal and thus provide a base for attacking General Franco's insurgent forces in the rear.

Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy have buried their differences for the time being and reached an agreement on a united policy. This was outlined in a communique published after Italian Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano had conferred with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler. In the first place Hitler and Mussolini inform the world that they intend to recognize the insurgent government headed by General Franco as the legitimate regime in Spain, but they promise to respect the terms of the nonintervention agreement.

Other important declarations of policy by the two states are:

1. Co-operation to protect the peace of Europe and "the holy riches of European civilization" and family life.

2. Endorsement of a conference to rewrite the Locarno pact guaranteeing European borders, but only in the west. This implied that neither would agree to Soviet Russia's presence at the meeting.

3. Co-operation for the rehabilitation of the Danubian countries.

POPULAIRE, the organ of Premier Leon Blum's Socialist party, alleges that a shipment of submachine guns from the United States has been added to the secret armaments of the Croux de Feu in preparation for a civil war in France. The Croix de Feu, a Fascist organization headed by Col. Francois de la Rocque, was dissolved recently by the government and was succeeded by the new Social party.

Populaire, referring to the submachine guns, said these "terrible weapons used by American gangsters" arrived from America through the port of Havre and through Holland. The paper added that the weapons are being planted in caches in Normandie and elsewhere in the north of France. Furthermore, according to Populaire, great quantities of tear gas bombs and tear gas pistols are arriving from Germany for the use of the Fascists.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI, talking at Bologna, said that Italy's "olive branch grows out of an immense forest of 8,000,000 bayonets"; and next day at Imola he told 70,000 listeners that he hoped for long periods of peace, but not for "eternal peace, which is absurd and impossible."

"The Italian people, which gave its blood for the empire, is ready for any other trial when the crucial hour approaches," the Fascist chief shouted. "In order to make peace—just as to make love—it is necessary that there be two."

BELGIAN Fascists, known as Rexists and led by Leon Degrelle, clashed with the police in Brussels and Degrelle was jailed for a night. He said the motive of his demonstration was to show that ex-soldiers were backing the Rexists, and he announced that he would carry out his threatened "march on Brussels" with 150,000 followers and overthrow the government.

SETTING a new world's long distance train speed record, the Burlington railway's streamlined steel Denver Zephyr made a nonstop run from Chicago to Denver in 12 hours 12 minutes and 27 seconds. The distance is 1,017 miles, so the average speed was 83.4 miles an hour. After crossing the Colorado border the train hit its top speed of 116 miles an hour, which was maintained for one mile.

World Conditions

Washington—I have been wondering whether the rank and file of the American citizens have been able to piece together the many loose ends of the distressing conditions extant throughout the world. It is to be recognized, of course, that when a man like Dictator Stalin of Russia makes a statement that war in Europe is just ahead, it awakens the peoples of the world with a sudden start. That is the spectacular side. But there is much more about European political conditions than is disclosed in the Stalin declaration.

The thing that students and observers of European affairs can see in conditions abroad, as they view them in the light of our own State Department's information, is that a gigantic battle is on between two schools of thought. On the one hand is communism. On the other hand, and just as firmly entrenched and as deeply determined, is fascism. Followers of these two lines of thought are both literally and figuratively at each other's throat, and the picture when pieced together, can lead to no other conclusion than that which Stalin foresees, namely, war.

I have lately heard some observers make the statement that the Spanish rebellion is the crux of the problem. I cannot agree with that. Spain and her revolution may prove to be the spark that ignites the European powder keg, but Spain and her revolution are just incidents in the developments that came originally from the overthrow of the Czar's government in Russia and the establishment for the first time of a commune of the proletariat in the world.

It was unfortunate for the world and for those people who wanted to promote peace at all times that the Versailles treaty had to take shape as it did. The Versailles treaty subjugated Germany beyond all reason. I think that will be accepted by all save the most violent partisans of the late President Wilson. It seems to me, however, that the Versailles treaty has proved to be the second stage in the chain of circumstances that led to Mussolini in Italy, Hitler in Germany, overthrow of the royalists in Spain, and lately the election of a "people's front" in France.

Any analysis of that chain of circumstances cannot fail to include the effect the Versailles treaty had upon European conditions. In some ways, the effect was direct; in others, it was indirect, and the full import of the treaty provisions were not evident until eight or ten or even twelve years after the four great powers had made that treaty effective and, they believed, effectually disarmed and bottled up Germany.

After many conversations with diplomats, foreign students and Washington government officials, I believe too much importance cannot be attached to the attempt made by the Versailles treaty to break up political jurisdictions. The treaty, it will be remembered, created a vast number of insignificant and rather helpless states in Europe. They were supposed to serve as a buffer between the larger nations and prevent snarling and making faces among those world powers that had engaged in the last war. The effect, it has now been proved, is exactly the opposite.

Hatred Exists

Throughout Europe, according to the official and unofficial word that I get, there is a new kind of hatred among nations. It is not the hatred that obtained between France and Germany under Kaiser Wilhelm. It is a hatred not between the statesmen of the various countries, but among the rank and file of the people. That is to say, it is a vengeful feeling and when that is understood, it is not difficult to realize how vicious the undercurrent of relations is from Russia on the north to the Straits of Gibraltar, or even into Africa on the south.

To bring this condition into today's light, one hardly need look further than the various cabled dispatches from European capitals, each telling a story how the respective governments are watching the Spanish revolution. Again, the Russian Stalin puts the thing into a spectacular relief. If reports can be accredited, and official information indicates that they can be regarded as having a basis of fact, Stalin is ready to lend assistance to the so-called loyalist armies in Spain.

Now the loyalist armies, representing the government that is barely holding on by the skin of its teeth, are wholly communistic. Hence, Stalin's interest.

But the Russian dictator might be regarded as horning into a mess that does not concern his nation, except for another and most important piece of information. That information, not officially confirmed but generally believed, is to the effect that Italy's Mussolini has a finger in the pie on the fascist side of the Spanish revolution. The rebel armies in Spain are fascists. Hence it is quite understandable how the Italian dictator may be mixed up in promoting, even extending military assistance, to the rebel Spaniards. Thus we have definitely a triangle that surrounds the peoples of Europe. Within the boundaries of that triangle are jealousies unparaleled, political propaganda of a sort never before unleashed on the world, and millions upon millions of people who may be classed as unthinking. They are of a type comparable to the lowest grade of American individuals who, while not wholly illiterate, cannot be accredited with the power to reason. They are being led into the very jaws of another war by wholly unscrupulous and unprincipled agitators who are posing as the friend of the common man. They are working on fertile ground.

We Can Stay Out

Repeatedly, I hear questions asked concerning whether the United States is likely to get involved in that bottomless pit of Europe and, a kindred question, whether communism and fascism are gaining in the United States. The answer to the first half of that question must be made in two ways. We are likely to get involved unless some of our government policies are changed. But we can stay out if those policies do undergo revision. Whether we find ourselves embroiled in that horrible mess, depends entirely on the Washington government and the attitude of the Washington government appears entirely upon the attitude of the American people.

And that statement brings me to the most important observation that I have to make in connection with this discussion. It is now a definite fact that communists are spreading their propaganda through the United States in an effort to create a war spirit. It is the beginning of their movement to drag us into another world war and if we get in, it means the end of the American nation, as the land of freedom for us all. Our economic structure, as well as our government, will be destroyed. I have no hesitancy in making such a statement.

After the World war it took us twenty years to recognize what the cost of that war was. I mean the cost of disturbed lives more than I refer to money cost. The depression resulted from that war just as surely as the sun shines, and we are all now getting well fed up with this depression. And so I say on the basis of conclusions given me from countless authoritative sources, we cannot stand another war of the proportions of the World war and retain our government in its present form, our traditions, our institutions. There will be no way of preventing such a breakdown.

Roosevelt Trapped?

As I have said in these columns before, one particular criticism that I have against the Roosevelt administration is its capitulation to Russia. Frankly, I believe Mr. Roosevelt was trapped. I believe he saw too late what the full meaning of his action was when he recognized Russia—that is, recognized his mistake too late unless he believes in the doctrine of the communists. In any event, it is my firm conviction that the recognition of the Soviet opened the door through which now are marching hordes of men and women squinty-eyed, unprincipled in character, unpronounceable names, ruthless in design. They are bringing the propaganda which I mentioned. This is not intended to be a scare story. The evidence of communistic propaganda probably is all about you in your own communities. It is subtle, cleverly handled. Sometimes, it is even very boldly done. For example, in many of the larger cities today, handbills in appearance like those that are used announcing a public sale, are finding their way into the playgrounds of public schools. Allegedly brilliant lecturers are going about the country making what appear to be educational addresses, but containing, in many instances, propaganda argument in support of the communistic theory.

Even some of the big shots in the communistic movement are out in the open speaking or lecturing. Earle Browder, the Communistic candidate for President, is traveling about here and there making flaming speeches.

There are many other types of this propaganda under way. Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell published a text book on government a few years ago and he has succeeded in getting that volume into the special list of books for Delaware schools. It contains declarations definitely opposed to the American form of government.

It is unnecessary to point out more of these things. The point is quite definite and clear. The movement toward communism in this country is proceeding slowly, cautiously, because the communistic leaders recognize American sentiment must be changed slowly, but the slimy head of the snake is coming out of the water and it will be much bolder if we become involved in the European struggle. Communists would make of us American citizens each and every one a communist and would throw us into the world struggle on the side of communism and against fascism.

Once All Walked
In 75 Years, Much Done
Another Milton Needed

Germany and Italy, meaning Hitler and Mussolini, are said to be working together closely. They are to control Austria, and Hitler's share in the control might not please that intensely Catholic country too well. Germany's influence will increase along the Danube. Germany and Italy combining make that possible, with nobody inclined to fight about it.

Arthur Brisbane

In return for recognizing Italian sovereignty in Ethiopia Hitler is to have important Ethiopian concessions.

A million years ago, when our ancestors went out seeking something to eat, preferably some feeble human being easily killed, everybody walked. Now nearly everybody rides. Across George Washington bridge over the Hudson river, opened five years ago, about 100,000,000 human beings have crossed in 31,000,000 automobiles, while fewer than 1,000,000 have crossed on foot. Busses alone carried 11,638,000 over the bridge.

How rapidly progress moves once it starts! Seventy-five years ago, both sides of our country were connected by telegraph for the first time. Now men talk around the world by radio. Seventy-five years ago they only talked across the continent, now they fly the continent and on beyond, across the Pacific ocean.

Those hostile to new ideas might remember that a little more than seventy-five years ago men were beaten for re-election to congress because, as the voters put it, "they were foolish enough to vote money to experiment talking over wires."

They were defeated for willingness to have the government try out Morse's electric telegraph idea.

Berlin reports that German booksellers must sell, and Germans must read, only books that the government thinks they ought to sell and read. The public will be compelled with "loving force" to read what is good for them.

That takes Germany back to the Seventeenth century, when the English government decided that Englishmen must read only what the government thought was good for them.

All books must be submitted and wait for approval before printing. Along came a man named John Milton with his book the Areopagetica, printed by him without anybody's permission, denouncing an infamous law that would control men's minds and freedom of thought. That settled it; the law died.

Somebody will kill it in Germany, in time.

In the Spanish civil war, hostages have been seized, on both sides, including many women, and are held with this threat: "If you kill hostages taken from my side, I'll kill yours."

England and other countries almost tearfully are begging both sides in Spain to exchange hostages instead of murdering them; the British government officially expresses the fear that women "are in danger of wholesale massacre." Nice civilization, is it not?"

Dr. Bakst, young teacher of mathematics at Columbia university, thinks he has a sure formula for winning on horse races; "he tried it and won, 1,000 times, not with money, just mentally."

Anybody can win mentally, they do it constantly at Monte Carlo and elsewhere, but nobody can win money, except accidentally—never in the long run.

A brave truck driver, name unknown, saw a lady with a difficult name, Mrs. Anastasia Adiuszkiewics, hanging from the ledge of a second story in Jersey City. Rushing to help, he caught her in his arms as she fell, then left, wanting no praise.

He makes up for many that do not give their seats to ladies in street cars.

An eighteen-year-old girl, alone and in agony, gave birth to a child; and, according to police, immediately killed it, dropping it from a roof. A jury convicted her of manslaughter, and the judge let her go on probation; she must report once a month to prove that she is behaving. Four jurors that helped convict her told the judge they regretted their verdict.

Every mother knows that the unfortunate girl, after her horrible experience and solitary agony, was at least as nearly insane as any shell-shocked soldier.

—15—

"Why, yes, there is—just do one thing."

"What's that?"

"Keep your mouths shut till I get out of here. I guess you both know I've got a long score to settle with that bird. He was mixed up in burning up my ranch house and burning me up. I'll attend to McCrossen myself some day," he repeated slowly, "in my own way."

The two men left the hospital somewhat uneasy. They laid their story before Carpy.

The doctor heard it unmoved. "Well," he commented, "that's not the first bunch of steers McCrossen has stolen—and it won't be the last."

"Not the first," interjected Lefever. "But it's the closest anybody ever came to nailin' it on him."

"Are you goin' to tell her?" asked Lefever.

"I am; today. She's coming to town and will be in to see me."

They told him of their talk with Denison. "It left us leery, Doc," said Sawdy. "If Bill gets worked up too strong over McCrossen, he's liable to bust out on McCrossen before his eyes are in shape to give him an even break."

Doctor Carpy waved his hand. "Keep your worry for something else, Sawdy. His eyes got scorched; but when I let go of the boy, keep away from the small end of his gun."

"Jane, you'll think I don't bring you anything but troublesome news," the doctor began. "But this isn't really news. I've known for months—two or three years, in fact—that McCrossen was stealing Gunlock steers. But this is what John Lefever brought up from Thief River today. . . ."

"Now, there's nothing to get excited about," observed Carpy, after he had finished the story, "for it's nothing new. But if I were you I would get rid of McCrossen."

The expression on Jane's face reflected her perplexity. "That's easy to say, doctor, but it's going to be awfully hard to do. I want to be rid of McCrossen, heaven knows — for more reasons than one."

She was glad, when she got home that night, that her foreman was away; it gave her a night to think it over. In the morning he was over early with a report from the pastures and much pep in his manner.

Calmly she told him she would have to dispense with his services.

With a face as black as Gunlock Knob, McCrossen rose slowly from the chair in which he had been facing Jane.

"So you're firin' me?" Looking at her coldly and searchingly, he spoke tensely and harshly.

"I've got to cut down expenses, Dave," she said. "I—"

Before she could speak, he ran on: "Folks don't naturally fire an old hand like me, your father's friend, without giving a reason, do they? What are you turnin' me out for?"

"Dave," she said suddenly, "you've always been paid well—where does all your money go? Why do you have to run steers off the ranch at night?"

"So," he exclaimed savagely, "a few head of steers that belonged to me by rights anyway are stickin' in your crop, eh? Do you know your own dad was the biggest cattle thief in this whole country?"

Jane stamped her foot. "It's not so!"

"Did you know he made a thief out of me? The first calves I ever stole in my life, I stole for Gus Van Tambel. Doesn't look very nice for you to talk to me about stealin' cattle," he exclaimed scornfully, "the daughter of a man that stole all he's got."

"Dave," she protested, angrily, "stop that talk. If my father owed you anything, I'll pay it."

He laughed. "All right, kiss an' make up." He stepped toward her.

She sprang to her feet. "Dave, I—"

"Why, girl, don't you know I love you?" He spoke with a queer laugh and, darting forward, caught her. While she struggled, he rained kisses on her face and neck and arms.

Jane, frantic, fought to repel him.

"Dave McCrossen, if you don't let me go, I'll scream across to the bunkhouse," she cried.

He jeered at her. "Go ahead, there's nobody there. I'll let you go after you kiss me and not before."

Just when she was afraid she would lose consciousness, the kitchen door opened behind McCrossen's back, and Quong, half hiding a long knife in his loose sleeve, burst into the room.

"Drop that knife!" thundered McCrossen. Quong, his face livid, paid no attention whatever — he meant to kill or get killed. With fresh fear seizing her, Jane jerked from the foreman's grasp and flung herself between the two men. "No, no, Quong!" she cried. "Just stand by me. Now get out of this house, Dave McCrossen. Never enter it again. "Go!" she screamed.

And laughing grotesquely, McCrossen strode to the front door, threw it open, walked out, and slammed it shut behind him.

Thoroughly shaken by the scene, Jane, without waiting for anything to eat, rode into town to seek Carpy for help.

"Henry Sawdy will be in here for dinner. He's the man for your foreman. Talk to him after dinner."

"I'm afraid McCrossen will quarrel with whomever I put in and kill him."

"Kill Sawdy?" mused Carpy appraisingly. "Sawdy's not so fast a man as McCrossen. He's not had to shoot his way out of as many scrapes as McCrossen has; but Henry's nobody's meat to serve raw—you needn't worry about him."

"If Bill were only well," explained Jane wistfully.

"I'm glad Bill isn't," returned Carpy quickly. "I wouldn't want to see him out and in trim while McCrossen is raging around. Then you might have something to worry about. To tell you the truth, girl, I'm holding Bill Denison back right now. He's coming on fine, but let's let well enough alone.

"After you talk to Sawdy, you'll see Bill. For heaven's sake, don't say one word about your round-up with McCrossen. Bill would jump the hospital fence."

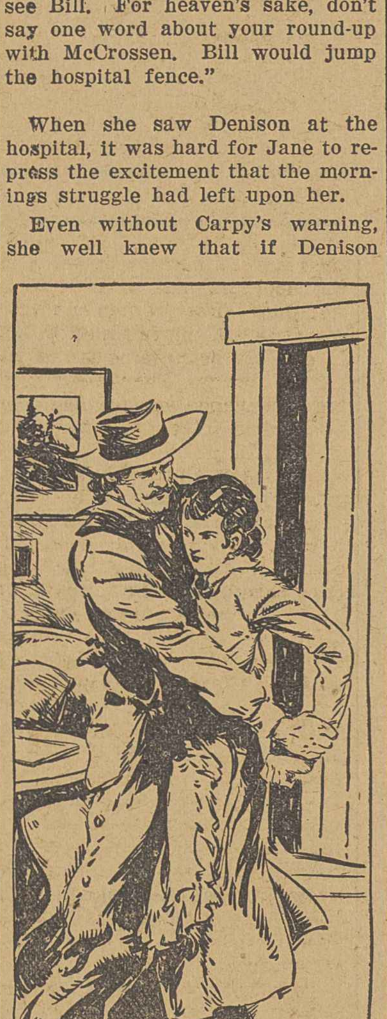
Even without Carpy's warning, she well knew that if Denison learned what had happened he would tear loose from all restraint.



"I'll Let You Go After You Kiss Me and Not Before."

"What's the news today, dearie?" he asked.

"Why, nothing special, Bill."

"You don't act that way."

Jane laughed, evaded, and said the real news was that soon the bandages were to come off his eyes.

Sawdy accepted the ranch arrangement without a qualm, though Sleepy Cat knew even before he rode out to assume his post that McCrossen was vowing vengeance.

The day after Sawdy took charge, he was in town to do some ordering. In Rubido's store he ran into McCrossen. Sawdy shook hands with him, and McCrossen told him he would be out next day to pack up his things.

"I'll be glad to see you an' help any way I can. Ought not to be no hard feelin's, Dave. What do you say to a drink?"

The two, talking things over, sauntered down the street.

"No," said McCrossen, as he and Sawdy poured their glasses, "I don't carry no hard feelin's against you, Henry—not a bit. Jane treated me pretty rough, I must say that. But she ain't to blame, neither. She's been against me. It's Bill Denison that's behind all this. He's fair enough to my face, but he's double-faced."

"Dave," said Sawdy impatiently, "don't talk like a blamed fool."

McCrossen bridled. "What do you mean, Sawdy?"

"Why, everybody knows Denison ain't two - faced. A man may like Bill or not like him. He's got his enemies, I'll admit."

"You're damned right he has."

"Luck to you, Henry — not to that—"

"Cut it out, Dave. If you an' Bill can't get along, that's your business. He an' I get along fine. Well, I've got to be startin' for the ranch."

"An' for my old job! An' my old home," muttered McCrossen. "Do you blame me for bein' sore?"

"Not a bit, Dave."

"Then fill up again an' be damned to all enemies."

It was some time, however, before Sawdy could break away. Even after he left, the ex-foreman loitered at the bar, pouring his grievance into the ears of Harry Boland, the low-voiced, mischief-making saloon keeper. "He's got my girl," complained McCrossen doggedly. "You know that. Harry."

Boland, leaning over the bar, listened sympathetically and nodded.

"It's pretty hard, Harry," McCrossen rambled on, "to stand all I've stood from that man—you know that. Little Gunlock Jane—that's what I called her first day she rode up to the ranch—that girl is the trimmest little hussy that ever crossed a horse's back in the Gunlock Hills—you know that, Harry."

"Everybody knows that," Boland nodded.

"What would you do, Harry," demanded McCrossen, "if you was treated that way."

"Well, you can't do nothin' now while Denison's in the hospital, can you? Wait till he gets out. Then tell him what you think of him."

The following day it was known up and down River street that McCrossen was spoiling for a fight. McAlpin took alarm at the rumors that spread so rapidly. He ambled up the street to lay the reports before Carpy. "McAlpin," said the doctor, "don't worry. There can't be any fight as long as one man's laid up in the hospital. I'm going to keep him there till McCrossen cools off."

"Why, for that boy to face McCrossen, half blind like he is now—it'd be plain murder," McAlpin burst out indignantly. "Bill Denison ought to be kept under cover for six months, Doc, till he can see straight."

Carpy refused to get excited. "See?" he echoed scornfully. "McAlpin, that boy could see right now to thread a needle in the dark. He doesn't know that. You keep your mouth shut, understand!"

As the doctor spoke, Jake Spotts stuck his head in at the office door. "Hello, Doc," he called out without any preliminary greeting. "I got a message for you from Sister Angela."

"Sister Angela!" exclaimed Carpy in surprise. "When did you see Sister Angela?"

Carpy jumped to his feet. "What d'you mean, Jake?"

"Just what I say. That's English, ain't it? Bill Denison's gone."

"Where's he gone?"

"How the hell should I know?" demanded the irascible barber.

"What—"

Spotts waved his hand. "That's all I know, and I've got to get back to the shop."

McAlpin sat with ears cocked, but had no time to speak. "Run for your life, McAlpin, and hitch up for me," exclaimed Carpy. "I'll follow you right down."

The liveryman drove Dr. Carpy up to the hospital. Sister Angela in the office met the doctor. "What's this I hear, Sister?" asked Carpy. "Where's Denison?"

"He's gone. He was in his room and ate his supper at five o'clock. When the nurse went into his room again, the bed was empty. His clothes are gone from the closet. We've looked everywhere. What can we do?"

Carpy's vexed face reflected his uneasiness. "There's nothing you can do, Sister. We'll hear from him before we want to, I'm afraid." He turned from the counter and whirled around again to it. "Sister," he asked suddenly, "was there anybody here to see him this afternoon?"

"Nobody but an Indian."

"Did you get his name?"

"It was John Frying Pan."

Carpy grunted. "Thanks, Sister," he said and hurried out.

"Where now, Doc?" asked McAlpin as Carpy, silent and perplexed, got into the buggy beside him.

"Back to the office, McAlpin. The bird's flown. Hell's loose, in spite of my fine schemes."

"Did you get any explanation?"

"Plenty," rejoined Carpy grimly. "Plenty!"

CHAPTER XIV

BILL PARDALOE received the surprise of his life; it came to him that night.

Just as Pardaloe was enjoying his final smoke a gentle tapping at his window aroused him.

"Who's there?" he demanded gruffly.

"Awake, Bill?"

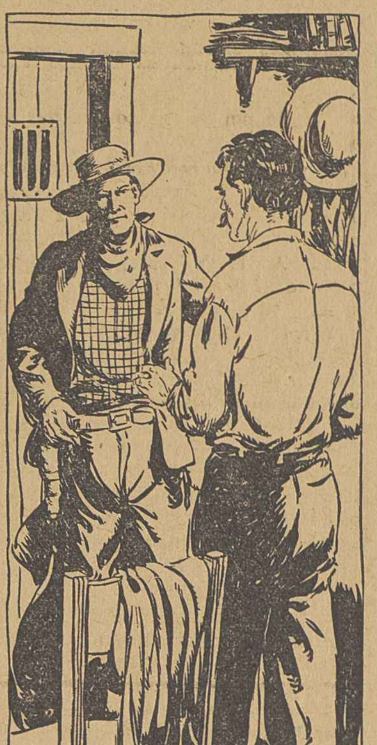
"Never talked in my sleep yet," retorted Pardaloe. "Who be you?"

"I'm Bill Denison."

"You're a liar—Bill Denison is laid up at the hospital. Who be you?"

"Look here, Bill, don't be a blamed fool. I'm out of the hospital and riding for Gunlock. Get up and open the door. I want to talk to you." Pardaloe grumbled a bit, and turned out. The bolts clanked, the door opened, and the ex-sheriff saw, within the rays of his dark lantern, Denison.

"So it is you, Bill. Well, I'll be derned. What's up?" he asked as he ushered his surprise caller into his bedroom. "How's your eyes?"



"What Do You Want the Rifle f'r, Bill?"

"First rate, Bill. I—"

"Does Carpy know you're out tonight?"

"Not yet."

"You'll ketch hell."

"Can't help it, Bill. I want to borrow your thirty-three, and I'm in an all-fired hurry."

"What do you want the rifle f'r, Bill?"

While the talk was going forward, Pardaloe's deep-set, keen eyes had been bent closely on his visitor. Denison was dressed in his accustomed rig—belted and wearing his gun holster with its gun. His face was full, and his eyes, though blinky, seemed bright and alert.

"I'm riding for Gunlock," repeated Denison impatiently. "I've got word a party of rustlers are going to run off some steers tonight, and I'm going to interfere."

"Who's the rustlers, Bill?" asked Pardaloe, unmoved.

"Who brought the word to you?"

"John Frying Pan."

"'Tain't likely McCrossen would let anybody do any stealin' he didn't get a cut in—"

"Do I get a rifle or not?" demanded Denison savagely. Pardaloe pointed.

"There's the gun rack—help yourself. Who's with you?"

"Frying Pan and Bob Scott."

"They got rifles?" asked Pardaloe, rising.

"They have. Where's the ammunition?"

"What do you mean, Bill?"

"I'm going to ride along."

"No."

"Yes."

"I say no!"

"I don't give a damn what you say. I go."

"Bill, it's not necessary. It may be close work."

"I never seen no close work yet," retorted the veteran, grimly sarcastic. "Kind of like to see what it's like!"

"Yes, but—"

"Tell John or Bob to saddle a horse for me."

"O. K.," muttered Denison stuffing his ammunition belt rapidly with cartridges. "If you're going, you're going."

The Indians, in the saddle, were waiting outside. Scott got up a pony from the sheriff's barn for Pardaloe. Denison, on needles and pins, waited for the old man's final preparations. At last Pardaloe, considerably hurried, grabbed a hat from the rifle rack and stamped vigorously out into the night after his posse. He was the last man to mount. Denison gave the word to go, and the quartette were under way when Bill Pardaloe cried a halt.

"What's the matter?" stormed Denison, wild with the delay.

"Just a minute," muttered Pardaloe. "Forgot something. Be right back."

Pardaloe spurred back to the jail office while his companions counted time. He rejoined them after three minutes that seemed to Denison thirty. For God's sake! Are you ready now?" Denison chopped off the words furiously.

SOCIAL SECURITY PROGRAM AIDS THOUSANDS

Approximately 28,400 needy men women and children and 256,000 industrial and commercial workers in Alabama are now covered by the public-assistance and unemployment compensation provision of the Social Security Act. These figures were announced by Judge John D. Petree, State Director for the National Emergency Council for Alabama; and are based upon a report of the Social Security Board, summarizing the progress made under the Act in the eight months since it became operative.

Alabama is participating in every feature of the Social Security Act administered by the Social Security Board except aid to needy blind. The State has set up an unemployment compensation system which will protect 256,000 workers against loss of income during temporary periods of unemployment. The Social Security Board pays the cost of administering this system.

The State has established public-assistance plans for aid to the needy aged and dependent children, which, with Federal aid, provide a regular income to individuals unable to provide for themselves. In September an estimated 11,300 aged and 17,100 dependent children received assistance under these plans at a total cost of $181,000. Approximately one-half the cost of this aid to the aged and one third the cost of aid to dependent children was paid by the Social Security Board.

Since the State began cooperattion with the Federal Government under the terms of the Social Security Act, a total of $486,401 of Federal funds has come to Alabama to aid it in providing these benefits. It has receved $52,712 for administration of its unemployment compensation, $303,450 for assistance to the needy aged, and $130,239 for aid to dependent children. Federal funds have made it possible for Alabama to provide much more adequately for its needy citizens than would be possible out of State and local funds alone.

Still further benefits are open to Alabama under the Social Security Act. If the State establishes a plan for aid to the needy blind in line with the Federal Act it will be eligible to receive approximately one-half the cost of this aid from the Social Security Board.

In addition to these cooperative Federal-State features of the Social Security Act, Alabama citizens also come under the Federal old-age benefit system provided by the act.

State Capitol News

Montgomery. — Delegations and individuals representing widely div verse interests called on Governor Bibb Graves during the past week to urge him to support their pet causes when the Legislature is called in special session by him this month.

Always in the forefront, school leaders met here last week in open forum to discuss the perennial school crisis, but fell into disagreement with two members of the so-called "economy group" in the Legislature—Senators Hayse Tucker, of Tuscaloosa, and Robin Swift, of Escambia.

Senator Tucker urged the educators to offer a "simple understandable program that will work, to be built upon as the State is able." He exressed the opinion that the much discussed "minimum program" drafted by school leaders two years ago was too complicated to be understood or administered.

Tucker also said many counties are shirking their responsibility by permitting their ad valorem tax rates to fall below the aveerage of the counties which are able to maintain full school terms.

"If each county would face its proper local burden I would be willing to join with others in finding additional money and doing so without delay for the schools," he added.

Dr. Henry J. Willingham, president of Flrence State Teachers College condemned the attitude of "those who claim that Alabama cannot afford additional expenditures and taxes for education." When asked for suggestions for raising more money, he said: "It is the business of the governor and the Legislature to raise the money.

Side-stepping the suggestion to legalize tax liquor for schools, he said would leave discussion of that matter "to someone who knows more about the subject than I do."

SHERIFFS

About 30 of Alabama's sheriffs called on the Governor with a request that he include in his formal "call" a constitutional amendment permitting sheriffs to succeed themselves. While the Governor assured them that he favored such an amendment, he pointed out that he has no authority either to approve or veto a constitutional amendment and for that reason he is powerless to aid them.

Such an amendment has been introduced at almost every session or the Legislature during the past 10 years with the usual fate of being chloroformed in committee or dying on House and Senate calendars. However, the amendment was passed by the 1932 Legislature but was defeated at the polls.

The assistance of Governor Graves and his administration durthe campaign to re-elect President Roosevelt received the unstinted praise of officials of the Democratic National Headquarters in cimmunications received here on the eve of election day.

Likewise was the work of Judge Matt Boykin, of Mobile, Pitt Tyson Manor, the Governor's secretary, and other officials of the state Finince Committee in charge of campaign fund collections lauded in a letter from W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, who called on Judge Boykin to continue his committee as a permanent organization. The letter follows:

"The very important work of you and your committee that has been performed in this campaign to provide funds for the National Democratic Committee has made it apparent to Mr. Farley and myself that such an organization should not be terminated on November 3, but should be continued as a permanent organization.

"You are, therefore, authorized to continue the Finance Committee for the State of Alabama as a permanent organization, with such officials, general chairmen, district chairmen and special representatives as you may see fit to appoint. All these apointments are subject to the confirmation of Mr. Farley and myself.

"I wish you to express to all the loyal workers of your committee the sincere appreciation of the Democratic National committee for the very fine work they have accomplished. With cordial regards, sincerely yours, W. Forbes Morgan."

A check for $37,000, representing Alabama's contributions to the party's "war chest" was delivered to national headquarters last week by Judge Boykin, Mr. Manor and Charles Rainey.

Lloyd Hooper, the Governor's recording secretary, in charge of the contributions to the campaign from capitol officials and employes, accounted for approximately $3,700—almost four times the quota set for Goat Hill.

Eight Alabama towns have been added to the list of the Works Progress Administration's street paving program now under way in more than 50 cities and towns.

They are: Selma, Evergreen, Talladega, Heflin, Chatom, Citronelle, Tuscumbia and Decatur. The paving proects will be confined to business and residential streets, it was explained.

Rehabilitation farmers in Alabama were reported this week by Julian Brown, State Director of Rural Rehabilitation, to have repaid more than half of the $2,504,824 advanced them at the beginning of the season and indications are he added that further heavy payments would be forthcoming within the next few days.

"Collections are fine", he said, "and rehabilitation farmers are daily pouring of the Federal Treasury payments of monies advanced early this year enabling them to put in crops. Loans were advanced to Alabama farmers to the amount of $2,504,824, and as of today, repayments totaling more than 50 per cent have been received.

Director Brown said much of the crops are yet to be turned into cash as the peanut harvesting had begun only recently in South Alabama and there remained a considerable quantity of cotton to be sold in the northern part of the State.

The Alabama Supreme Court last week denied a petition for rehearing an appeal by the city of Birmingham seeking to avoid payment to the State of gasoline and lubricating oil taxes by that city for which no taxes have been paid during the past year.

The Court last June upheld the right of the State to collect gas taxes from cities and counties on fuel they use. Approximately $100,000 is due the State by the city of Birmingham and several towns and counties which had failed to comply with the law.

COTTON REPORT

Ask Yourself This Final Question: Do You Want To Pay Double for Half?

By E. C. Easter

CHAPTER XI

THE rules of a TVA-inspired electric co-operative or membership association require that 1c per kilowatt hour surcharge above the regular rate be paid by members up to 100 kilowatt hours a month to help pay off the huge debt the association must start with.

This advertisement is the sixth and last of a series which has also been printed in booklet form. T. W. Martin, President of Alabama Power Company Birmingham will cheerfully send a copy to any interested person requesting it.

Suppose you use a hundred or more kilowatt hours a month and your neighbor uses only fifty. That means you'll be paying $1.00 a month surcharge above your electric bill and your neighbor only 50c toward paying off the debt.

If the association doesn't go broke before the 20 years are up, or the line doesn't wear out within that time and the debt is eventually paid, you will have paid membership fees, perhaps assessments AND $240 BESIDES your electric bill! Your neighbor will have paid only $120, or only half as much as you.

Under the terms of the Alabama law permitting the formation of electric co-operatives, you will have only equal rights with your neighbor, no matter how much you will have paid in. Shouldn't you have twice as much interest in the property? You will have paid twice as much.

Customers of Alabama Power Company DON'T have to buy memberships to get electric service; they DON'T have to make themselves subject to surcharges; they DON'T have to buy shares; they DON'T have to depend on amateurs for their electric service; they DON'T have to worry about amortization and other complicated things. ALL they have to do is enjoy dependable electric light and power service.

CHAPTER XII

How Alabama Power Company Handles Rural Electrification Projects

WHEN the request is received for electric service from any individual or group from any community not now receiving electric service, the company sends an experienced representative to make a survey of the community.

This survey includes a map of the highway or route along which the proposed extension would be made. On this map the houses are shown and whether the occupants are prospective users of electric service and the electric equipment they would probably use. On this map are indicated existing telephone and telegraph lines, trees or other obstructions that might affect the construction of the electric lines.

If the survey indicates that the electric service would NOT be economical to the community, the company so advises those making the request but suggests that if in their opinion we have overlooked some possible business, we will gladly rework the survey and assist the community in any reasonable way to develop sufficient uses to make the service economical.

If the survey shows that electric service WOULD be economical, it is submitted, together with the map and all estimates, to our Engineering Department which makes up the estimates for construction cost. The Operating Department then reviews this estimate and if the comparison of revenue against cost is such as to indicate that the line has reasonable possibilities of developing to the extent of sound business, the company proceeds with detailed plans for the construction of the line.

When construction of the line is approved, those requesting the service are advised and a community meeting is held, at which a representative of the company is present to explain the basis on which the company is willing to extend the line. A complete explanation is made of the rates and the decreasing cost of electric service with increased use. Uses to which electricity may be put in the home and on the farm are explained. Questions are invited and any misunderstood points discussed.

At the conclusion of the meeting the people are asked if they want the company to proceed with taking applications for service. If they so indicate, a company representative visits each prospective customer the following day or shortly thereafter. Rates are again explained as applied to his individual use of electric service and he is given the opportunity to make formal application for service by signing the service application blank.

If sufficient applications for service are received to warrant construction of the extension, detailed construction plans are made. Necessary rights-of-way, anchor rights (to keep the line from blowing or falling down) and tree-trimming rights are secured from property owners.

As soon as the prospective customers make arrangements for wiring their homes (in which the company is glad to give advice), construction of the line is begun and completed as rapidly as weather and other conditions permit.

Sometimes this can all be accomplished within a comparatively short time. At other times, depending upon complications which might arise in connection with the many details involved, a longer period might be necessary.

Our Rural Electrification Policy Re-Stated

Alabama Power Company does NOT oppose the formation of rural electric "co-operatives" or "electric membership corporations," but it does believe that if prospective members of such associations can secure electric service directly from the Company and without the legal, moral and financial responsibilities which membership in an electric membership corporation or association involves, they will find it to their best interest to take service direct from the Company. Where for some reason direct service cannot be furnished, the co-operative organization is as welcome a customer as the individual.

Home Demonstration Notes

Marye Elizabeth Nolen
Home Demonstration Agent

Now is the time to plan for your flower garden, shrubs, etc. for the spring. Sweet peas should be planted between now and December. All sorts of bulbs and especially hyacinths should be in the ground soon. Shrubbery should be set out in order that the shrubs may get an early start for the spring. Be sure to save cuttings of fall pruning for roses a little later and plant them.

Did you know that 7.2 per cent of the people in Shelby County do not have a family milk cow? At this time of the year when cotton is being sold is a very good time to invest in a milk cow for your family. There is no better source for food for the family into which you might put your money. Certainly every family where there are children should have at least one family milk cow. Encourage your neighbor to own one.

This is a good time of the year to take stock and see if you are getting ahead in the world. Remember that planning for the family should be a joint proposition and should be done by the husband, wife and children, in order to get the better benefits from the planning and in order that adults may be better managers and wiser spenders. It is very necessary that the children be taught to spend correctly in order that they have some experience under the supervision of their parents and at the same time be given the opportunity of planning for themselves. We learn to do only by doing.

Mrs. J. C. Drumbaugh, President of the Committee Council of Home Demonstration Clubs, Mrs. Kirk Lucas, Chairman of Citizenship Committee, Mrs. J. C. Rogers, Chairman of Scholarship Committee and Mrs. Frank Wyatt, Chairman of Spread of Farm Information, together with the Home Demonstration Agent attended the district meeting of the Home Demonstration Council in Auburn on Thursday, October 29th.

Mrs. Walter Chancellor, with the Home Demonstration Agent, attended the Leadership School at Seale, Ala., October 31st. The demonstration was on Christmas Gift Foods, given by Miss Dana King Getchell, Professor of Home Economics at Auburn, and was a most interesting and educational one.

Sports Writer Has to Ramble Around Once in a While

THE best football press box in New York is that at Randalls Island. It is inclosed and windows protect the scribes from rain, snow and sun so nicely that they never have to do pieces like this in bed . . . An over-loud whisper has a group of Boston sportsmen bidding for Brooklyn's baseball (and popularity) Dodgers . . . Gunboat Smith, now guardian of the Garden gallery, says the right hand Georges Carpentier landed on him in London was the hardest punch he ever caught in his long career. He also claims to have knocked down Jack Johnson in training and refuses to consider Joe Louis as anywhere near Sam Langford's equal.

A year ago George Parnassas, manager of Ceferino Garcia, received a hurry call from a Mexican featherweight stranded in Yuma, Arizona. He pondered the touch and then dispatched five dollars, the bus fare to Los Angeles. Since then the investment has returned him $6,400 as his manager's share of Bobby Pancho Leyvas's ring earnings . . . George H. Bull, racing steward and president of the Saratoga track, is one of the nation's most ardent football fans . . . Babe Ruth wore sliding pads only one afternoon during his entire career. After that one experiment he decided he would rather have bruises on the legs than be slowed down by the weight of the protective devices.

Press agents seeking that "international flavor," stumped their tootsies when they had the star English three-year-old Thankerton in the Santa Anita handicap. As this horse is not eligible for the General Stud Book in England, he is ineligible here, save under National Steeplechase and Hunt rules . . . John McKim, secretary of the Nassau F. C. and member of the N. Y. S. F. A. executive committee, has done many fine things for soccer on Long Island. He likes best to recall though that he was the man who gave Alec Kelso, right fullback of the Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's Celtics, his first pair of football shoes . . . Harry Voiler, producer of boxing pictures and manager of Lorenzo Packs, the undefeated Negro heavyweight, has deserted Broadway to prepare for the opening of his Miami hotel.

Recalling When Frisch Outsmarted Himself

One of Frankie Frisch's most painful recollections is the day when he outsmarted himself, while trying to equal Wilbert Robinson's record of seven hits in a game. The pitcher was a bad fielder and so, on the seventh time up, Frankie decided to bunt and beat out the hit. He bunted, the ball bounded off a pebble, hopped into the pitcher's glove and he was an easy out . . . Keep an eye on that Junior quarterback, Di Nateli, of Boston college. He is a smashing tackler, a good runner, exceptional punter and a better than ordinary passer.

Frank Frisch

Racing officials, who take photos even when it is evident a horse has won by half a length, have a reason. It is to discourage those critics who insist the outside horse always is favored when it is close. The same reason also prevents them (the racing officials) from mentioning that when an inside horse wins by half a length it only shows up a head in the photo, anyhow . . . Mel Ott and Joe Moore are the two most diligent football fans among the Giants . . . Little Eddie Farrell, who played for the Giants, Yankees, Cubs and a few other teams after graduating from Penn, now is one of New Jersey's most enterprising dentists . . . Even though his Hippodrome never will seriously rival the Garden as a fight arena, Mike Jacobs is feeling well pleased with himself. The reason is that the opera which runs at the emporium pays him $1,400 a performance.

The world's largest athletic event, according to Francis Albertanti, who has more than a press agent's interest in the proposition, is the World's Bowling Championships. There are 20,000 contestants in this event listed for New York next spring . . . Critics who claim Jimmy Stout is not really a great jockey because he never sneaks in on the rail, should remember Jimmy Maiben.

Tip on Etiquette

The perfect hostess says, "At last!" when her guests arrive, and "Already?" when they depart.

Clean System Clear Skin

You must be free from constipation to have a good, clear complexion. If not eliminated, the wastes of digestion produce poisons and the skin must do more than its share in helping to get rid of them.

So for a clear, healthy skin, remember the importance of bowel regularity. At the first sign of constipation, take Black-Draught—the purely vegetable laxative. It brings such refreshing relief, and tends to leave the bowels acting regularly until some future disturbance interferes.

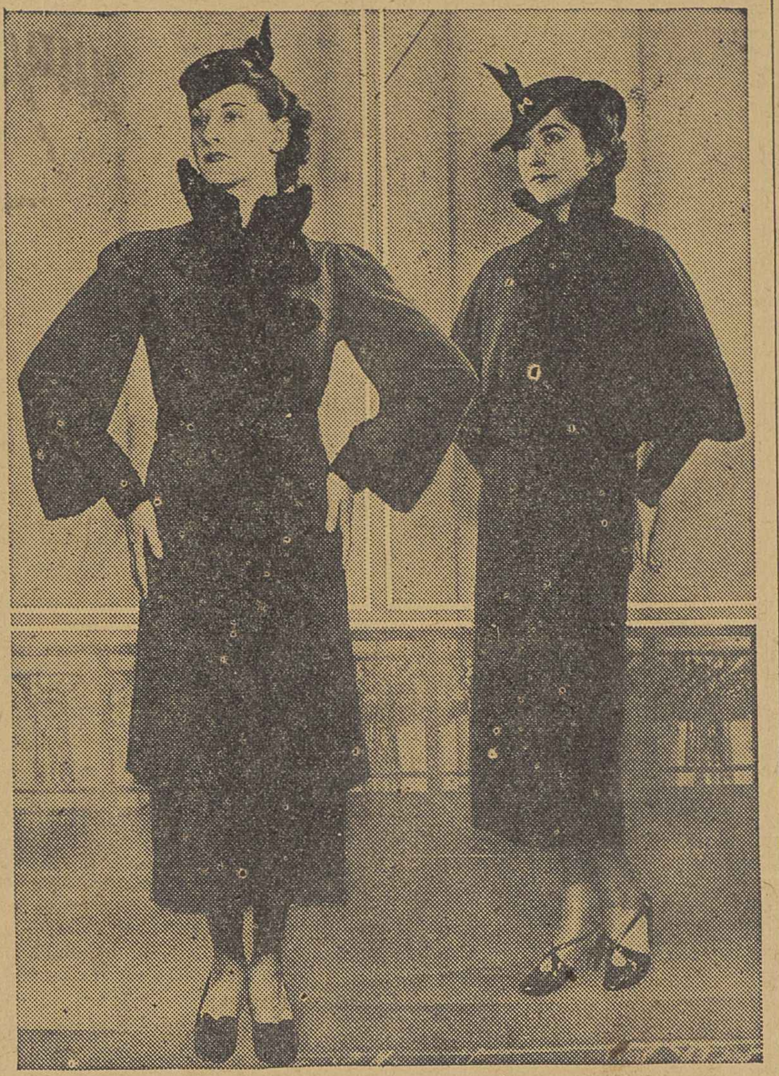
Flat Furs in Smart Trim for Suits

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



IF YOU are planning a new coat, costume-suit or daytime frock of handsome broadcloth (great favorite this season) or one of the new silks that looks like wool or any of the smart novelty woolens, accented with trimmings of flat fur handled in clever dressmaker ways, you do well. The idea is right in line with smartest current style trends.

One of the outstanding gestures in fashion's realm today is the lavish and ingenious use of such furs as Persian lamb, astrakan, caracul and similar pelts, for borderings, for collars, panels, bib and plastron effects, for big revers and even for entire sleeves and novel pockets.

Also highly significant is the fact of a strong British trend influenced by the forthcoming coronation of King Edward VIII., that is evidenced throughout this season's fashions.

The models pictured carry the message both of British influence and the vogue for flat fur accents. They were selected from a collection of "classy fashions presented by the style creators of Chicago in the wholesale district. The silk afternoon costume to the left is in royal wine shade, fashioned after the king's guard, trimmed in black astrakhan with typical old English collar, with three-quarter length coat of military bearing. The designful handling of the bordering down the front illustrates the intriguing manipulation designers are giving to the now-so-voguish flat furs.

The dress and cape-coat ensemble to the right is developed in a royal wine faille trimmed in smart black astrakhan with satin lined cape—a most charming costume for afternoon or street wear. The dress is tailored with long tight - fitting sleeves ans also carries accents of astrakhan.

Chic versions of the very-new-flat-fur trimmed gowns are created of gleaming black broadcloth with a bordering of Persian lamb outlining the very full circular hemline and collar, from which extends a matching fur border all the way down the front from neckline to hemline. Wear one of the fashionable high toques of the same Persian lamb with a dress of this description for stunning effect.

The big hue and cry this fall is for gray-on-gray coats, the smartest types trend to the use of gray caracul or Persian lamb on rich gay cloths of sterling quality, although gray kidskin and grayish moleskin comes in for a big share of the honors. The unique maneuvering of the fur adds to the zest of things. For instance a coat is apt to have a vestee that develops into a panel that travels the entire way down the front of the coat. Or perhaps the sleeves and the collar will be all of fur. The tricky ways of these stunning flat furs are too numerous to mention.

Cunning suits that sing a song of youth have hip-length peplum jackets with full "swing" skirts, all the edges being finished with bindings of the Persian lamb or caracul if preferred. These are fashioned of broadcloth, duvetyn or velvet. Black is first choice, although the new autumn reds and greens and browns are competing most successfully for prestige. The latest thought is the fur-trimmed cloth or velvet dress sold with a matching fur muff.

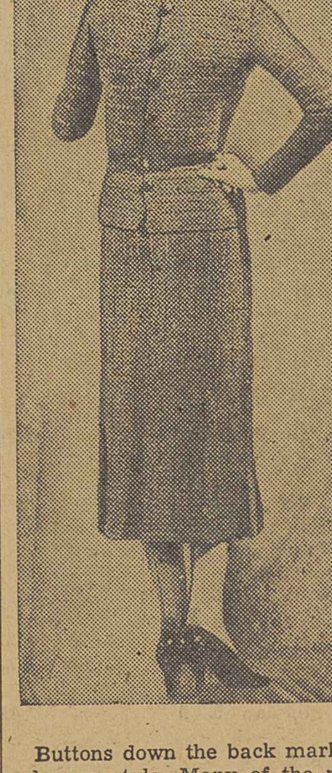
LATEST CROCHET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Buttons down the back mark this advance style. Many of the newer dresses are crocheted in a quick lacy stitch that is most effective yet does not exact a heavy toll of time and patience to bring to completion. The dress shown is chrocheted of knit-cro-sheen and will hold its shape beautifully. It is just the type to wear under coats this winter, and it will blossom out next spring gaily and becomingly and smartly wearable without a coat. You can turn this dress around and wear it frontways if you really wish.

STREET TWEED SUIT HAS LONGER JACKET

The conventional street suit of tweed is made this year with a longer jacket that is nipped in at the waist and then flares out in a basque. For country or sports wear, the more classic suit lines are used, with many three-quarter or full-length top coats shown over full or divided skirts. One house goes further and makes a bloomer dress of tweed. The dress is cut on severe, tailored lines, high at the neck and with long sleeves. Instead of a skirt, the dress ends in well-cut bloomers, which come several inches below the knees. A seven-eighths sport coat of matching tweed completes the bloomer costume.

Silk Satins Outstanding Vogue for Autumn Wear

From morning to night during the coming weeks style - alert women will be wearing silk satins, judging from the emphasis accorded this fabric in the Paris openings. Plain and novelty weaves are both endorsed.

Sleek satin afternoon frocks under modish broadcloth coats are especially good form. Satin blouses with wool suits are also in high fashion.

Printed silk satin in a pin motif or printed in a filigree patterning are among the new showings. Eyelet embroidered satin is also a new feature.

New Stocking Note

After a summer of light beige stockings, black heels strike a note that seems fresh and new. They are two-thread chiffon, with black heel, sole and toes, and seamed with black thread.

Contrast Important

Color contrast is important this season in sports costumes, skirts and sweater often being of different tones. Scarfs and belts also carry out color contrasts on knit.

"The Man Who-o-o"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HISTORIC MURDER

ONE hundred and ten years ago a man was murdered and as a direct result of that crime we now have, every four years, national conventions of delegates from every state and territory in the Union to nominate candidates for President and vice - president. Here's how it came about:

In 1826 William Morgan of Batavia, N. Y., published a book which purported to reveal the secrets of Freemasonry. Soon afterwards he disappeared and the Masons were not only accused of having kidnaped him and drowned him in the Niagara river but also of blocking a proper investigation of his disappearance. From western New York, opposition to the Masons spread to other states and several demagogic young politicians, among them Thurlow Weed and William H. Seward of New York and Thaddeus Stevens of Pennsylvania, seized upon the movement to promote their own ambitions.

The result was the organization of the Anti-Masonic party and in September, 1830, the first Anti-Masonic convention, the first national convention of any party, was held in Philadelphia, attended by 96 delegates from ten states. It was decided to hold another convention the next year to nominate candidates for President and vice-president and this meeting was to be composed of as many delegates from each state as there were representatives in both houses of congress.

Accordingly in September, 1831, the convention was held in Baltimore and it nominated for President William Wirt of Maryland, who had been attorney-general in Monroe's cabinet, and for vice-president Amos Ellmaker of New York. In the election of 1832 these candidates won only the electoral vote of Vermont. Later this party was absorbed by the Whigs and lost its identity, except in Pennsylvania where it elected a governor in 1835 and continued as a separate party for a few years.

But during the Anti-Masonic party's short existence it had pointed the way for others to follow in the method of choosing candidates. It gave them the national nominating convention and while convention procedure has since been changed in many ways, from that day to this the fundamental principle upon which it was based has remained unchanged—democratic representation of the party constituency.

KANSAS CAMPAIGNER

THE state of Kansas is in the limelight this year because for the first time in history a nominee of one of the major parties comes from the Sunflower state. Moreover, it has two candidates for the presidency—Gov. Alf. M. Landon heading the Republican ticket and Earl Browder of Wichita, the leader of the Communist party.

This is not the first time, however, that a Kansan has been a nominee. Back in 1884 there was another. He was John Pierce St. John, a native of Indiana, an adventurer in California in the gold rush days, a lawyer in Illinois and a soldier in the Civil war, rising to the rank of lieutenant-colonel of an Illinois volunteer regiment. After the war he moved to Missouri where he practiced law for a time and became noted as a political orator. In 1869 he moved to Kansas where he was to win his greatest renown.

He served in the state senate in 1873-4 but declined re-election and in 1878 was elected governor by the Republican party. Re-elected in 1880, he won the Republican nomination for a third term in 1882 but was defeated in the election.

Always a pronounced enemy of the liquor traffic, St. John was nominated for President on the Prohibition ticket in 1884 and polled a total of 151,809 votes. This was 20,000 more than the vote for Butler, the candidate of the "Greenbackers," so that he was the "runner-up" in the race between Cleveland and Blaine.

During his canvass for the presidency, St. John traveled extensively over the United States making speeches in behalf of the "dry" cause. In fact, during his 14 years of public life he is said to have hung up a record of travel exceeded by few candidates for office. He traveled more than 300,000 miles by rail, during which time he never had an accident nor was sick a day and made a total of 4,000 speeches, missing but four engagements in all that time.

Montreal's Historic Crosses

Many of the historic crosses in Montreal were raised by the pioneer inhabitants to commemorate being spared from the St. Lawrence river's ravages before it finally was brought under control. Founded by the man who erected its first and most famous cross, Paul de Chomedy, le Sieur de Maisonneuve, Montreal is frequently called the "City of Crosses." Maisonneuve'a cross was erected almost 300 years ago.

Wives, Know Yourselves!—

Accurate Analysis Will Do Much to Overcome Difficulty in Wedded Life

SPEAKING on the question of trial marriages, a well known writer said, "There should be no need for trial when two people know their own abilities and have measured themselves accurately. Two people who understand themselves will never, I believe, have any difficulty living happily together after marriage."

That is a new slant on the question of success in marriage, supplements a woman writer of national fame. Not "Know thy husband" — or "wife," but "know thyself!"

And, come to think of it, isn't most of the discontent and dissatisfaction in marriage traceable to ideas of ourselves—that may be misconceptions, no less than our illusions about the other person?

How many women's dissatisfaction with their husband has as its source the thought of all they gave up to marry him, all they "might have had" if they had married a certain other man?

How many women's discontent with the role of wife and mother springs from the thought of how much more fascinating pastimes they might have had if they had followed that career?

How many girl's impossible expectations of a fulltime lover and Prince Charming originates in an exaggerated notion of their own devastating beauty and charm?

If all discontented wives would look deeply unto themselves, measure themselves, stop fooling themselves, many might discover that the other man they might have married is a self-nurtured illusion; that the career of their dreams is not a soft snap and a joy forever; but a grueling, exhausting job which might have worn them out if they had qualified for it, which they probably would have been unable to do; that they themselves are neither devastating beauties nor always charming, but women who are frequently disappointing and difficult to live with. They might discover and admit to themselves that they are greatly in debt to their husbands for many things that make life easier and better and more worthwhile—that they would not get along so well without them.

Then they might think more of doing their part of trying to make those husbands happy. And that effort on the part of one must inevitably go a long way toward a mutually happy and successful marriage.

BOB JOINS THE RANGERS!
I'M STILL CONSIDERING YOU FOR THAT JOB AS FOREST RANGER, BOB... BUT THESE THINGS TAKE TIME, YOU KNOW!
AW—THAT'S WHAT YOU SAID BEFORE! SAY 'YES' OR 'NO', CAN'T YOU, AND BE DONE WITH IT?
HE'S STALLING! HE KNOWS HE DOESN'T NEED ANY MORE MEN—HE'S GOT TWO RANGERS NOW FOR EVERY TREE!
MR. COFFEE-NERVES
WELL, I'M DOING ALL I CAN FOR YOU, BOB—YOU'LL JUST HAVE TO BE PATIENT.
HOW CAN I BE PATIENT WHEN MY HEAD ACHES ALL THE TIME? I HAVEN'T HAD A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP FOR A WEEK!
TELL HIM HIS HEAD WOULD ACHE, TOO—IF HE EVER TRIED TO THINK! BUT HE'S BEEN SOUND ASLEEP FOR YEARS!
THAT DOESN'T SOUND LIKE YOU WERE PHYSICALLY QUALIFIED FOR THIS JOB, BOB—WHAT DOES YOUR DOCTOR SAY?
AW—HE SAID I'VE GOT COFFEE-NERVES! —TOLD ME TO CUT OUT COFFEE AND SWITCH TO POSTUM FOR 30 DAYS—WHAT BUNK!
ASK THIS CLUCK WHAT HAPPENED TO THE RULES THE YEAR THEY HIRED HIM!
WELL, IF YOU WANT TO BE A FOREST RANGER, BOB, YOU'D BETTER DO AS THE DOCTOR ADVISED—THEN SEE ME AGAIN ABOUT THAT JOB!
OH, ALL RIGHT—I'LL TRY IT! I CAN'T FEEL ANY WORSE!
CURSES! IF HE'S SWITCHING TO POSTUM—IT'S ME FOR THE TALL TIMBER!
30 DAYS LATER
I'M STARTING YOU OUT IN THE TOUGHEST RANGE ON THE RESERVE, BOB! I KNOW YOU'LL MAKE GOOD!
THANKS FOR GIVING ME THE CHANCE, CHIEF! I FEEL UP TO ANYTHING—SINCE I SWITCHED TO POSTUM!
Paul ARTHUR

OF COURSE, children should never drink coffee. And many grown-ups, too, find that the caffein in coffee disagrees with them. If you have headaches or indigestion or can't sleep soundly... try Postum. It contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened.

You may miss coffee at first, but after 30 days you'll love Postum for its own rich, satisfying flavor. Postum comes in two forms—Postum Cereal, the kind you boil, and Instant Postum, made instantly in the cup. Either way it is easy to make, delicious, economical, and may prove a real help. Mrs. Yeager, and Mr. Robert Maudlin, of Birmingham, were the guests of Mrs. Bessie Ingram, their sister, on Saturday. Mrs. Ingram's mother returned home with Mr. Maudlin.

Rev. F. H. Lafollette filled his regular appointment here Sunday. His family accompanied him and they took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frost.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Allen, and grandaughter, little Marilyn Allen, were the Sunday dinner guests of Mrs. T. W. Ingram and Mr. and Mrs. Max Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Nabors, of Birmingham, spent Friday night with their sister, Mrs. T. W. Ingram.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ingram and family sent Sunday with relatives in Bessemer.

Miss Sarah Lee spent Monday in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Knowles and Mr. Tala Allen spent Saturday in Columbiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbie Ingram and Houston spent Tuesday in Bessemer on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Whatley visited in Cullman last week.

Mrs. Herbert Wooten entertained on Saturday, October 31, at her home, in honor of her daughter, Vera's 15th birthday. Nice games and refreshments were enjoyed by the many friends who attended.

Mrs. P. M. Russell is visiting relatives in Steele, Alabama.

Mrs. Maurel Fletcher (Nellie Vernon) was honored with a miscellaneous shower, October 28, from 2 to 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Jess Vernon. Many nice and useful gifts were presented to the honoree.

The death of Mr. Joe M. Allen, on October 24, came as a great shock to his many friends.

Merely to say we miss him is inadequate. There never will be one who could take his place. He was loved and respected by both old and young. The little children of the community loved him as a father. He was the Superintendent of our Sunday school, one who was faithful at all times.

The funeral services were held at Spring Creek church on Sunday, October 25, at 2:30 p.m., with Rev. F. H. Lafollette officiating, with the assistance of the Rev. Cox of Montevallo and the Rev. John Alexander of Birmingham. The children of the two primary Sunday school classes sang "Jesus Loves Me". Mr. Allen loved to hear them sing and they sang one selection for him every Sunday.

The Loyal Four Quartet Rendered several beautiful selections and Miss Sue Beonica Ingram sang as a solo, "I Love To Tell The Story", a special request of the family, as this was Mr. Allen's favorite song and he had habitually called on her since her childhood to sing this song for im.

There was a large concourse of friends and relatives present and the gorgeous flowers evidenced the fact that we all loved him dearly.

Christian Endeavor met Sunday, November 1, at 3:00 o'clock, with Earl Lucas as the capable leader. The topic for discussion was "Missions." Those helping to make the program successful were: Sara Lee, Jeanette Samples, Lawson, Bessie, Annie Laura and Sue Ingram. Jack Lee sang a beautiful bass solo. After the program a brief business session was held under the direction of the president, James Lee, after which Rev. Lafollette delivered a very inspiring sermon.

Mr. John Allen was greatly missed in the religious features of last Sunday. It is with regret that we report his illness. May his recovery be quick for we need him.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Selma, Ala.—Endorsing efforts of the State Conservation Department to set up a constructive well-organized game and fish program, the Selma Chamber of Commerce has undertaken an energetic campaign to protect and restore forests and wildlife in Dallas County.

The recommended objectives of the organization, as announced by its Forest and Game Conservation Committee, include reforestation and forest conservation, reclamation of marginal lands, game conservation and replenishing, and fish conservation.

The first embraces assistance of the State Ranger in preventing forest fires, an educational campaign to teach the cost of forest fires and the penalty for starting them, and cooperation with law enforcement agencies in making arrests wherever possible.

As a part of its land reclamation program, the Chamber of Commerce hopes to interest Dallas County farmers and lumbermen in replanting baren, eroded and cut-over land, in replacing scrub growth with timber suitable for the land, and in educating owners of timber in moder nmethods of lumbering.

Next the body intends to investigate the feasibility of raising game domestically, particularly Bobwhites, with the idea of restocking depleted areas. It hopes to persuade the farmers to leave suitable cover crops and food for game, encourage farmers to raise game, rent hunting rights and oversee shooting. This phase of the program also includes a campaign against such predators as cats, crows and hawks. Cooperation with the game warden will be stressed.

The Chamber of Commerce is taking a bold step in the fish conservation work. First, it advocates a closed season on game fish during the spawning season. It also advocates a State fishing license, encourages the restocking of depleted streams, the building of fish ponds and expresses strong opposition to stream pollution and unnecceary draining project.

Much of this work the organization expects to carry on in cooperation with the newly organized Dallas County Conservation Council.

MOTOR VEHICLE OWNERS AID ASKED

The State Highway Department and the United States Bureau of Public Roads are cooperating in a State-wide Highway Planning survey to obtain data which will aid in preparing a comprehensive plan for building, improving and locating present and future roads in the State.

These departments must rely primarily on the interest and cooperation of all motor vehicle owners to supply the travel, gasoline consumption and related facts necessary for this study. The Probate Judges of all the Counties in the State are cooperating by handing out questionaire cards with each license tag for all types of vehicles. The questions asked on these cards may be answered from actual record or from estimates. These cards are addressed to the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads and require no postage. No signature is necessary and the figures on the card cannot be identified with the person returning them. If any motor vehicle owner does not receive a questionaire with his license tag, he is requested to ask the clerk in the Probate office for this card.

In order to obtain the greatest number of improved highways from the amount of money available, it is necessary to have information on which to base a program for roads in every section of the State.

If the citizens of this county are interested in their State and County obtaining these roads, it is necessary for every motor vehicle owner to supply the information by complying with the request to fill out and mail in cards promptly.

Every motor vehicle owner should be sufficiently interested enough to cooperate with their State Highway Department in obtaining these roads.

$100 Scholarship To Be Awarded

TO BE GIVEN, BY ALABAMA COLLEGE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION

For the purpose of encouraging students to continue study after graduation, the Alabama College Alumnae Association announces a $100 gift scholarship to be awarded for the year 1937-38 to the graduate of the College presenting highest qualifications for graduate work.

This scholarship will be given for the first time to a 1937 graduate or to an earlier graduate. Applications should be made to the scholarship committee, composed of Mrs. H. H. King, Birmingham, Miss Mattie Lee and Miss Virginia Hendrick, both of Montevallo.

The Alumnae Association has been offering scholarships for more than 25 years. Within the last six years a sum originally intended for a Model Home Building has been converted into the Mary Goode Stallworth Fund, from which loans, to be paid back the following year, are made to seniors. The gift scholarship is to be taken from this same fund.

Armistice Day Program Here

A most impressive Armistice Day program was rendered at Palmer Hall Wednesday at 11:00 o'clock, a.m., with the American Legion, and Auxiliary, Alabama College, and the public schools participating.

The speaker of the accasion was Hon. Lister Hill, Representative in Congress from the Second District of Alabama, Montgomery.

The program rendered was as follows:

"America," by the audience.

Invocation by Rev. O. R. Burns.

"There Is No Death," quartet by Mary Newman Graves, Mary Stewart Howell, Lois Thompson, Aidalu Butenschon; Ruth Schuessler, accompanist.

Address by Hon. Lister Hill.

"The Star Spangled Banner," by the audience. Benediction by Rev. O. R. Burns.

The address of Mr. Hill upon this occasion was one of the most inspiring pieces of oratory ever delivered at Palmer Hall.

Proclamation By Mayor Acker

The annual roll call for the Shelby County Chapter of the American Red Cross will begin on Armistice Day, November 11th, and end on Thanksgiving Day.

There is little need for me to remind the citizens of our community how vital the Red Cross is in the life of our country. During the past year, both from actual observation and from the accounts of work done which were carried in daily newspapers we have seen just how important it is that we have an active agency of the Amercan people to administer assistance when the need arises.

The frequency with which this need does arise has been demonstrated through the past twelve months when we recall the floods, the tornadoes, the hurricanes, and the epidemics that have been suffered in various parts of this great country, and the work that the Red Cross has done to relieve the distress and actual suffering as a result of these catastrophes. Other, but less spectacular, work carried on by the Red Cross has been just as important.

The Red Cross comes to us now with another appeal for membership dues that will finance the work during the year ahead. Our Red Cross asks little from the community, yet contributes much to the general welfare of our people.

For this reason, I sincerely urge those who are asked to participate in this great program by paying the relatively small membership to respond in a spirit of good neighborliness. I hope all will take part in the work by becoming members of the society.

It gives me great pleasure, therefore, as mayor of Montevallo, to hereby set aside the designated period, November 11 to November 26 as the time when all past members will be asked to renew their membership, and for those who have not enrolled before to add their names to the ranks of Red Cross members in our community.

CHARLES T. ACKER, Mayor.

Gripping Picture At Strand Nov. 17

UNDER AUSPICES OF LOCAL UNIT OF UNIVERSITY WOMEN

Through the American Association of University Women's local chapter, Montevallo and Shelby County will have an opportunity to see in "The Human Adventure", an eight-reel talking picture reviving the glories of mankind's past, at the Strand on November 17.

From out of the very lands where man had his first beginnings has come a new type of talking motion picture. Its leading character is Man and its story is the rise of Man from the remotest savagery to civilization.

Some of the highlights of the form of excavations which reveal fourteen distinct cities, each built upon the other with the Stone Age Village at the bottom and the remains of a Christian Temple at the top; weapons made by the Stone Age man; wheat from the days of Joseph; the stables of King Solomon; and many other archeological finds of importance to the historian of ancient man.

"The Human Adventure" enables us to see and visualize the tremendous achievements of man through the ages.

T. C. I. President Addresses College

The greatest business of all is the business of getting an education for oneself, and providing an education for others, declared J. L. Perry, Birmingham, President of Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, in an address at Alabama College Tuesday morning.

"In my opinion," said Mr. Perry, "education for women is even more essential than for men. As mothers, they are the most important of teachers, and they must be prepared for their tasks. But they need cultural development as well, so that when they are no longer occupied with their families, they can have a wide sphere of interest."

Mr. Perry praised Alabama College for the training it provides in the practical pursuits of life such as home-making, social welfare work, and business and public leadership. He said that while a certain type of woman may be satisfied with a career of dancing, dining, and shopping, those women with ambition are seeking an objective and the way to reach it.

Mr. Perry discussed products of T. C. I., showing how essential they are to the nation. He said that T. C. I. has been a leader in improving wages and living standards in the South, ad pointed to the Company's Fairfield Hospital as an example of interest in the public welfare.

GIRL SCOUTS

DO YOU KNOW

1. Are there male and female holly trees?
2. How can you tell a moth from a butterfly?
3. Were the great dinosaurs reptiles?
4. Do turtles have teeth?
5. Is an elephant covered with long black hair when born?

November, the very sound, fills Girl Scouts with bustle and tingle this time of the year. Armistice Day, a serious holiday. Thanksgiving, another serious celebration, serious because we make a special pause in our onrush of days to share material plenty both in giving and receiving can be especially meaningful to Girl Scouts this year as we finish the first twenty-five years of our existence in the United States.

The United States Flag Association, of Washington, D. C., announces that copies of its booklets giving the historical background of the flag of the United States of America and the accepted practice in displaying the flag, as well as reproductions of the Howard Chandler Christy painting, "The Flag Speaks," may now be purchased at leading five, ten, and twenty-five cent chain stores.

ANSWERS—

1. The female holly trees bear the berries.
2. The antennae (feelers) of the moth are feathery. Those of the butterfly are like a thread with a knot on the end.
3. The Dinosaurs were reptiles and laid eggs.
5. The ancient elephant, called the mammoth, had long black hair.
4. Turtles ave very sharp, horny jaws instead of teeth.

"Help us fight this epidemic." Such is the call that comes to the Red Cross many times yearly, and help is always given. This is the sort of work you keep going through your membership in the Red Cross. One dollar goes a long way in such work.

Partnership In Glory

From any corner of the country, at any moment, this story may come—From some corner at almost every moment it is coming:

"In the midst of ruin and disaster, the Red Cross has arrived, taken charge, is meeting the need."

It happens in San Francisco or Miami or Minneapolis or in any of the thousands of small communities in between. In the past twelve months it happened in 39 of the 48 states, and this past spring particularly it held the world breathless as flood and storm swept 17 Eastern and Southern States. It is impersonal news—the expected has happened, to meet the necessities of the unexpected. The process is familiar; it becomes a routine; perhaps it thereby loses in the general acceptance, some of its dramatic appeal.

But it is no routine and it is no common place in the communities where it happens.

Flood victims, victims of storm, gripped by a force against which no struggle seems to avail, have suffered the worst of disasters, the penetration of the chill of terror to the heart—and then the Red Cross, competent, experienced, sympathetic, adequate, takes over the situation. Fire victims face the loss of their all, survey the pain and suffering around them, begin to experience a hurt that is worse than the original disaster itself—the dread conquest of despair—and the Red Cross accepts the situation, mends its immediate hurts with gentle, competent hands, and then plans the way out.

These are mere glimpses at the daily routine of the American Red Cross, as the story is told in the current news of the nation. And back of the functioning of the emergency service is a less conspicious service which goes forward constantly, in the local training for various of the other requirements of everyday life, and is meeting its harder necessities.

The annual Red Cross Roll Call which is now in progress is not a solicitation for gifts—it is the sale of Partnership in Glory.

The dollar membership is an expression of the intent that "we" and not "they" shall do these heroic things; that "we" shall be associated in the making of that news which flashes from every scene of disaster—the news that sympathy and skill and understanding have arrived on the scene as soon as the blow has struck and are building it back to normalcy without haste, without loss, without red tape; but with Red Cross efficiency.

We can be remote spectators, or we can be partners and participants. The difference is the expressed wish to become a member, and the dollar membership fee.

It is a tremendous value for a dollar. And it represents the difference between personal responsibility and doing for ourselves—and being dependent on someone else to maintain society for us.

The annual Roll Call of the Red Cross is going forward in Shelby County now. Have you taken out your Partnership in Glory?

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

On Sunday, November 15, at 11 o'clock, Worship Service, Mr. Cox will use as his sermon theme the profoundly important query, "What Is Important to You?" A special vocal solo will be rendered by Miss Frances Lee. You are urged to worship with us. The most cordial welcome awaits you.

The church school and the Christain Edeavor Society will convene at 9:45 a.m. and 6:45 p.m., respectively. The former will be under the able direction of Professor W. J. Kennerly. The leader of the Society meeting, at night is to be Miss Sarah Ray. The theme of the meetins will be "The Christian View of War," which is a splendid sequel of the open forum, conducted by Mr. Stewart Wright, Field Secretary of the Peace Movement, on last Sunday. A large attenance is expected.

SPECIAL LEGION MEETING ON NOVEMBER 19TH

A special joint meeting of the American Legion and Auxiliary is announced for Thursday night, November 17, at the Legion hut in Montevallo. Visiting representatives of the Legion and Auxiliary from Calera and Columbiana are expected.

Honored guests for the occasion will be Dr. Austin, vice commander of the Alabama Department, and Mrs. Richard Redwood, State President of the Auxiliary.

Refreshments will be served by the ladies of the Montevallo unit of the Auxiliary. All World War veterans and their ladies are urged to attend.

Shirley Fills Every Moment With Vivacity

LITTLE STAR'S BOUNDLESS ENERGY AMAZES EVERYONE

The energy of a child at play is always astonishing—but the boundless energy of Shirley Temple passes beyond the astonishing stage into the miraculous.

Since the little star first appeared on the screen, motion picture fans have marveled at her tireless antics, before the camera. But that isn't the half of it—here's a typical 30 minutes from Shirley Temple's day taken at random during the production of "Dimples," Shirley's new Twentieth Century Triumph opening on November 15, at the Strand Theatre.

1st minute: Shirley skips 45 feet to the chair where Director William A. Seitter is sitting and says good morning.

3rd to 14th minutes: Shirley skips to the table where her school teacher, Fraces Klamt, is waiting. She takes her morning French lesson.

15th and 16th minutes: Shirley goes to the sound control box, and sound engineer, Gene Grossman, lets her put on the ear-phones and listen to the dialogue of Frank Morgan and Julius Tannen, who are rehearsing a scene beneath the microphone.

17th minute: Shirley invites Director Seiter to listen. He tells her she is to be in the scene.

23rd to 24th minutes: The scene is filmed.

25th to 26th minutes: The scene is taken again, and this time it is satisfactory to Mr. Seiter. When Shirley hears his approving order, "Print it," she dashes over to her pal and partner in fun, Anthony Ugrin, the still cameraman.

29th minute: Shirley remembers that Julius Tannen had started a drawing of a rabbit in her notebook for her the day before. She gets the notebook and takes it to Tannen.

Dr. Keller Renews School Appeal

STATEMENT ASKS CONSIDERATION OF STATE'S NEEDS IN EDUUCATION WEEK

Pointing to four consecutive years of "short school terms, inadequate school equipments and distressingly low teacher's salaries," Dr. J. A. Keller, State Superintendent of Education, Monday urged a general observation of "American Education Week" with the people giving thought to these "deplorable conditions" with which Alabama again is faced.

Dr. Keller's statement, addressed "To the People of Alabama," follows: "By proclamation of the President of the United States and of the Governor of Alabama, the week of November 9-15 has been designated for this year's observance of American Education Week, the annual observance of which has become a fixed custom in each of the States and Territories. The suggested program has been given wide publicity in newspapers and educational journals.

Plight Serious

"The support of public education is the most important of the many governmental functions that have been adversely affected by the depression. While all of the States have suffered in varying degrees, Alabama is among those which have been most adversely affected. After four consecutive years of short school terms, inadequate school equipment, and distressingly low teacher's salaries, our children and teachers are again confronted with another such year. Under these deplorable conditions it behooves our people to give prompt, serious, and effective consideration to the plight of our educational system which, from lowest school to highest institution, is in desparate need of financial relief.

"It is my hope that American Education Week will be generally observed through the State, with special reference to Alabama's educational conditions and needs. All schools, colleges, clubs, churches, and other organizations are urged to formulate and render local programs, to the end that everybody may be fully informed in regard to the most important problem now confronting our people.

"Our children of today will be our citizens of tomorrow. Without adequate schooling now they will not be able to perform the duties of citizenship and meet the competitions of life. Let us not longer neglect our children. Let us place them first."

MONTEVALLO DEFEATED

Montevallo was defeated for the first time this season at Piper last Friday. As you know, Montevallo won the Jones Valley game by forfeit, so Piper is the only team that has beaten Montevallo.

Montevallo knew that the Piper game was going to be their hardest and they were "ready to go." The first quarter was the only period in which Montevallo did not play better football than Piper, but that quarter proved disastrous. In the first minutes of play Piper put on a drive which Montevallo didn't seem to be able to stop, and it ended in a touchdown. The kick for extra point was blocked.

In the last three quarters Montevallo outplayed a gradually tiring Piper eleven. Montevallo looked good on defense, though their offense lacked good blocking. Montevallo and their chance in the last quarter when they had Piper punting from behind their own goal line. The punt was partially blocked by one of Montevallo's men, but Piper recovered and it gave them a first down. From there Piper took the ball out of danger on end runs.

The game was a very interesting one, and the players on both teams said it was a good clean game.

MONTEVALLO vs ISABELLA

Montevallo plays Isabella on Friday November 13, at 1:15 p.m. The High School is going to turn out as a body for the game. The Sr. III class is sponsoring an election of "sponsors". Anyone may vote by paying a penny for each vote. The sponsors will be chosen from among the following: Margaret Fancher, Carolyn Mays, Elizabeth Seales, Theda Wyatt, and Alice Nelle Fulford.

Several people have asked that a list of the players and the numbers of their jerseys be published. The following are the boys with the orange and blue jerseys, and their numbers:

To Quickly Ease Pains of Rheumatism

Bayer Tablets Dissolve Almost Instantly

In 2 seconds by stop watch, a genuine BAYER Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. What happens in this glass . . . happens in your stomach.

Ask Your Doctor About Genuine BAYER Aspirin

Any person who suffers from pains of rheumatism should know this:

Two genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets, taken with a full glass of water, will usually ease even severe rheumatic pains in a remarkably short time.

Ask your doctor about this. He will probably tell you there is nothing better. For real Bayer Aspirin tablets not only offer a potent analgesic (pain reliever), but start going to work almost instantly you take them. Note illustration of glass.

Try this simple way. You'll be surprised at how quickly pain eases. Get real Bayer Aspirin by asking for it by its full name, "Bayer Aspirin" at any drug store. Now virtually one cent a tablet.

Stomach Gas So Bad Seems To Hurt Heart

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."—Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

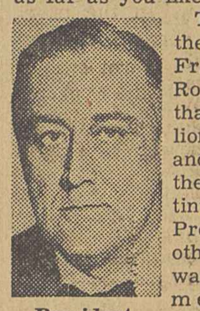
Tremendous Victory of President Roosevelt Gives Him Electoral Vote of 523 to 8 for Landon—Congress More Strongly Democratic.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

"WE LIKE your New Deal policies and have complete confidence in your administration. Go as far as you like."



President Roosevelt

That in effect was the message sent to Franklin Delano Roosevelt by more than twenty-five million American men and women when they voted to continue him in the Presidency for another four years. It was the most tremendous victory ever scored by a Presidential candidate since the days of James Monroe, for Mr. Roosevelt captured the 523 electoral votes of 46 states. Only Maine and Vermont, with five and three electoral votes respectively, were won by Landon and Knox, the Republican candidates. Their popular vote, when all returns are in, and tabulated, may be fifteen and a half million.

The amazing New Deal landslide is looked upon by most unbiased observers not as a Democratic party victory, but a personal triumph for President Roosevelt, an expression of confidence in him and a recognition of the improvement in the country's business and industry. It was so overwhelming that the President may well consider he has been given carte blanche to do as he pleases in carrying his policies on to their logical ends. What he may please to do depends largely on pending decisions by the Supreme Court of the United States on New Deal legislation.

President Roosevelt, moreover, will have at his command a congress more heavily Democratic than were the last two, for the lingering hopes of the Republicans that they could capture enough seats to enable them, in conjunction with conservative Democrats, to put up effective resistance to New Deal measures, were not realized. The New Deal majority in the new senate will be about five to one, and in the house it will be almost four to one. The few Republicans will be permitted to take part in debate, but when it comes to a vote the congress will be virtually a one-party affair.

Governor Landon and Colonel Knox, his running mate, accepted their defeat gracefully and sent to Mr. Roosevelt congratulatory telegrams promising to support, as good Americans, his efforts for the welfare of the country. The President responded with wires expressing his confidence that "all us Americans will now pull together for the common good."

The Republican party, despite its terrific drubbing, is not dead. Its national organization is intact and it, and such organizations as the American Liberty league, the Sentinels of America and the Volunteers, will continue their efforts to keep the ship of state on an even keel and headed in the right direction.

William Lemke, candidate of the Union party, failed to carry a state and his popular vote was not impressive; but he was re-elected to congress from North Dakota on the Republican ticket.

Incidentally, John N. Garner, who was scarcely mentioned during the hectic campaign, was re-elected vice president and will preside over the senate again. He took no real part in the battle, just riding along with his chief.

John N. Garner

Among the well-known Republican senators unseated by the upheaval are Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, Lester J. Dickinson of Iowa, Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island and Robert D. Carey of Wyoming. The one gain by that party was the Massachussetts seat won by Henry Cabot Lodge II, grandson of the noted senator. He succeeded in defeating Gov. James M. Curley, Democratic boss of the state. The Michigan seat of the late James Couzens was won by Representative Prentiss M. Brown, who beat Former Gov. W. M. Brucker. William E. Borah of Idaho, Arthur Capper of Kansas and Charles L. McNary of Oregon, all listed as Republicans, were re-elected; and so was George Norris of Nebraska who ran this year as an independent with the approval of Mr. Roosevelt. Minnesota Democrats meekly accepted the wrecking of their state ticket by New Deal orders and helped elect Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Laborite, to the senate. New Hampshire, the only state in which the Presidential vote was at all close, sends a Republican to the senate in the person of Gov. H. Styles Bridges. Other governors who won in senate contests were Theodore Francis Green of Rhode Island, who defeated Senator Metcalf; Clyde L. Herring of Iowa, victor over Senator Dickinson, and Ed C Johnson of Colorado, who defeated Raymond L. Sauter.

Among the many Republican members of the house of representatives who failed of re-election were Isaac Bachrach of New Jersey, Chester Bolton of Ohio and Mrs. Florence P. Kahn of California. George H. Tinkham of Massachusetts and Bertrand H. Snell of New York, minority leader, retained their seats. The new house will have five woman members, one fewer than in the last session. Oregon elected its first woman representative, Nan Wood Honeyman, Democrat and close friend of the Roosevelt family.

AT LEAST 25 states elected Democratic governors, and the number may be 27. In only three were the Republican nominees winners. William Langer, independent, won the governorship of North Dakota. Elmer Benson, Farmer-Laborite, was victorious in Minnesota, and Philip F. LaFollette, Progressive, in Wisconsin. New York re-elected Gov. Herbert Lehman, but he ran far behind President Roosevelt. Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, Democrat, also won, but his vote, too, was far less than that for the head of the ticket.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, leaving Hyde Park for Washington to "try to balance the budget," as he said, authorized the announcement that on November 17 he would start on a cruise on the warship Indianapolis for a rest of about four weeks, and that it was possible he might go to Buenos Aires, Argentina, to open the Pan-American peace conference on December 1. He may also visit Rio de Janeiro.

JAMES A. FARLEY, manager of the triumphant Roosevelt campaign, resumed his office of postmaster general, attending the first post-election meeting of the cabinet. He said he would serve out his term but refused to comment on predictions that he would not be in the next cabinet. Mr. Farley is about to leave for a short vacation in Ireland.

The Democratic national chairman, commenting on the election, called attention to his exact forecast that Roosevelt would carry every state except Maine and Vermont, and added: "We would have carried Maine if we had put forth the same effort there as we did in the September election."

DEFENSE MINISTER EDOUARD DALADIER sees a possibility of a swift attack on France by Germany, so he urged upon the chamber of deputies army committee the immediate fortification of the Belgian and Swiss frontiers and the speeding up of manufacture of war materials. He asked the committee to recommend an appropriation of 500,000,000 francs to fortify the borders with another "Maginot line" of steel and concrete "pill boxes" and underground passages.

Edouard Daladier

Obligatory physical training for all Frenchmen, beginning at the age of eighteen, was proposed by Daladier as an aid to building up the French army.

The number of professional troops in the army, he asserted, has been increased in the last few months from 106,000 to 144,000.

KING EDWARD VIII, making his first parliamentary appearance since he succeeded to the throne of England, opened parliament with all the traditional ceremony. His throne stood alone in the house of lords and beside it rested the crown which has not yet been placed on his head. Robed in crimson and gold, the monarch read his address to the nation, beginning with his affirmation of the Protestant faith.

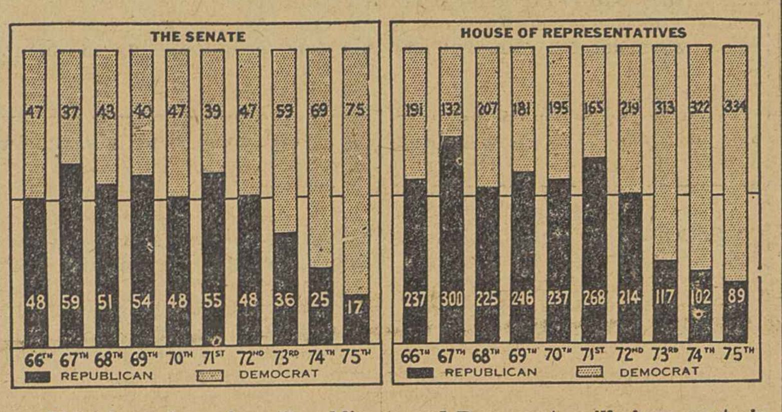
"My relations with foreign powers continue to be friendly," he said. "The policy of the government continues to be based on membership in the League of Nations."

He took up in turn the points of his government's proposed program. It would, he promised, work with other nations through the league, for peace. It would "persist in efforts" to build a new Locarno treaty and to extend the naval armaments limitations treaty signed last March by Britain, France, and the United States.

The government, he announced, will call an imperial conference in London next May, and that after his coronation he would go to India to be crowned emperor.

Mrs. Wallis Simpson, the king's American friend, had a choice seat in the diplomats' gallery, being accompanied by two other women.

Party Line-Ups in 10 Congresses



This chart shows how Republicans and Democrats will share seats in both houses of seventy-fifth congress, as compared with nine preceding congresses.

Election Sets a New Record With 43,000,000 Votes Cast

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, elected to a second term by a greater plurality than any candidate has ever enjoyed in the past, finds himself now with perhaps more power than has ever before been trusted to any man in the world. He polled some 25,500,000 popular votes, to set a new all-time record. Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, his Republican opponent, was a bit shy of 16,000,000, while William Lemke, the Union party candidate, polled about three-fourths of a million.

These results were based upon 107,309 districts reported out of the 122,722 in the United States. It was estimated that the total vote, with all districts reported, would approximate 43,000,000, also a new all-time record.

The American people, providing the incumbent Democratic candidate with 523 votes in the electoral college to 8 for Governor Landon, also voiced their approval of the New Deal by materially increasing the Democratic majority in both houses of congress.

The senate in the Seventy-fifth congress will find the Democrats with 75 of the 96 seats, outnumbering the opposition more than 4 to 1. The house of representatives, where the Republicans had hoped to recover as much as 125 seats, will see the Democrats even stronger than before, holding 334 seats against 89 for the G. O. P.

PRESIDENTIAL VOTE BY STATES

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt swept to re-election on the crest of the largest wave of votes, both popular and electoral, ever cast for a Presidential candidate, it was apparent with 105,251 districts reported out of a total of 122,772 in the United States. The table below shows the number of districts reporting in each state, the popular vote, the electoral vote and the winner's plurality in each state. Pluralities are estimated, since in most cases complete returns will not be available for some time:

Here's How Parties Line Up in Congress

With smashing Democratic victories all down the line, this is the way the houses of the Seventy-fifth congress will line up, as compared with the Seventy-fourth congress. The next house of representatives:

Democrats	334
Republicans	89
Progressives	7
Farmer-Laborites	5
Total	435

The last house of representatives lined up as follows:

Democrats	321
Republicans	104
Progressives	7
Farmer-Laborites	3

The senate of the Seventy-fifth congress will find the seats distributed this way:

Democrats	75
Republicans	17
Progressives	1
Independent	1
Farmer-Labor	2
Total	96

The party alignment in the old senate was:

Democrats	70
Republicans	23
Farmer-Labor	2
Progressives	1

Total Vote Grows

The total vote in the 1936 election surpassed that of four years before by more than 3,000,000.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

The Souls of Oysters
In the Coffin, He Pays
Polly Has a Tombstone
Suicide Is Folly

Mr. Kokichi Mikimoto, able Japanese gentleman, once a peddler of noodles, is now gigantically rich, thanks to his oyster pearl idea. He makes real pearls by forcing the oyster to work at pearl production. Instead of diving for oysters, hoping to find one with a pearl in it, he puts little, irritating grains of sand inside the shells of millions of oysters, and each oyster proceeds to deposit the pearly substance on the sand to escape its irritating scratching.

Arthur Brisbane

These pearls are "real." Although experts can tell the difference, they annoy jewelers and have hurt the value of the other accidental pearls, but they make it unnecessary for the unfortunate pearl diver to "go all naked to the hungry shark," as the poet has it. Mr. Mikimoto has been obliged to kill hundreds of millions of oysters, which is serious: his Buddhist religion teaches that each has its little separate soul—in fact, the soul of his great-grandmother might have resided in one of the oysters.

An American who recently died left a fortune of between twenty-five and thirty million dollars, chiefly in tax-exempt securities on which the owner, while he lived, paid no income tax. Now that he is dead, inheritance taxes will take about two-thirds of the many millions.

The lack of a "dead-or-alive" tax-exempt securities offers opportunity to some able lawyer. If the government has no constitutional right to take any income from tax-exempt bonds, how can it legally take half merely because the owner is in his coffin?

A green parrot, with red tipped wings, buried in a respectable grave, will have a granite headstone with "Here lies Polly Coddington, sixty-eight years old," engraved on it. Exactly how old Polly was, no one knows. Born in Brazil, she was presented to the grandmother of Mrs. Joseph E. Hunt, sixty-eight years ago. Parrots, like eagles, elephants and other intelligent creatures that eat wisely, often pass one hundred.

Gruesome details which no one seems to have put into a movie or a horror story are published in connection with a recent suicide. The unfortunate victim, convinced that life was not worth while, hanged himself, and then, still conscious, found he was mistaken and made desperate unsuccessful efforts to cut the rope.

Those that think of suicide should remember that they must leave the world soon in any case, and might as well remain to see what will happen. While there is life, there is hope.

Chiang Kai-Shek, dictator of the Nanking government, warns China, "No nation can ruin us unless we first ruin ourselves," emphasizing the fact that the short road to national ruin is neglect of preparation for war. Some patriotic American "radio sponsor" might arrange to broadcast that talk in Washington, D. C. We need it here almost as much as China needs it.

England fears that quarrels among union men may cause strikes in airplane factories and delay Britain's effort to get ready for her next war. Such strikes would probably bring welcome orders for planes to American factories; nevertheless, it is only fair to remind British workers, quarreling among themselves, that when foreign bombs begin dropping on their families, any strike against national safety will seem to have been foolish, in retrospect. And those words, "chiefly women and children," should be remembered.

Borrowed money is cheaper, and it ought to be, since the dollar is only worth 59 cents. A cheap house or cheap dollar should bring a cheap rent. Even so, it surprises you to learn that Mayor LaGuardia borrowed from J. P. Morgan & Co. thirty million dollars for the city, spread over a five-year period, for one and one-tenth per cent interest.

Here, Myron C. Taylor, head of "Big Steel," greatest steel company in the world, announces increases in wages, also resumption of full dividend payments on the preferred United States Steel stock, also earnings in three months of more than thirteen million dollars, biggest in six years. Thirteen million dollars in three months may not be "big money," but "it is better than being hit on the head with a sharp stone."

The Noble Nature

IT IS not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make man better be;
Or standing long an oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald and sear:
A lily of a day
Is fairer in May,
Although it fall and die that night
It was the plant and flower of Light.
In small proportions we just beauties see,
And in short measures life may perfect be.

Cheese Souffle

2 tablespoonfuls flour.
¼ teaspoonful salt.
3 eggs.
2 tablespoonfuls butter.
1 cupful corn (optional).

Mix flour with salt and paprika and add to butter, which has been melted. Beat until mixture is smooth. Add milk and grated cheese. Heat to boiling point, then cool slightly. Beat eggs separately, adding yolks to mixture first, then the whites, which must be beaten very stiff. (If corn is used, mix in before adding egg whites. (Pour all into a baking dish and place it in pan of hot water. Bake scant half hour in a moderate oven and serve immediately.

When corn is used, the following sauce may be served with the souffle: Two slices onion cooked in two tablespoonfuls butter until brown. Remove from fire and after mixing two tablespoonfuls flour with one-quarter teaspoonful salt and same of pepper, add to butter and onion and stir until smooth. Last, add one cupful tomatoes which have been strained. Stir until it comes to a boil and then serve immediately on souffle.

Hawaii's Memorial Stone

The memorial stone from Hawaii which is to be placed in the Washington monument is of coral sandstone and will bear the following inscription in Hawaiian: "Ua mau ke ea o ka aina i ka pono." The translation of this is "The life of the land is preserved in righteousness" and it is the official motto of the island.

The stone is 4 by 2 feet and 6 inches thick. It will be placed in the interior of the monument on the 360-foot level.

"All set, Bill," returned Pardaloe peacefully. "You hustled me so, I got the wrong hat, boy."

Denison was waspish with impatience. "Man alive, what difference does it make what hat you wear?"

"A whole lot of difference," returned Pardaloe with warmth. "Had on my new hat. It might git plugged."

Three men rode with Denison that night — Pardaloe, Bob Scott, and Frying Pan. The ponies were fresh and the men eager. They stopped at Gunlock. A light was still burning in the living room of the ranch house.

When the men pulled up in the yard, Denison sprang from the saddle, ran to the door, and knocked.

"Who's there?" were the low words from within.

"Is that you, Jane? It's Bill."

She flung the door open. "Bill," she cried, "what are you doing here?"

"I think I'm needed here. How's Henry Sawdy?"

"Oh, he's badly wounded, Bill. How did you know?"

"Bob Scott and John Frying Pan have strict orders to bring me ranch news of the kind that came today."

"Tell me quickly, dear, what happened this afternoon," he urged.

"McCrossen rode out to get some things, so he said. I was sitting here sewing Bill, when in walked McCrossen. He said he was going away for good. I said I wished him good luck."

Jane hesitated a moment. "He asked me to kiss him good-by. I said no. He got angry and swore he'd take as many as he wanted. I tried to run to the front door. He caught me, and I was fighting him in his arms when Henry Sawdy walked in at the kitchen door.

"He turned on Sawdy. 'Get out of here, Sawdy,' he shouted. I begged Sawdy to protect me.

"'Let go that girl!' Sawdy said.

"McCrossen turned on Henry, his gun in his hand.

"Henry didn't dare fire for fear of hitting me. McCrossen fired point-blank at Henry, and he fell in a heap. I screamed, tore myself loose, and ran out the front door and hid behind a tree."

He comforted her as best he could. "I must see how bad Henry is hurt, then I'm off with Pardaloe and Bob Scott after McCrossen. He's running off steers tonight."

With Jane, he went to the bed on which Sawdy had been laid. Sawdy looked pleasantly surprised as Jane held up the lamp and he saw Denison. "Well, Bill," he said coolly, "the old foreman is shootin' us up today."

"Henry, where are you hit?"

"In the side, Bill, but it ain't over-serious. You see, McCrossen—"

"Jane told me, Henry. Don't waste any strength talking.'

"When I seen his game to hold Jane for a shield, I made up my mind to drop at his first shot—"

"You did a good job. Now keep quiet."

Over the rim of the hills a full moon was rising into a cloudless sky. Jane, with tightened lips, her heart pounding in her throat, her straining eyes tearless, stood in the open doorway watching the ghostly figures of the four horsemen silhouetted against the sky, as they made their way up the ridge that led to the hill divide.

From the moment Denison and his companions crossed the divide, they were riding into enemy country.

Frying Pan was asked to strike farther down and across the reservation; the rendezvous had been fixed at a point on Deep Creek.

With the hills behind them, Denison, Scott, and Pardaloe made their way down the creek breaks to the benchlands. They were aware of a rough cattle trail along the east bank of the creek, but the night, as they halted on the creek bench, was silent. Denison conjectured wrongly that the cattle had been driven past this point.

Working carefully downstream through clumps of willows and alders along the benches, Scott pushed ahead to locate the phantom Frying Pan. The lone Indian after a time came down from the hills. He was taciturn. "Nobody go by," was all he said.

Denison questioned him closely without shaking his certainty that neither cattle nor horsemen had passed down the east bank. The west bank, where the pursuers were now halted, was impassable for cattle.

"They've taken another trail, Bob," declared Denison to Scott. "There's an overgrown trail through the timber to the south. It's a long way around and rough, and they took it to throw off pursuit. But that may beat them yet."

"How so?"

"They've got to double back, lower downstream to strike Deep Creek again with the cattle. We'll play it so, anyway. It's into the brush for us. We can't cross the horses here. If I'm wrong, and they're above us yet, it's safer to stick to this side, anyway."

"Where can they strike the creek?"

"About a mile above the old bridge."

"How we goin' to get to them?"

"We've got to cross that bridge."

Scott smiled a sickly smile. "That bridge's been fallin' to pieces for ten years."

"John," said Denison to Frying Pan, "feel out the scrub for us. Let's go!"

The riding was rough and the pace through the chaparral grueling. The four men reached a point where the creek bottom opened from a canyon out on low, rough country, and the rising moon shed more light.

"We're a mile yet above the bridge," said Denison. "You and John ride up the canyon wall a ways, Bob, and take another look," he suggested.

The Indians came back with news. "There's somethin' looks like what's left of a campfire near the bridge—"

"Push on!" exclaimed Denison. "They may have halted there."

The riding grew worse. Thickets became almost impassable. There never had been a trail down the west bank, and the job called for dogged endurance.

Scratched and torn, the four reached an open breathing space where rock and shale ended the fight through the scrub. The moon, clearing the mountain peaks, revealed, at a distance below, the abandoned bridge. Not far from it, Denison could discern embers of the campfire Frying Pan had reported.

"Where there's been a fire, there's been men," said Denison. "They may be there yet. But we've got to watch both sides of the creek. Suppose you, Bob, and Frying Pan get over to the east bank—"

"How?"

"The bridge."

Scott grinned but shook his head. "There's ten feet of plankin' gone in one place from the floor of the old bridge. Nobody can cross that. We could maybe crawl across in the daytime—not now."

"We've got to get across somehow," insisted Denison. "Bob, is there any place up or down the creek where you and John can get over?"

"Not with horses."

"Well, we must stop the cattle and whoever's with 'em. I'll get over, somehow, after you. Where's the planking off the bridge?"

"The east end."

"That's bad. No matter — dust along. Two shots from you will bring me over. Anyway, you stop anybody that comes along with the beef. We'll leave the horses here with Pardaloe, and while you're getting over I'll try to find out who these fellows are below at the fire. Bill," he turned to Pardaloe—"if I need you, I'll whistle."

"O. K.," assented the lanky Pardaloe.

Denison, though anxious to get at what lay ahead of him, was forced to work down the slope slowly. Within a long earshot of the dying fire, he thought he heard voices. Since the men were still there, renewed caution was called for.

He made out two voices.

Flattening on the sand, he listened. The fire and the men were not over fifty feet away. Denison could hear their words. They were talking English, though one voice was guttural and revealed a Mexican. As they were obviously waiting for someone who had failed to appear, cold, and too lazy to keep up their fire, Denison made no bones about intruding on the pair.

The first the two men heard from him was a low but plain command:

"Pitch up, boys!"

The startled pair jumped to their feet. "Up! Put 'em up," came a sharper order. Their hands went haltingly up. They looked around to see where the voice came from, and while they looked they heard a short whistle and saw a man emerge from the chaparral not twenty feet away.

"Who the hell are you?" demanded the smaller man of the pair, with a bluster. His voice betrayed him to Denison.

"I'm here, same as you are, to meet some cattle coming down the creek," returned Denison. "I'm going to help you, Clubfoot. Hands up. Damn you, keep 'em where they are!" While he spoke, he heard Pardaloe cluttering through the thicket. "Bill," he added, as Pardaloe appeared "bring down the horses, will you?

"These boys are waiting for the cattle, same as we are," explained Denison when Pardaloe reappeared. "We don't need four hands on the job. Take their guns. Tie 'em up till we get straight."

Pardaloe, tying the mounts, stamped forward, gun in hand. He searched the pair, while Clubfoot protested profanely at the outrage.

"I'm here to take over cattle that belong to me — bought and paid for," stormed the butcher.

Before Pardaloe had finished roping the butcher and his helper, a shot was heard from far across the creek. Denison started almost as if the bullet had struck him.

While he listened with every nerve on edge, a complete silence followed. It was not a fight. Was it a signal?

Almost five minutes passed when a second shot rang into the night. Denison tried to read the riddle. The first shot had come from a revolver; the second, sharper and less open, had come from a rifle. It all dawned on Denison—they were signal shots.

He whirled toward Pardaloe. "Hand me Clubfoot's gun, Bill," he said. Securing the gun, he fired it twice in the air.

"Some guesswork here, Clubfoot," he remarked, emptying and tossing the gun on the ground. "I don't know whether your answer was to be one or two."

Scarcely were the words out of his mouth, when a spatter of revolver shots rang across the creek.

"Bill," exclaimed Denison, "that's a fight. If these birds make you the least trouble, shoot 'em. I'm going over."

"How you goin' over?" called Pardaloe.

"Quickest way I can, Bill," he shouted. "The bridge."

He was running for his horse.

"You're crazy. It'll drop you a hundred feet, man!" shouted Pardaloe.

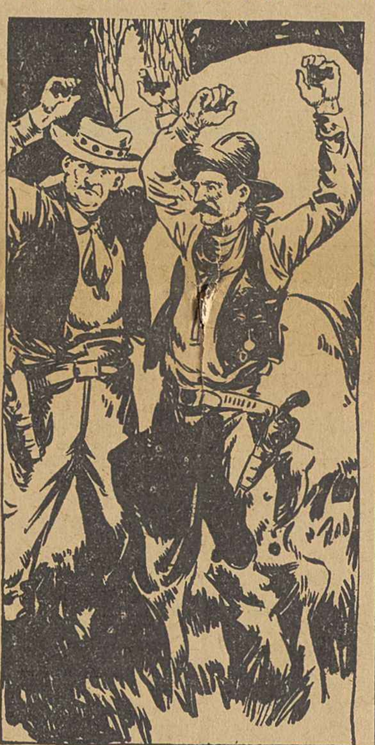
"Watch your prisoners!"

Denison was galloping away.

Pardaloe, petrified, watched the disappearing horseman. Nothing but the sharp echo on his ears of flying hoofs convinced him he was not dreaming, for he never would have believed sober Bill Denison would take so slender a chance of getting across the creek alive. The clatter of hoofs grew fainter. At times they ceased, and the old frontiersman's breath choked him. Then, as if in answer to his straining ears, came the hollow sound of hoofbeats on wood. Denison had reached the bridge.

An instant later there came into Pardaloe's sight, in the distant moonlight, the ghostlike figure of a horse flying across the rotten bridge. Pardaloe divined at once that the pony had thrown his rider. Then, of a sudden, the riderless beast whirled with a spring and, as if somehow guided, shot ahead again —he was a third of the way over.

Pardaloe's jaws came together squarely and comfortably, for he now understood. Denison was on that horse, clinging to its back like a panther.



Their Hands Went Haltingly Up.

But there was still the east-end plank gap to cross. Scott had said the big one was ten feet, but he had not seen it for a year. It might easily be twelve or fifteen feet; suppose it were twenty?

With Denison more than halfway across, the clatter of hoofs grew fainter. One, two, three rifle shots rang out in fairly quick succession.

To this day the gap that Denison jumped has never been measured.

The reckless rider had been spotted when he was less than halfway across. McCrossen, riding behind the cattle, had galloped forward when Rebstock ahead was intercepted and questioned by Scott. The half-breed's gun signals had been taken by Redstock as an attack, and he had fired back. Before either side really knew what it was all about, they were exchanging shots. But the instant McCrossen saw the horse dashing along the rotten bridge, his sixth sense of danger guessed the rider for an enemy, and without a moment's hesitation he trained a rifle on him and fired.

By a chance that rarely favors desperate measures, Denison sprawled from the final leap across the bridge gap into a fringe of sand and willows that overgrew the eastern bridge approach.

Threading the undergrowth on his trembling horse, Denison got away from the bridge as fast as he could; somebody was still throwing rifle slugs toward it; but once away from the danger point, he lost no time in making himself heard.

"The. man that owns em," shouted McCrossen, riding out into the open, fifty yards away. "Who the hell are you, hidin' in that brush? If you're a man, show yourself."

Denison pushed into the open. "You're driving this bunch, McCrossen?"

"I am. What do you want, Denison?" he demanded angrily.

"I want these steers, McCrossen. And I want you."

"These steers belong to me for wages, an' I've got twice as many back there yet. Now I've got just one word for you, Denison: Get out of my way an' keep out of my way."

"If you've got any rights in these cattle, turn 'em back to the Meadows and lay your claim for wages before the Stockmen's Claims Board," retorted Denison.

"What the hell's all this to you? Do you claim 'em?" demanded McCrossen savagely.

"I don't claim a hoof, but I want to talk with you, McCrossen, before you jump to the Panhandle."

"What about?"

"About who fired my ranch house and about Henry Sawdy."

"Tryin' to pick a quarrel with me, eh, Denison? Well, you needn't try very hard. I don't like you, Denison. I never did. I never had any use for you. Now will you pull off these bums that are millin' my steers?"

"Will you head 'em back for the Meadows and talk to me?"

"No!"

"No!"

The two refusals were fast. But while the second was being uttered, Rebstock cried, "Crowd him, Dave!" and fired at Denison.

The next instant three horsemen were plunging at one another on rearing horses and throwing their shots at one another in a very uncertain light.

None of the three was new at the deadly game; each used his own pet tactics. McCrossen took his partner's advice. The three had talked twenty yards apart. McCrossen and Rebstock dashed in from two sides of the triangle to kill before Denison could retreat.

In fact, retreat was out of the thinking. Denison, caught between the two men, was forced to divide his fire. With a blow stinging his left arm, he jumped his horse past the two, whirled, and came back outside, with McCrossen shooting at him fast. The maneuver of Denison's put McCrossen into Rebstock's line of fire.

But hardly had Denison whirled when he felt a sickening blow in the stomach from McCrossen's gun, hardly ten yards away. He had been crouching on his horse's back and was already stirrup-loose. He slid off and rolled like a cat toward the brush. Rebstock saw the trick but, forgetting that a wounded man is the most dangerous man, he yelled and spurred straight at him.

The horse refused the smell of blood. He shied. Rebstock spurred him. As the horse reared, the feeble light of the moon struck, for an instant, Rebstock's features. In that instant Denison fired point-blank at him.

Fully expecting that McCrossen would ride in to finish him, Denison flipped open the loading gate of his gun instinctively, and punched out the empty shells.

His head in a whirl, expecting that any instant McCrossen would be on him, Denison tried to reload. Just as he got the cartridge into his revolver, he caught the sound of a horse's hoofs and then heard Bob Scott calling.

"Here, Bob," exclaimed Denison from the brush. "Look out for McCrossen."

"I stopped a couple of slugs somehow. What about McCrossen?" he asked irritably.

"He's lyin' over by the bridge. He wants to talk to you, Bill."

"What the hell does he want to talk to me for?"

"He asked me to tell you he did. You can't lose no time, Bill. Can you stand up?"

"Twist a tourniquet around this arm before I try it, Bob. Don't trust McCrossen. Have you got his guns? He'd like nothing better than another crack at me," muttered Denison, staggering, with Scott's help, to his feet.

"McCrossen's stripped clean," declared Scott. "He's dyin'. That's the plain truth. Can't you make up your mind to see what he wants?"

"Go ahead. But give me my gun and watch out," muttered Denison.

In the light of the moon, McCrossen, propped up by Frying Pan, reclined against the trunk of a half-grown tree.

"Here's Bill, Dave," Scott spoke low and gently. "You said you wanted to speak to him."

"Yes, Dave?" said Denison, haltingly.

"I'm done, Bill."

"Dave," exclaimed Denison. "I'm sorry it had to end this way."

"I talked pretty rough tonight," said McCrossen, brokenly, spitting the blood out of his throat.

"That's all right, Dave."

"Didn't really mean it all. You've always shot square, Bill. If some folks I've trained with had done that way, I mightn't be here tonight. Bill, a favor—"

"Go on, Dave."

"I've got an old-maid sister back East. She's all I've got. I'd hate her to know this come, rustlin', Bill."

"It'll never be said, Dave."

"Let it be a straight-out fight, Bill—you know."

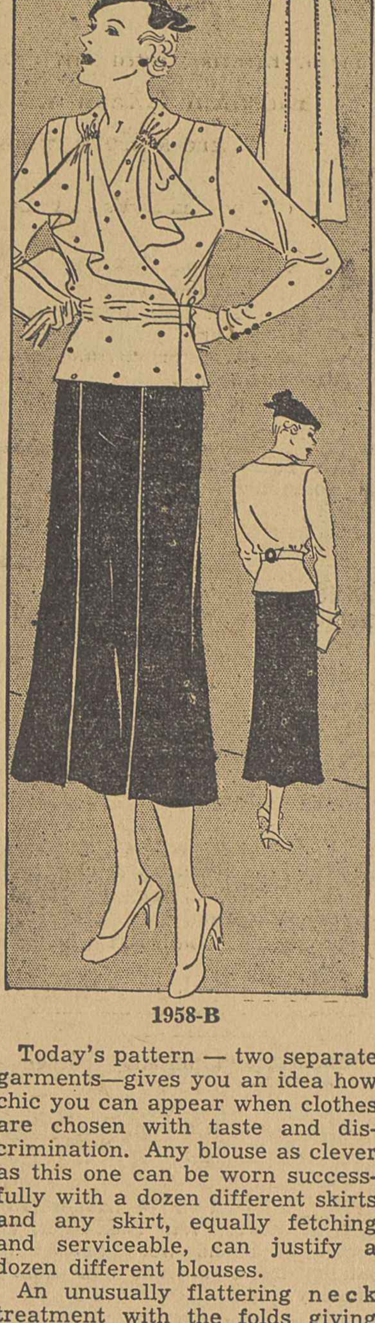
Fetching Blouse and Skirt



1958-B

Today's pattern — two separate garments—gives you an idea how chic you can appear when clothes are chosen with taste and discrimination. Any blouse as clever as this one can be worn successfully with a dozen different skirts and any skirt, equally fetching and serviceable, can justify a dozen different blouses.

An unusually flattering neck treatment with the folds giving way to a jabot effect and surplice closing, lends distinction to the blouse fashioned in a solid crepe, pastel silk, or gold metal, while the skirt relies on a slenderizing front panel ending in pleats to relieve its essential simplicity. Try a satin, velveteen, silk, crepe, or velvet for the skirt.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1958-B is available for sizes: 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42, 44 and 46. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 (34) requires two and five-eighths yards of 39-inch material for the blouse and two and one-eighth yards for the skirt. Price of pattern, 15 cents.

Send for the Fall Pattern Book containing Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send 15 cents for your copy.

The Red Cross year-round service of health education and conservation, as well as general emergency relief activities, are made possible through Red Cross membership dollars received by the local chapter during the annual roll call campaign. It is a gesture of civic interest to join the Red Cross in the period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Montgomery.—If all the essential functions of the State Government were abolished at once, including the Governor's office, the Legislature and the courts, leaving all provisions for the care of the insane, the deaf and dumb, the criminal and payment of interest charges on the public debt and the cost of registering voters—only about $3,000,000 would thus be saved. The amount is less than the schools need to increase the average term from 5½ to 7 months. Educational leaders estimate that approximately $3,650,000 would be required to extend the school term by 1½ months.

These facts are plainly revealed in the 1936-37 budget released last week by the State Comptroller, C. W. Lee.

Only a rudimentary knowledge of the financial structure of the State Government is necessary to refute the assertions of critics that the schools might be saved by "rigid economy" in certain branches of the government.

Likewise, it is apparent that any appreciable cut in the administrative arm of the government, particularly the tax collecting division, would cause tax receipts to fall to a catastrophic low, or worse, have the effect of virtually annulling the State's income.

Both friends and enemies of the administration agree that about $4,000,000 additional revenue must be raised to balance the budget and provide a 7 months term for the 650,000 children in the State's common schools.

The preferred claims in the State Treasury mentioned at the outset of this article, such as the care of the insane, deaf and dumb, criminal, and payment of public debt charges cannot be repudiated under any circumstance. The total is $3,143,508.66, as fololws:

Interest charges, old bonded debt	333,720.00
Interest and debt payments on harbor improvement bonds	173,062.00
Interest charges, public School Fund	190,356.66
Total of Preferred Claims	$3,142,508.66

Each of the State's 67 counties received checks this week for $8,109.64, representing their equal share of collections by the State Tax Commission during the month of October, of the tax on gasoline sales made in the State during September.

It is the largest amount the counties have ever received from this source in one single month, according to Henry S. Long, chairman of the State Tax Commission. During the fiscal year ending on September 30, 1936, each county in Alabama received for gasoline tax collections a total of approximately $85,000.

Hearings on the test suits attacking the constitutionality of Alabama's unemployment compensation insurance act scheduled for Monday in Montgomery Circuit Court was definitely postponed by Judge Walter B. Jones, who announced that he would sit as a "guest" judge in a similar case to be heard by a three-judge Federal Court here on November 18.

CCC Meeting Is Well Attended

The Eighth Period Emergency Conservation Program which began on October 1, opened with all five of the Civilian Conservation Corps Camps which have been working on Alabama's National Forests remaining intact, according to Forest Supervisor, Frank W. Rasor, who has his office in the Bell Building in Montgomery.

These camps are located as follows: Camp F-9 on the Conecuh National Forest about fourteen miles south of Andalusia; F-7 at Chandler Springs, twelve miles east of Talladega and F-6 at Heflin on the Talladega National Forest; F-5 which is five miles east of Double Springs, and F-3 located near Haleyville on the Black Warrior National Forest. Each camp has a full work load set up for the eighth period which will extend through March 1937.

Work projects scheduled for the period are varied in nature but each will contribute toward the goal of increasing the manifold benefits and usefulness of the National Forests to the people, State and Nation. Roads are to be extended through hitherto inaccessible country to facilitate fire suppression and utilization of forest products. Lookout towers will be erected at strategic points and telephone lines built connecting them to the Rager's headquarters in order that fires may be spotted and reported while they are small and suppression crews sent to them quickly. The greater share of actual fire fighting will be handled by trained crews from the CCC camps.

The collection of longleaf, loblolly, and virgin pine cones should be completed by the camps in mid-November. These cones are shipped to large Forest Service tree nurseries where the seed are extracted. Tree seedlings are raised at these nurseries and distributed among the Southern National Forests for the planting of denuded areas.

During the Eighth Period the CCC will complete a planting survey of the Conecuh National Forest. This survey will show which areas of Government owned lands are most in need of planting. On the basis approximately one million trees will be planted on such non-productive areas during the eighth period.

Locations which have recreational possibilities are to be developed for free recreational use by the public. One example of such location is the Devil's Den area within the Talladega National Forest for which detailed development plans have been approved by Regional Forester, Joseph C. Kircher, of Atlanta, Georgia. It is located about one mile off the Munford, Cheaha Mountain Road. Construction of a small dam will impound a twenty-five to thirty acre lake. A bath house, picnic shelters, open fireplaces and other improvements to facilitate camping and picnicking will be installed by CCC labor.

Construction of the Skyway Motorway which will eventually traverse the Blue Ridge from a point several miles above Heflin to Hollins, Alabama will be continued. This scenic route should attract motorists from throughout Alabama, and adoining states, when completed.

During the seventh period, which ended on October 1, the five National Forest CCC Camps in Alabama accomplished many worthwhile work projects. A complete field inventory of the timber resources of the Black Warrior National Forest was made, and a plan for the orderly management of the one hundred and fifty thousand acres of forest land on the unit drawn up. Over five hundred forest fires either on or endangering National Forest lands were suppressed. Many miles of forest roads were completed.

Two one hundred-foot fire lookout towers have been erected and the telephone lines necessary to connect them with Ranger's headquarters constructed. All complete projects have contributed much to the value and aided greatly in the proper administration of Alabama's National Forests.

MANY PILGRIMS TO GO TO SAM DALE'S GRAVE OCT. 20

A pilgrimage to the lonely grave of Sam Dale, the father of Alabama, who is buried in a pine thicket at Daleville, near Meridian Miss., is being planned for next September. The exact date has not been set but will be October 20 when the Dale pilgrimage committee meets in Pensacola, Fla., for their first meeting.

Dale was a famous pioneer and trail blazer who spent the major part of his life in Alabama. He was at the Holy Ground with Jackson, Coffee, George Walton, Jr., Davy Crockett and Sam Houston. Dale is credited with removing the poisoned arrow from the leg of Sam Houston and sucking the poison from wound at the risk of his own life.

The Dale pilgrimage for Alabama committee consists of T. H. Shropshire, editor Coose River News, Center; Prof. Hugh Cardon, a former associate professor of history at the University of Alabama, and Mrs. M. S. Lovell, 2207 Ridge Park Ave., Birmingham; Mrs. Lovell has just completed a life of Sam Dale.

Col. Jim Walton, Europa, is secretary of the organization, and says that he has arranged with chief Cameron for 1,500 Chocta

Failure

Towards the end of last semester an English professor decided to spring a character quiz on his Chaucer class. Among the questions was one asking, "Who laughed and sang all day?"

After much squirming and struggling one student wrote, "The second little pig," and handed in his paper.

It came back a week later marked as follows:

"Triple credit will be taken off because the answer is wrong, your attitude is too flippant, and besides, it was the first little pig!"

How It Worked Out

"I sent Josh to college," said Farmer Corntossel, "so that he'd have the advantage of a better education than I had."

"How did it work out?"

"Josh overdoes his gratitude. He's all the time showin' off his intellectual superiority so as to make me feel that I got my money's worth."

High Score Doctors to Contrary, Sound Football Holds Mob

THE generation-old conflict of football doctors — those whose hopefuls fill the air with passes every Saturday afternoon and those who depend on old-time principles to gain yardage—is in full cry again. In general, the theory of the high-score doctors is simple. You pass and pray and then pass again. The only trouble is that there's a lack of sustenance in this field of endeavor when it is stacked up against fundamental practice.

By this I mean there is little attention paid to the Walter Camp commandment about the necessity of the pass-tossing gents remembering that they also dwell in goal-line bounded domiciles.

That the customers themselves are not committed to aerial combat is indicated by the fact that the whole Eastern and Mid-Western concept is in the other direction—and it is here that the best congregations are drawn by interpreters of the old-time tenets.

Let us examine the point for a moment. Recently while Yale's regular punters were averaging 40 yards and the gifted Larry Kelley was getting better than half that distance with one unintentional flick of his tootsie, 43,000 were watching the Elis perform against Navy in Baltimore. At the same time 60,000 were seeing Penn and Princeton in Philadelphia, Pitt and Duquesne were entertaining 20,000 of the home folks, Army was slapping over Harvard before 25,000 customers and 40,000 were gloating about Northwestern's triumph over Ohio State.

Crowd Pleasers Play Game of 20 Years Ago

I mention these games merely at random, but they serve the purpose very well. Except from the die-hards and the rain haters there was very little complaint about the essential goodness of the afternoon's celebrations. Yet—aside possibly from Ohio State which now and then goes chasing false idols to the eternal and well-expressed sorrow of the town's taxi drivers and cigar clerks—all these teams play a game which is not vastly different from that of ten, or even twenty, years ago.

Yale's attack is as much a combination of outwardly, although not bascially, different schools as is its coaching staff. Princeton adheres to the single wing, short punt style brought from its full Mid-Western flowering by Fritz Crisler and now widely used by the Meehans, Snavelys and other celebrated professors of this section.

Chick Meehan

So it is with the others. Army would rather come on the field without its mule than without that cutback, which was achieving touchdowns when Charley Daley was a Plebe. Except for the refinements there is no essential difference between the efforts Harlow now makes at Harvard and the football he taught at Colgate 15 years back. In essence Lynn Waldorf's Northwestern triumphs are gained by the football he learned from Chick Meehan at Syarucse.

Pitt ranks close to the top year after year because Jock Sutherland believes in the perfection of a few plays and a team rather than in razzle dazzle. It was the return of a punt—a performance which was just as popular and as efficacious when the two last met in Philadelphia in 1893—that enabled Penn to beat Princeton.

Navy uses Notre Dame trappings—as indeed do most other teams, since this so-called system was old long before Rockne ever heard of South Bend.

Tulane came from the South—a section which for some reason is often written about as going in for hipper dipper stuff although the Alabamas, Mississippi States and Georgias almost consistently adhere to the orthodox when winning—and ruined Colgate. The job was done with a very fine line.

Colgate — popularly reported as the leading exponent of three-card monte football although the truth is Andy Kerr dons his Wizard of Chenango robes only when the necessity of adapting his material to the situation leaves him no other choice—just could not keep up. It—but this started to be an examination of the changes heralded as coming over football.

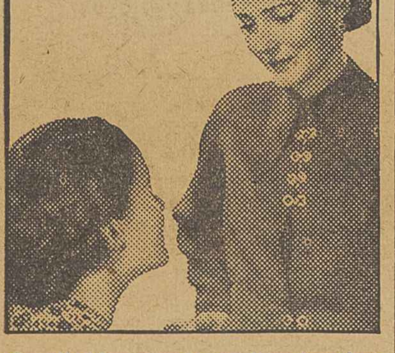
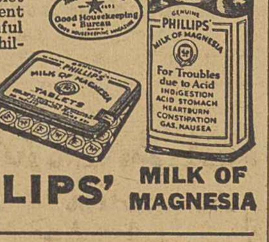
Canada's Indians Gain

There is no foundation for the common belief that the Indians of Canada are a vanishing race. The census, which is taken at five-year intervals, has shown a substantial increase in each of such periods during the last fifteen years at least. According to the last census there were in Canada 122,911 Indians—62,943 males and 59,908 females. About 112,500 live on the reservations.





Here's that Fast "Phillips" Way

To Alkalize Stomach Quickly

On all sides, people are learning that the way to gain almost incredibly quick relief, from stomach condition arising from overacidity, is to alkalize the stomach quickly with Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

You take either two teaspoons of the liquid Phillips' after meals; or two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Almost instantly "acid indigestion" goes, gas from hyperacidity, "acid - headaches" — from over-indulgence in food or smoking — and nausea are relieved.

Try this Phillips' way if you have any acid stomach upsets. You will be surprised at results. Get either the liquid "Phillips" or the remarkable, new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Only 25¢ for a big box of tablets at drug stores.

Less Monthly Discomfort

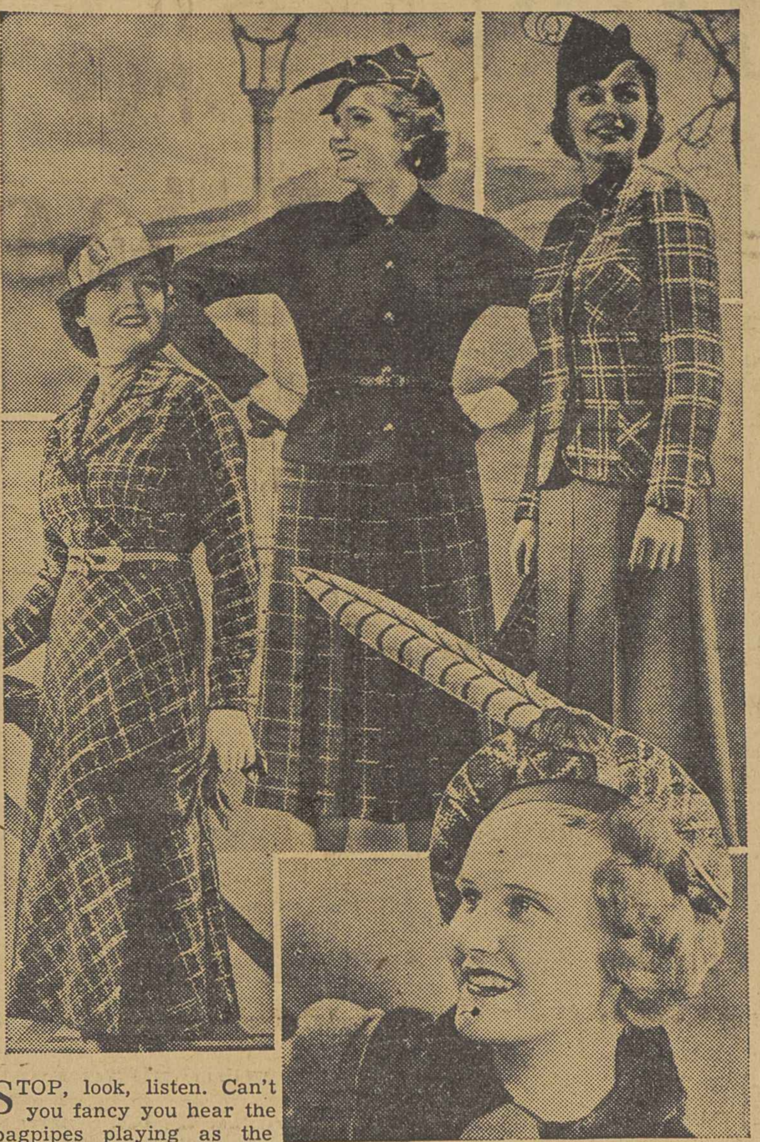
Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardui, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

It's Big Season for Gay Wool Plaids

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



STOP, look, listen. Can't you fancy you hear the bagpipes playing as the great autumn and winter style parade wends its spectacular way, for it's gayest o' gay Scotch plaidies the lassies o' fashion ha' taken to wearin' these crisp cool days.

A wild orgy of plaids it is indeed into which fashion is plunging us and, what's more, we are growing very clannish about it. An astonishing lovely array of beautiful designs and colorings in plaids is the proud record of fabric designers this season, keyed to exacting and versatile fashion demands. Many are of authentic clan origin, featuring rich, deep colors and historic patterns. So wide is the range of weaves, textures and patterings, it's almost a certainty you can get any type of plaid you set out to get.

And so it's plaids that are being used for jackets, for skirts, dresses, suits (nothing smarter than a pertly tailored jacket suit of plaid), for ensembles, for blouses and waistcoats, accessories, including hats, bags, scarfs, belts and gloves. Nor must linings and trimming accents be forgotten in the list. Even mackinaws, traditionally fashioned in plaids, have again stepped into the spotlight of fashion for active and spectator sports. These are presented in soft thick fleecy woolens and in striking color combinations and designs. Wool plaid blouses and shirts for wear with ski clothes and monotone tweed suits are also of outstanding importance.

In addition to the regulation plaids there is a wide variety of modern interpretations in both woven and knitted fabrics from sheer six ounce shirting type to the heavy fleeces for topcoats in subdued tones, monotones and multicolor overplaids. Also hairy and nubbed surface plaids are shown in flannels, hard worsted types, soft rabbit novelties, smooth surface fabrics and the soft thick coating fabrics.

The fall and winter season lends itself admirably to plaids which are particularly smart in the new boxy jackets and coats, also in tunic dresses in which the plaid tunic highlights the voguish flared monotone skirts. They also style perfectly in casual coats for sports and travel and for street coat-dresses and in dashing cape modes. In fact for back-to-school fashions, for snow suits, for everything from children's wear to cocktail ensembles, wool plaids are style leaders.

See the fashions pictured. They are an index to the handsome plaid apparel being turned out by enthusiastic designers. The smiling lassie centered in the group wears Scotch wool plaid culottes in rich dark tones of blue and gray accented by white with a navy wool fitted jacket and dashing little plaid cap with quill—a fashion—first for fall.

The new plaid hats now shown are the pride of the milliners creating them. Quite the rage are "Scotty" caps and tams. See the tam-o-shanter pictured in the inset. It is made of multi-colored plaid woolen. A long pheasant feather is stuck through at a rakish angle.

The beautifully tailored sports jacket to the right is styled in colorful wool plaid and milady carries a bag of the same plaid. The collarless neckline is very chic. The edges of the jacket are bound with self plaid, which together with large patch pockets and bone buttons gives this mode high "tone."

LEI OF GARDENIAS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Now that the pretty custom of wearing flowers, or trimming with flowers, has been revived in fashion's realm, it is interesting to note the novel interpretations designers are giving to this theme. Pictured is a lei of white gardenias clipped around the neck of a black satin evening ensemble. The flowers may be clipped to the shoulders of the dress when the cape is removed. Huge roses used in the same manner on a raisin colored velvet wrap would be equally as effective. Roses, by the way, are smartly in vogue, so reports from Paris tell us and will be greatly in evidence this winter as costume decoration.

VELVET SUITS FOR DAY WEAR POPULAR

Those new velvet daytime suits may not appeal to the business girl but they have a lot to offer to the social butterfly.

No more elegant fashions have appeared in our time than those handsome velvet ensembles. The smartest ones are black, unrelieved by color except for the flash of a blouse, but there are rich tones such as dark green, wine and plum to consider if you don't like black. Furs match the tone of the costume and usually are of the long-haired variety to frame the face and flatter a figure.

The suit which has a tunic length coat is one of the most dignified of the velvet types on exhibition. It has the fitted waistline that is unbelted.

"Fifty-Fifty" Costumes to Lead Winter Collections

"Fifty-fifty" costumes play an important part in the fall and winter dress collections. These are dresses, suits or coats with the back and front made of two contrasting colors. Black is frequently combined with bottle green or a brilliant, deep purple to make these queer costumes. The same two-color tones are usually carried out in the hat and gloves that accompany the costume. In the gloves, the two colors are combined in a zigzag seam which runs down the palm and the back of the hand.

For Daytime Wear

EMBLEMS

IF YOU live in a state where they still allow party emblems on the ballot, take a look at them as you mark yours. That eagle soaring above the clouds at the top of the Republican column should remind you of Gen. John C. Fremont, who was the first Republican candidate for President back in 1856. It may be reminiscent of the eagles which he saw when he was "The Pathfinder" in the West or it may mean that the Republicans have been in power so long during the last 80 years that they figure they have a better right than any other party to claim the national bird.

That lordly crowing rooster at the head of the Democratic column should remind you of Joseph Chapman of Indiana whose habit of crowing over Democratic victories a century ago resulted in this symbol for his party.

That rising sun, with its beams glinting over an ocean, as though foretelling the day when there will be "Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink" tells you that below it are the names of the candidates on the Prohibition ticket. Those hands clasped against a background of the earth tell of the Socialists' dream of greater equality for mankind all over the earth. That stout bare arm with the hammer in hand speaks for the Labor party and that sickle and hammer remind you that the Communists would have us follow the example of Soviet Russia.

There was once a time when a Bull Moose snorted defiance at the top of one column on the ballot. That was when Theodore Roosevelt was seeking a third term under the Progressive banner but since 1912 the Bull Moose has been an extinct political animal.

The reason for these emblems on the ballot is a practical one, besides their symbolical significance. In the early days they were placed there to aid voters who had left their spectacles at home and who didn't want to vote for the wrong candidates by mistake. When the tides of immigration began pouring into the country millions of foreigners who were illiterate, even after naturalization, these emblems were helpful to them in their voting. As new parties arose the use of these symbols helped avoid confusion and even though many efforts have been made to do away with them, they are still in widespread use.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

IF EVER there was a case of "history repeats itself" in American politics it was illustrated in the careers of Henry Clay and James G. Blaine. Separated by half a century, those careers were almost exact duplicates of near achievement and ultimate disaster. There were other resemblances also.

Both men were magnetic in personality, eloquent in speech and idolized by their followers. Both were master politicians and dominated the councils of their parties but both fell victims to a political enemy whose fateful vengeance followed them all through their days of striving for the presidency. Andrew Jackson was Clay's Nemesis; Roscoe Conkling was Blaine's.

Early in his career Blaine recognized his similarity to Clay. When Grover Cleveland, then comparatively unknown, was nominated by the Democrats in 1884, Blaine had a premonition of defeat. "I am the Henry Clay of the Republican party," he declared to a friend. "Clay was defeated in two conventions when he could have been elected, and he was nominated for President when his competitor was elected. That competitor (Polk) was one who had not been publicly discussed as a presidential candidate before the meeting of the Baltimore convention in 1844. I was defeated in two conventions when I could have been elected. I am nominated now with a competitor alike obscure with the competitor of Clay."

Then he shook his head and murmured sadly, "1844—1884!"

His premonition of defeat was a true one. Cleveland, the unknown, beat him in 1884 just as Polk, the unknown, beat Clay in 1844.

So among all the "also-rans" of American political history Henry Clay of Kentucky and James G. Blaine of Maine come down to us as the "really epic figures that stand out as tragic personifications of forlorn hopes."

Use for Long Fingernails

Scores of Chinese at Soochow, China, make a living by growing eight-inch finger nails for a patent medicine manufacturer. The nails are ground into a powder which is the base of a medicine for sore throat. A Soochow fingernail grower is paid enough to enable him to remain absolutely idle, as the nails must be perfect, and have no cracks or other blemishes. The medicine is prepared as a tiny black pill no larger than a pinhead, invented many years ago by a Soochow physician.

Uncle Phil Says:

Reminiscence

The scenery one remembers most fondly will be what he saw while sitting serenely in contemplative meditation.

Culture also consists in knowing what not to cultivate.

Good society wants good morals, and whenever they can't be, wants them kept out of sight.

Greatest triumph is to fish your friend out of the blues and make him laugh again.

Virtue and Vice

If science knew how to produce a genius, it would produce too many.

Probably your wants are as twenty to one to your needs.

But They're Not Assets

A man of bitter and glittering words may not have many friends but he has hosts of envious admirers.

Besides backbone, another thing equally lacking, altogether too generally, is self-respect.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Harvey S. Firestone PUTS THE FARM ON RUBBER . . .

Farm-Proved FOR EFFICIENCY and ECONOMY

EVERY car owner who does much driving over unimproved roads and who has to use chains, can save the cost and bother of applying them by equipping the rear wheels of his car or truck with Firestone Ground Grip Tires. This wonderful new tire was designed and developed by Harvey S. Firestone working with his engineers on his own farm in Columbiana County, Ohio. It was tested on all kinds of roads and found so efficient that it was also adopted for tractors and all wheeled farm implements.

The rubber lugs of the tread are so placed that they clean as they pull, and since the design is continuous, the tire does not bump when used on paved roads. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords are placed under the tread — a patented Firestone construction feature which welds the powerful super-traction tread to the patented Gum-Dipped cord body, making them one inseparable unit. Gum-Dipping is used only in Firestone tires.

Farmers, country doctors, school bus operators, rural mail carriers, in fact, all who do most of their driving off the paved roads cannot afford to be without Ground Grip Tires. Go to your nearest Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today and equip your car or truck with Firestone Ground Grip Tires — the tire that makes its own road.

ADDING EQUIPMENT FOR MORE AND BETTER SERVICE

Southern Bell spent twelve million, three hundred and sixty-seven thousand dollars during 1935 for improvements and replacements in telephone "plant" in order to meet the public's service needs in nine Southern states.

This money was required for such items as land and buildings, switchboard and other equipment, subscriber telephone equipment, local and long distance lines. The estimate for 1936 is that sixteen million dollars will be needed.

The increased demand for service in 1935 resulted in a net gain of 55,950 telephones. Local calls increased 8.6 per cent over the previous year, and toll and long distance messages gained 9.6 per cent.

Better business was reflected also by the addition of twelve hundred employes, bringing this total to seventeen thousand by the end of the year. The payroll was nineteen million dollars.

Taxes, too, increased to the highest sum in the company's history, when six million, five hundred and five thousand dollars was paid to federal, state, county and municipal agencies. This was an average of 60.9 cents per telephone per month, or $7.31 per telephone for the year.

Calls were handled efficiently—service criticisms decreased 35 per cent, although 8.39 originating calls per telephone per day were averaged, the highest calling rate in more than ten years.

Such facts as these show how well telephone folks are accomplishing their determination to give the most service and the best, at the least possible cost.

Special Session of Legislature To Meet Next Monday

Montgomery, Ala.—The long anticipated special session of the Legislature will convene next Monday. November 23, to tackle the problem of raising sufficient revenue to provide a minimum school term of seven months for the State's 650,000 common school children and make adequate provision for the provision for the departments of public health and welfare.

Before leaving the capitol to attend the Auburn-L. S. U. football game in Birmingham Saturday, the Governor wrote the following letter to all members of the legislature:

"For your information let me say that I shall issue a call for a special session of the Legislature to convene in the capitol in Montgomery, at noon on Monday, the 23rd inst.

"I am giving you this information in advance of the official call in order that you may have time to arrange your affairs for that Special Session and also in order that you may begin the advertising of any local bills that you would like to introduce.

Respectfully,
BIBB GRAVES,
Governor.

Declining to reveal the contents of his formal "call" to be issued this week, the Governor said he would continue a series of conferences with members of the Legislature.

"I will be available to any and all members of the Legislature that wish to see me," he added, "and I am asking some of them to confer with me during the forthcoming week."

The Governor held two conferences last week—the first with 12 members of the so-called "economy bloc" Wednesday, November 11, and the second with administration loyalists the following day.

Earlier in the week, Governor Graves assured a group of prohibition leaders that he will stand by the principles of his campaign platform with regard to modification or repeal of the State's 20-year-old dry laws. This was interpreted as meaning he would oppose any plan to change the prohibition laws unless approved by the people at the polls in a referendum.

Alabama's Highway Department would be destroyed and the State's 250,000 motorists would bump over disintegrated roads and through mud bogs if the Legislature should seriously consider the recommendations of some of the so-called "economy bloc" lawmakers who conferred with Governor Graves last week, according to a statement released today by S. E. Mary, president of the Alabama Automotive Trades Association.

"Acknowledging the acute need f additional funds to maintain a minimum school term of seven months, some of the lawmakers proposed to divert gasoline tax receipts to the schools," Mr. May pointed out.

"Also, they would repeal the present $500,000 appropriation from the general fund to the Convict Department and, in effect, require the Highway Department to support general governmental functions out of gas tax collections which would simply mean taxing the motorist on the basis of the number of miles he rides.

"This money-juggling scheme was shrewdly conceived and designed to circumvent the constitutional amendment of 1927 which states in unequivocal language that gasoline taxes may not be used for any purpose except the construction of roads and bridges and the payment of interest and principal on bonded debts incurred in building roads and bridges," the statement continued.

"In plain words, the "economy leaders" advocate the use of funds collected from the motoring public for other than highway purposes by padding the payrolls of convict labor. It is a dangerous, unscrupulous and wholly vicious practice and might easily result in wholesale scandals in the State Government if administered by dishonest officials. No intellegent and respectable public official would countenance such methods; certainly it should not have been suggested by the lawmakers."

Investigation reveals that if the amount required to pay the interest and principal charges on road bonds and administration and mainenance, is diverted to the schools, all new road building will cease and the State will lose $5,200,000 in federal funds now available for matching

"The small amount now available for matching some of this huge appropriation fund is what the "economy boys' ambiguously described as the surplus gasoline tax receipts," the statement added. "Only by constitutional amendment can it be diverted, and I respectfully call your attention to the amendment adopted by the voters of Alabama on April 1, 1927:

"To create a sinking fund for the prompt and faithful payment of the principal and the interest on these bonds and for the construction, maintenance and improvement of such public highways, roads and bridges, the Legislature shall levy an excise tax in addition to the levy made on Feb. 10, 1923, upon gasoline or any substitute therefor.'"

"As previously mentioned, the tax fund diversion would cause the State to lose all present and future Federal aid allocations of which $5,200.000 is now available.

"Several States have recently adopted constitutional amendments prohibiting tax receipts derived from the sale of gasoline and motor vehicle license to be used for any purpose other than road building and maintenance. The national government in section 12 of the Hayden-Cartwright Act passed by Congress and approved on June 18, 1934, made the following pronouncement:

"Since it is unfair and unjust to tax motor vehicle transportation, unless the proceeds of such taxation are applied to the construction, improvement, or maintenance of highways, after June 30, 1935, federal aid for highway construction shall be extended only to those States that use at least the amounts provided by law for such purposes in each state from motor vehicle registration and other special taxes on motor vehicle owners and operators of all kinds of construction, improvement and maintenance of highways, administrative expenses in connection therewith, including the retirement of bonds for the payment of which such revenues have been pledged, and for no other purposes, under such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall promulgate from time to time," the statement concluded.

One recommendation of the economy group called for diversion of the State's share of the gas tax from road building to the institutions of higher learning, and diversion of the counties' share to the local common schools.

Charles I. Ingalls, of Montgomery, vice president and chairman of the legislative committee of the Automotive Trade Association, said his organization would vigorously oppose any effort to divert gasoline taxes to governmental activities other than road building.

Country Doctor's 3000 Grown-up 'Babies' Meet In New Screen Drama

Surprise follows dramatic surprise, romantic secrets are revealed and tangled lives set straight when the Country Doctor's 3,000 grown-up "babies" come back to share their joys and tears with the man who brought them into the world in "Reunion," twentieth century Fox's triumph, coming Sunday and Monday to the Strand Theatre.

The picture which stars the world famous Dionne Quintuplets and features Jean Herscholt, Rochelle Hudson, Helen Vinson, Slim Summerville, Robert Kent, John Qualen, Dorothy Peterson and many other players, boasts the year's most important cast in the season's most unusual drama.

The Quins' Dr. Luke, played by Jean Herscholt, on the verge of retirement from the burdens he has carried for a generation, decides to call back from all over the globe the three thousand men and women whom he assisted into the world. From all over the country and from many foreign countries they come, the rich and the poor, the high-placed and the lowly, to take part in the reunion.

Also joining the party is attractive young Dr. Luke, the doctor's nephew, whom he has called back to the little Canadian town from his post in Toronto to carry on with his (Dr. Luke's) duties. Tony, although deeply in love with Mary, Dr. Luke's nurse is followed by the wife of his superior in the Toronto Hospital, who refuses to release him to a younger and fresher love.

In a climatic scene that combines all the elements of potent drama with pathos and uproarious humor, Dr. Luke, Tony, Mary, Mrs. Sheridan, and the doctor's 3,000 grown-up "babies"—including the governor of a state, a fading stage star, a crook just out of jail, and many other unforgettable characters—convene for the reunion. Also present at the gathering, for added chuckles and heart tugs, are the celebrated Quintuplets.

You'll grin and gulp by turns as the old doctor' under cover of a pompous speech by a government dignitary, straightens out the problems of Tony, Mrs. Sheridan and the Jealous-torn Mary, of the governor and his acknowledged little waif of a son, of the actress and her girlhood flame.

Lewis-Starling Wedding Is Solemnized

Of cordial interest to their many friends over the state was the marriage of Miss Mary Nell Lewis, of Montevallo, to Mr. James Holt Starling, of Troy, which was solemnized last Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lewis. The marriage vows were read by the Rev. F. B. Pearson, pastor of the Montevallo Baptist Church, in the presence of the immediate family and a few close friends.

The bride was lovely in her wedding suit of dubonnett ottoman crepe. She wore a hat of grey velour with dubonnett feathers and veil and her accessories were grey. A shoulder corsage of sweetheart roses, tuberoses and valley lilies added an effective note to the costume.

Mrs. Starling, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ramsey Lewis, of Montevallo, received her education in the schools of Montevallo at Alabama College. She later attended a business college in Birmingham, and at present is head of the Commercial Department of Sylacauga High School. Mr. Starling, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Starling, of Troy, is one of the most promising young men of that section. He received his education in the schools of Troy and the University. He was a popular member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. He is at present head of the Science Department of the High School of Troy, where the young couple will make their home.

Montevallo Girl Will Be Princess

Miss Gene Lewis, sophmore at Alabama College, and local girl, has been selected by a committee appointed by the Birmingham Junior Chamber of Commerce, as official princess to represent Montevallo in the Christmas Carnival celebration in Birmingham, November 26, 27, and 28. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lewis.

Circle 2 of the Methodist Missionary Society met Monday afternoon for their regular program meeting at the home of Mrs. J. A. Brown, with Mrs. Pat McConoughy as co-hostess. Mrs. Charles Mahaffey, Sr., Leader, presided over the interesting meeting. Those who took part in the program were Mesdames W. C. Weems, Marie Jones, O. B. Cooper, J. A. Hodges, Howard Latham, and J. Alex Moore.

President, Mrs. S. B. Brown.

Secretary, Mrs. Marie Weems Jones.

Treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Hodges.

After all the business was attended to, delightful refreshments were served to the following:

Mesdames John May, Walter Weems, Marie Jones, J. Alex Moore, Ed Mulkey, J. A. Hodges, O. B. Cooper, Lena Duran, Howard Latham, Jim Reynolds, S. B. Brown Charles Mahaffey, Pat McConoughy and J. A. Brown.

Engineer Wallace On Fairfield P. O.

Mr. Ricardo F. Wallace, construction engineer of the U. S. Treasury Department on the Montevallo Postoffice, has been assigned to the Fairfield Postoffice job, which was begun the past week. Mr. Wallace will supervise both jobs during their progress to completion.

When asked about the comparison of Fairfield's building with Montevallo's, Mr. Wallace stated that Montevallo's is the better of the two by about $5,000 in cost of construction.

Incidentally, it is observed that the outside construction, or "rough work" of the Montevallo postoffice appears to be about completed. Plastering the inside walls is in progress now, and soon the work of interior finish will be under way. The grounds around the building are being cleared of the "leavings" incident to construction work. The scrap lumber is advertised for sale as fire wood.

A great expanse of concrete surface has been made on the side of the new building next to McConoughy apartments. This is the place where the loading platform will serve the convenience of all incoming and outgoing mail.

The Health Of Our Youth And The Christmas Seal

The jolly face of Santa Claus on the Christmas seal this year reminds us that Christmas belongs to children. But to those familiar with the history of this little penny sticker, there is an even more poignant reminder of the intimate connection between the health of children and the very idea of having Christmas seals at all.

It is thirty years ago since the Christmas seal was introduced into the United States by Miss Emily P. Bissel, of Delaware, who began the sale of seals to raise money to care for the children in that state who had tuberculosis. She had established a little shack to care for these children, but money was sorely needed to keep it going. When she heard that in Denmark they raised money for the same purpose by selling penny Christmas stamps, she siezed the idea andput it into operation in Delaware. Later it became nation-wide in scope and children in every state have benefitted thereby.

Close on the heels of the launching of the tuberculsis campaign in this country came the establishment of open air schools for the care of delicate children, many of whom were known to have been exposed to tuberculosis. Other children who appeared anemic-run down, and in those days, what was believed to be a pre-tuberculous condition, were also sent to the schools. The use of height-weight tables to determine the health status of children was very popular, and children 10 per cent or more under weight according to the table was automatically dubbed pre-tuberculous and listed as candidates for the open air schools. It was in 1908 that the first school of this type was opened in Providence, Rhode Island, and it was not long before others were scattered all over the country.

In the meantime, research and experimentation in the field of tuberculosis were constantly going on. Because it was known that tuberculosis is a communicable disease that every case comes from another, efforts of research workers were bent on discovering some accurate diagnogistic test which would uncover the early case. Tuberculosis is an insidious enemy, and a routine physical examination rarely discovers the disease in its early stages. Children apparently healthy—not only up-to-weight, but even overweight, were found to be infected with tuberculosis to greater or less degree, though there were no physical signs to give the slightest indication of this. As a result reliance on weight tables as a guide in discovering children in need of protective care were abandoned, at least by those who keep in step with the ever growing knowledge in the field of health.

In the past five years the use of the tuberculin test has spread widely over the country and is one of the major activities of the voluntary tuberculosis associations working with the health authorities and with organized medicine in an intensive effort to find the early cases.

The need of open air schools and classes has been steadily decreasing as our facilities for discovering the early cases of tuberculosis have been increasing. However, their contribution to our better understanding of the hazards of childhood and the need of all growing children for protective care is very great. We are beginning to realize that the school regime must be adapted to the health requirements of the individual child, instead of the other way round. How foolish to wait until a child becomes debilitated, before providing for his health needs! Prevention is better than cure, and surely wants no defense!

And so it is that the health problems of delicate children have brought about better health provision for all children, and the little penny Christmas seal, through all the thirty years of its existence, has served to protect and to maintain health in the United States.

The Christmas Seal sale in Shelby County will be conducted from Thanksgiving until Christmas. The program is in charge of a committee of the American Legion Auxiliary, of which Mrs. J. L. Appleton is treasurer.

State Labor Board Speaker Heard

AT MEETING OF BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB MANDAY NIGHT

On Monday evening, the citizens of Montevallo and the students of Alabama College were privileged to hear a very able address and later a discussion of some aspects of labor in the State of Alabama. Miss Mollie Dowd, Conciliator of the State Labor Board, spoke in a direct and clear manner about some of the many critical situations that arise in industry, generally, and about some of the specific problems of industry in our state. She presented to her audience some of the problems of the employer as well as the employee. She inlicatel the frequency of a basic cause on the part of the employee as being felt but not understood.

Miss Dowd developed her address by citing cases of labor disputes in the state, the point of view of the employer and the point of view of the employee, and the approach and techniques used by the conciliator in making adjustments necessary to a functioning industry.

During the talk, Miss Dowd wove into the stories of specific cases the history of the development of our present State Labor Board. She told of the recent legislation that provided for our State Labor Board as it is now, and something of the personnel. She indicated also the pressing needs of both employers and employees in certain situations at the present time.

The Business and Professional Women are to be commended on their keen public spirit, which is responsible for the meeting on Monday night. The community needs more of this kind of discussion. The College faculty and student body have similar needs. Mrs. Charlotte Peterson, who had charge of the meeting, has earned the approval of those who attended the meeting, for her presistent and successful effort to get the message of Miss Dowd to us. The meeting was sponsored by the Business and Professional Women.

New Peak Reached In State Vote

F. D. R. BALLOTS SURPASS 1932 TOTAL WITH 237,000 VOTES AS OTHERS FAR BEHIND

Breaking his own high mark of 1932, President Roosevelt polled 237,200 votes in the Alabama general election, official figures released by the state canvassing board showed Saturday. He drew 207,832 votes four years ago.

Gaining over Herbert Hoover by 684 votes in 1932, Governor Landon received 35,359 votes this year; Colvin 719; Browder 679; Lemke, 549, and Thomas 242. Five proposed amendments to the State Constitution were voted down by decisive margins.

The highest general election vote in the history of the State was cast this year, a total of 274,748 being recorded in the official count.

FINAL COUNT WAITED

A complete check on national and state races in the election has not been made but there was little doubt of Democratic victories in all races. The canvassing board will resume checking of these counts either Saturday or Monday.

Majorities of from 11,000 to 30,000 were piled up against the five proposed amendments to the constitution. The official count Saturday stood: No. 1, authorizing the consolidation of county offices and revision in tax assessment and collection in Jefferson County 69,055 to 99,080; No. 2 authorizing the city of Montevallo to increase its tax rate to finance past and future bond issues, 64,791 to 82,317; No. 3, authorizing trial judges to suspend sentence in cases involving not more than 5 years, 68,711 to 93,009; No. 4 fixing the salary of the Probate Judge of Limestone County at $6,000, and of the tax assessor and tax collector at $3,000 each, the amounts covering clerk hire, 65,329 to 80,467; No. 5 authorizing the following cities to levy a district school tax if the citizens desire, Andalusia, Attalla, Demopolis, Eufaula, Talladega, Munford, Lincoln, Winterboro, Laniers, Enterprise, Opp, Sylacauga, Clanton, Midland City, Montevallo and Hartselle, 61,435 to 72,403.

CHEVROLET "THEATRE" ON WHEELS HERE FRI. NIGHT

Mr. C. E. Tatum, of the local Chevrolet agency, announces this week the coming of the most unusual attraction ever seen on the streets of Montevallo—the Chevrolet "automotive," a complete theatre on wheels.

This unique theatre will present an outdoor show of interesting and exciting talking motion pictures. The automotivegenerates its own power and has complete equipment for putting on a high-grade show.

The show will be held in front of Tatum Chevrolet Company on Friday evening of this week, beginning at seven o'clock. Everybody is invited to be the guest of Mr. Tatum and Chevrolet at this performance.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

During the eleven o'clock worship service on Sunday morning, Mr. Cox will preach, using for his sermon theme, "On Being Pessimistic." This sermon was prepared especially for the college students and young people, though older folks will be equally interested. Special vocal and instrumental selections will be rendered.

Thet Church School and Christian Endeavor Society will meet at their usual time and place, 9:45 a.m. and 6:45 p.m., respectively. Announcements will be made at the meeting of the society concerning the Thanksgiving party.

Everyone is cordially invited and urged to attend and worship with us. In God's House and in the Spirit of the Master there are no barriers between members of thehuman family. "Come! Let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker!"

ALABAMA COLLEGE HOME ECONOMICS CLUB CHRISTMAS BAZAR

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Secretary Roper Plans National Census of Unemployed —Armistice Day Duly Observed—Opening of the Huge San Francisco-Oakland Bridge.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

NOW that the election is over, Secretary of Commerce Roper is laying plans for the complete census of the unemployed in the United States which has so long been called for. He said he would ask congress to appropriate between 13 and 15 million dollars for this count and that it would require the services of about 25,000 persons who would be given special training for several months.

Sec. Roper

"The census would not only take up an enumeration of those classified as unemployed," said Roper, "but we want to find out which trades or industries the unemployed would fall into. We would also like to help the states in classifying the unemployed from the unemployable.

"There are many economic questions involved. Some families have enough income to support them, but one or more members may be out of work. We want to obtain information on this phase."

The secretary intimated that the census machinery might be made permanent so that a close check be kept on persons out of work, as is done in England.

According to the American Federation of Labor 2,900,000 workers have been re-employed since last January.

"Employment has been gaining steadily since January, without setback," the federation said. "This unusual development points to the strong upward trend of business, which was of such force as to offset the usual summer layoffs.

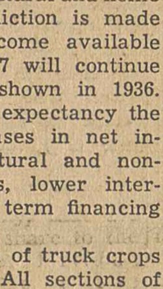
"Comparing September this year with September, 1935, we find 2,250,000 more persons employed in American industry, indicating that while a portion of this year's gains merely restored winter losses, by far the major part represents lasting gain in employment recovery.

"This year's gains (comparing September, 1935 and 1936) have been largest in manufacturing industries where about 675,000 wage and salaried workers were re-employed; about 300,000 more farm laborers are at work, 285,000 more in trade, 200,000 more in building and 100,000 have been added in railroads. Most of the other gains were in service industries."

IN A joint report by the federal bureaus of agricultural and home economics the prediction is made that farm cash income available for spending in 1937 will continue the upward trend shown in 1936. As a basis for this expectancy the bureaus cite increases in net income from agricultural and non-agricultural sources, lower interest rates and long term financing of debts.

Record production of truck crops also was forecast. All sections of the country will share and all important truck crops will be included except celery, onions and spinach, it was stated, with the likelihood that in spite of indicated larger supplies, improvement in consumer buying power would help maintain the higher prices of 1936, which were about 10 per cent over 1935.

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace in an interview intimates that for a year there may be no new legislation for crop control along the lines of the outlawed AAA, for farmers would like to have one really good crop without forced curtailment. But he added: "We will need some legislation eventually unless the weather changes or the world demand for our products greatly improves."



Sec. Wallace

Wallace was asked whether the lack of a control plan might not result in another surplus, leaving the administration up in the air without any machinery to cope with it. He said he could not estimate a surplus ahead of time and that he would rather wait to see what would happen.

"It may be possible to find a solution that will prove better than the AAA or the soil conservation act," he said.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT led the nation in observance of Armistice day by going to Arlington National cemetery and laying a wreath of chrysanthemums beside the tomb of the Unknown Sol- ier. The ceremony was quiet and ple. General Pershing, com- der of the American expedition- rces, and Secretary of the wanson stood by the Presi- e and a small detach- oldiers, sailors and ma- esent. General Pershing also placed a wreath at the tomb, and all stood bare headed as "taps" was sounded precisely at 11 o'clock eighteen years after the guns ceased firing on the western front in France.

Everywhere in the United States and in all the allied countries the anniverasry was suitably observed, and in Poland the day was one of especial rejoicing for it is regarded as the birthday of that re-born nation.

An ironical note came from Geneva where the League of Nations announced that 8,200,000 men are now permanently under arms throughout the world. Of this total 545,000 are attached to world navies.

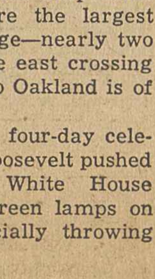
The league calculations show that men under arms throughout the world just before the outbreak of the World war numbered 5,900,000, not counting naval units. The figures released show that since 1931-'32 world armies have increased 1,700,000 men. In Europe total armed forces are now 4,800,000, compared with 3,600,000 in 1931-'32.

SAN FRANCISCO'S dream of 30 years was realized when the great bridge across the bay to Oakland was formally opened with elaborate ceremony. This longest vehicular bridge in the world has been under construction since July 19, 1933, at a cost of $77,000,000, the funds being largely supplied by the Reconstruction Finance corporation. It is eight and a quarter miles long and, except for a tunnel passage through Yerba Buena island, is entirely over water.

It is divided roughly into two parts, mechanically speaking. The west side, from San Francisco to Yerba Buena, is of the suspension type. The cables are the largest ever spun for a bridge—nearly two feet in diameter. The east crossing from Yerba Buena to Oakland is of the cantilever type.

As the climax of a four-day celebration, President Roosevelt pushed a button in his White House office lighting two green lamps on the bridge and officially throwing it open for traffic.

COL. JOSEF BECK, foreign minister of Poland, concluded his visit to London and departed with assurances of Great Britain's friendliness and desire to co-operate with Poland in its contest against Nazi intrigues, especially in relation to the Free City of Danzig. Foreign Minister Eden talked with Colonel Beck for three days and was told by him that Poland would reject the overtures of both Moscow and Berlin and work for the same neutrality in eastern Europe that Belgium intends to maintain in the west.



Col. Beck

One feature of Poland's celebration of its independence day was the bestowal of a baton on Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigley, making him the fourth marshal in the revived nation's history. He thus succeeds the late Marshal Josef Pilsudsky and is regarded by many as the new military dictator of Poland. President Moscicki presented the baton during an imposing ceremony in the courtyard of Warsaw castle.

WHEN Admiral William H. Standley retires on January 1 from the post of chief of naval operations, it will be filled by Admiral William D. Leahy, now commander of the navy battle force. This selection by the President was announced in Washington. Half a dozen other high officers of the navy will be advanced when the change occurs.

It was also announced that Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the marine corps, would be succeeded in that post when he retires from active service December 1 by Brig. Gen. Thomas Holcombe. The latter will be elevated to the rank of major general of marines.

KING Victor of Italy had a birthday, and President Roosevelt, in his cabled message of congratulations, was careful to follow the American policy of not recognizing territory acquired by force, addressing him only as "king" and not as "emperor." However, the Italian conquest of Ethiopia was formally recognized by both Austria and Hungary, following Germany's example.

CORNELL university of Ithaca, N. Y., is to have a new president in the person of Dr. Edmund E. Day, an internationally known social scientist and economist. He will assume office June 30 next on the retirement of Dr. Livingston Farrand. Doctor Day, who is 53 years old, is a graduate of Dartmouth and has taught there and at Harvard and the University of Michigan.

WHILE the Fascist insurgents were smashing their way into Madrid and hurling shells among its chief buildings, the Socialist government of Spain, headed by Premier Fancisco Largo Caballero, fled from the capital and set itself up in Valencia on the Mediterranean coast. The capture of Madrid by the rebels seemed certain and this, it was believed, would be followed by recognition of the Fascist government by several powers, including Portugal and Italy and perhaps Germany. The first nation to accord this recognition was the Central American republic of Salvador.

It is not to be assumed that this would end the civil war, immediately or soon. Caballero, it was reported, believed the loyalists could best continue the struggle from the south, and it was claimed they had strong concentrations at Valencia, Cartegena, Alicante and Albacete. Moreover, there were indications that they would soon receive open aid from Russia and perhaps France. Leon Blum, the French premier, told a Socialist meeting that he was ready to scrap the non-intervention pact and help Caballero if Great Britain would join in such action. This caused consternation among the British statesmen.

Fighting in the suburbs of Madrid was continuous and bloody. The casualties on both sides were heavy, and the Fascist bombardment by artillery and planes killed and wounded hundreds in the center of the city. The Socialist defenders had been ordered to hold their posts regardless of losses, and they fought bravely and stubbornly.

THROUGH the efforts of Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor and the department's chief conciliator, the strike of maritime workers that tied up a large part of the shipping on the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts may be settled amicably. Negotiations between the shipowners and the union leaders were resumed in San Francisco, and in Washington. Secretary Perkins said she was hopeful that a just agreement would be reached.

E. F. McGrady

On the Pacific coast the strikers had already consented to ease the plight of stranded passengers and release perishable cargoes. The joint strike committee recommended that their membership return strike-bound vessels to home ports. This promised relief for 600 stranded passengers and 900 strikers in Honolulu as well as for hundreds of maritime men idle in Atlantic and gulf ports.

MAJOR producers of steel, led by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, largest subsidiary of United States Steel, and the Columbia Steel company, west coast member of the same group, announced wage increases averaging 10 per cent and in some cases running as high as 25 per cent, which will add about $80,000,000 a year to the industry's payroll. In most instances the increases were to take effect November 16. According to compilations of the American Iron and Steel institute they will affect 526,700 employees throughout the country.

Committees acting for employees at more than a dozen plants rejected the offer, demanding higher pay. Negotiations in these cases are therefore continued.

Directors of numerous big corporations authorized special dividends to stockholders and wage bonuses to workers that will release many millions of dollars. This is in pursuance of the policy of avoiding so far as possible the stiff levies imposed on undistributed profits under the revenue act of 1936; and also, in most cases, in recognition of improved business.

SECRETARY of the Navy Claude Swanson, who it is believed may retire from the cabinet, made his annual report to the President showing that the navy had made considerable progress in its program to build up to full treaty strength.

At the end of the 1936 fiscal year last June 30, the secretary said, the navy had under construction 79 vessels. Further, the 1937 appropriations act provided for the building of 18 vessels as replacements for over-age ships and for the beginning of construction in 1937 of two battleships.

The secretary emphasized the need for auxiliary vessels, which service and supply combat vessels, as necessary to the maximum efficiency of the fleet. Present auxiliary vessels are old and unfit and should be replaced with modern craft, he said.

Chief of Staff Malin Craig reported to Secretary of War Woodring that the army in the second year of its five year rebuilding program had gained ground toward its objective—a defense establishment up to the minimum needs of the nation.

"Our military establishment is of a type that—conforming strictly to our national policy—is designed for defense and is unsuitable for aggression," Craig said. "This fact may not be clearly understood by our people. Our establishment is of a character exclusively its own, essentially distinct from the military establishments maintained abroad and now in the course of vast expansion."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington — Probably sufficient time has elapsed since the election to give us something of a perspective, something of an understanding of what happened November 3. In that record-breaking vote for the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt, there lie covered perhaps the greatest number of reasons why votes were cast as they were, ever to influence a national election. The results left the Republicans stunned; they were surprising even to the Democrats and that is no secret.

What Happened?

I have consulted with numerous among the better informed political students and political writers concerning the basis for this deluge of votes that came so nearly making the electoral college unanimous for Mr. Roosevelt that there had been only one time in history when the opposition received fewer votes in the electoral college than Governor Landon will receive. The inquiries have brought almost as many different answers as there were people interviewed. Each one of these persons was thoroughly convinced that his diagnosis was correct and yet after hearing all of them I have a conviction that each one was only partially right. It was, in my opinion, a combination of reasons that brought about such an enormous vote for election of Mr. Roosevelt. The various reasons entering into that combination were influential individually only as regards a comparatively small percentage of the population.

How else can it be explained? Unless separate reasons operated in various sections of the country and, indeed, upon segments of voters in those various sections, no such thing could have happened as the election, for example, of Henry Cabot Lodge, a Republican, to the senate in Massachusetts, while Mr. Roosevelt carried the state overwhelmingly for himself as a Democrat. There were other instances where Republicans won in statewide elections while the state's electoral vote went to the President.

This necessarily shows that even in states that normally vote a straight ticket, either Democratic or Republican, there was some appeal which Mr. Roosevelt had for the voters that was non-existent insofar as the lesser candidates were concerned. In other words, there were split tickets and if this ever proved anything, it surely proved this year that the nation was overwhelmingly in favor of Mr. Roosevelt personally.

I think that, as always, the national ticket carried many men into the house and senate, only it is quite apparent that the percentage of representatives and senators elected this time on the strength of the national ticket was larger than usual. I mean that instead of local personalities carrying the national ticket, the national ticket swept in the local personalities because it is the tendency of a vast majority of voters to vote a straight ticket.

What I have just said seems really to complicate the whole picture. It seems to complicate it for the reason that such a paradox as the election of Mr. Lodge in Massachusetts occurred within this deluge of votes.

But whatever else can be said, nothing can overshadow the consequences of the vast power handed to Mr. Roosevelt. He is in complete control and has a right to feel that anything he does will be accepted by a large majority of the population. With the exception of George Washington, who was elected president by the unanimous vote of the electoral college, and James Monroe, who had all excepting one electoral vote with him, no president of the United States has ever been awarded such a verdict.

So, it strikes me that the outstanding question before the United States today is "how will Mr. Roosevelt use this authority?" It is in his hands to become a man of history, a man who will stand out among all of our Presidents if he uses his power wisely. It is to be suggested in the same breath that if he misuses or abuses that power he can easily become just as infamous.

* * *

Some Reasons

I said above that there were so many reasons influential in bringing about the unusual vote for Mr. Roosevelt that it was almost impossible to enumerate them. Nevertheless, I shall try to set down some of the more important ones that appear to have been operative. It must be remembered that these larger reasons embrace numerous and sundry variations. Each of the important reasons is made up of a number of less important and less significant and even less influential reasons. Each of the larger and each of the smaller propositions had its effect.

I do not want to have it appear that the order in which I name these various reasons has any significance. In fact, I think it would be utterly foolish for anyone to attempt to say that one particular reason was more influential than another. How, for instance, can any one individual know what caused particular voters to vote a particular way without knowing the individual voters concerned? So, I am simply outlining some of the reasons that the political students agree have been important.

That the federal government can or should interfere in the management of basic industries like agriculture, manufacturing, power and possibly in the commercial field of finance.

That the government can or should be centralized to a greater extent in the federal machinery as distinguished from the state machinery. This implies a disappearance to a large extent of the age-old contention for state's rights. It goes even beyond that and into the field of local government which, it must be said, has not been too efficient.

That the people, as citizens of the United States, ought not be hamstrung by rigid constitutional provisions and strict interpretation of them by the United States Supreme court. This may easily be expanded into other propositions such as modification or revision of court powers; mandatory retirement of judges when they reach a given age, or constitutional amendments giving the federal government more direct contact with individual citizens and individual businesses.

* * *

Leaders Outmoded

That the great business leaders of the last score of years are outmoded and that the time has come for a fresh start in business leadership just as the advent of the New Deal accomplished a fresh start in the political leadership. In this thought is hidden various and sundry possibilities. There are those, for example, who have become permeated with a hatred of big business. Likewise, there are those who feel that only portions of big business have been unfair and have crushed the little fellow. Aside from these two is a third group that surely feels the necessity for strict federal control of all types of business, good as well as bad, in order to prevent private initiative from getting out of bounds.

That many of our citizens are willing for the federal government to participate in business by direct competition with private initiative. This thought, expanded, naturally takes on the aspect of a broader movement for public ownership of various businesses than has been evident heretofore.

It is axiomatic that reasons effective with one person are not effective with another and reasons that operate to control the views of a county or a section of a state or even a region of states undoubtedly have had nothing at all to do with votes taken in other parts of our nation.

There are unsettled conditions. There are ten or eleven million people who are out of jobs. Some of these felt that they had been benefited by one Roosevelt policy; some felt they had been benefited by another. However one may examine the picture, it seems to me inescapable that it was a combination of reasons and not any single proposition. It may be added, as some honestly feel, that the Roosevelt political machine was able to encompass all of these factors and to show in the various sections of the country how effective particular policies had been in those particular sections. That to my mind is going beyond the scope of intelligence because strong as the Roosevelt political machine is, it had to have and had to hold the faith of an extraordinarily large number of voters in addition to those controlled by the machine in order to roll up a majority of nine million votes over the total received by Governor Landon.

* * *

What Will He Do?

So, again we get back to the question: what will Mr. Roosevelt do with this new mandate, this fresh delegation of power that has been given to him?

Already there are signs developing among the old line, conservative Democrats of a desire to persuade him to be less radical than he was in his first four years as President. These Democrats feel that this country needs a little less of reform and considerably more of sound governmental management. How much effect they will have on general administration policies obviously is problematical. It is problematical because included among the new senators and representatives, especially among the representatives, are many men who do not impress me as having the slightest understanding of governmental functions. Consequently, from these and from those wild eyes already in the house membership, we undoubtedly will see some of the worst harum scarum pieces of legislation ever proposed in the national house of representatives.

It is such circumstances as is presented in the type of legislation that I named that will test Mr. Roosevelt's real capacity as a statesman.

Mussolini's rise from extreme socialism, the trenches and the hospital maintained the House of Savoy in nominal power. "After Mussolini what?" is one of many European questions.

Mr. Hull, Secretary of State, sailed for South America six hours late, to help bring peace to the world, or at least help set a good example on these two continents. He left a pier "double-picketed"; the strike tied up his ship, which had to bring six non-striking seamen out to the secretary's boat, waiting patiently near the Statue of Liberty.

After peace is brought to the world, the next step will be to bring peace to United States industry. You may read some day: "The House, Senate and Supreme Court could not meet; the President has moved over to the New Willard; the Amalgamated Order of Furnace Tenders let all the fires go out, while, in sympathy, the Electric union turned off all lights and the elevator men said sympathetically, 'No elevators.'"

There must be, for public necessities, including shipping that carries passengers and mails, some better plan than the strike plan, and one that would be just to workers.

This country makes some things better than any other country—automobiles, and moving pictures, for instance—and Englishmen know it. The late Irving Thalberg, vice president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, left 35,000 shares of Loew moving picture stock. As soon as the large block was offered for sale, Englishmen bought it all, by trans-Atlantic telephone, for about $2,200,000.

Nicholas Schenck, head of Loew's, and its biggest stockholder, missed an opportunity, and knows it. Everybody across the ocean knows that this country is one NOT to be sold short, regardless of passing troubles.

It is said the royal tombs reserved for Spanish kings have been violated, some or all of the bodies thrown out. It would be a pity to offer insult to what remains of the truly great King, afraid of mice and spicers, but not of any man—Charles the Fifth—if he also was entombed in the Escurial Pantheon.

Of the others, many would be more useful as fertilizer on some Spanish field than they ever were on the Spanish throne, and it is not necessary to weep over them.

London, with the biggest floating fleet on earth, is striving to "humanize submarine warfare."

That is like trying to humanize rat poison. Look at Spain and you see what will happen in the next war; everybody will kill as many as he can, as brutally as possible; you remember the Lusitania?

The biggest crowd seen in Washington greeted the President on his triumphant return to Washington, the White House and his job. For eleven days he will see only executive assistants and rewind the big machine. Those willing to serve their country for a consideration, or tell the President, free of charge, how it could be run better, must wait, probably until his return from the trip to South America.

Voltaire's learned Dr. Pangloss was wrong; it is not true that "all is for the best in the best possible of worlds."

In spite of all our wealth and prosperity, more mothers die in childbirth, in this country, than in any other "civilized" country in the world.

You know that better conditions are needed in America when you see photographs of the wretched two-room log cabin in the swamp bottomlands where Mrs. James Bridges gave birth to quadruplets.

According to Science Service, if whisky is subjected for seven hours to "intense sound vibrations," which means "a loud noise," the seven noisy hours will age the whisky as much as "four years in the wood."

Think what noise can do to the delicate nervous system of the human being if in seven hours it can add four years to the age of raw whisky.

Mussolini's order forbidding automobile drivers to blow their horns in Rome, "Use your eyes and your intelligence instead of your horns," should be copied widely.

Ingenious Nawab

About 30 years ago in Rajkot, India, the Nawab of Junagadh held a reception during which, for the first time, he never moved from his throne. The guests were suspicious, yet he constantly smiled at them and seemed to be enjoying himself. And he was. He was asleep. Having had too much opium before the reception, he had had his court artist paint a gay, happy smile on his face so he could be present and still take his much-needed nap. — Collier's Weekly.

"I know, Dave; I know. What's her address?"

"In my trunk, Bill," murmured McCrossen thickly. "Promise?"

"I promise."

"Give me—your hand."

Pardaloe was the first to reach Gunlock on the way home shortly before daylight. He rode in on his way to town to get hold of Dr. Carpy for Denison, whose condition worried him.

Fortunately the surgeon was already at Gunlock, whither he had been summoned to care for Sawdy. With Sawdy's flesh wound already bandaged, Carpy sat in the living room, drinking a pot of coffee supplied by Jane.

He was enjoying in leisurely fashion his third or fourth cup of steaming stimulant when the sound of hoofs was heard. In a moment a resounding rap came at the door.

Jane started. In terrified appeal, she looked at the doctor. Carpy responded by calmly wiping his lips—Jane had introduced napkins at Gunlock — and motioning Jane to her bedroom.

"Who's there?" he demanded curtly.

"Bill Pardaloe!" came the booming response.

Carpy flung the door open.

Jane ran out of the bedroom. "Oh, Mr. Pardaloe!" she cried. "Where is Bill? Where is he?"

"He's on his way back to the hospital."

"Is he hurt? Is he wounded? Tell me!" cried the frantic girl.

"Why, no, yes—that is, he was aimin' to get back to the hospital before Doc found out he was gone," parried the veteran awkwardly.

Carpy intervened sternly: "Where is he now? Talk, Bill!"

"Ain't I talkin'? He's on the way here with Bob Scott."

"Then he's not hurt?" cried Jane.

"Why, no, yes—a little, maybe."

"Where you from?" demanded Carpy, still stern.

"Deep Creek."

"Was there a fight?"

"There was a little brush, Doc."

"Was Denison wounded?"

"Why — I guess he was pinked, Doc."

"Where was he hit?"

"In the forearm, Doc. We got a tourniquet on that—he got another in the stomach."

"We'll bring him out, if that's all. Who was in the fight? Talk fast!"

"Dave McCrossen and Barney—with Bill."

"Where are McCrossen and Rebstock?"

"Right where they were when John Fryin' Pan left me. He was on his way to the Reservation to hunt up a couple of bucks to bury 'em and bring in the cattle."

"Sit down here, Bill. Jane," directed the doctor, "get the boy a pot of coffee."

"And boil plenty of clean water on the stove."

"Yes, doctor. Bill is going to stop here on the way in, isn't he?"

Pardaloe nodded. "Ought to show up after while."

Jane ran to the kitchen. She roused Quong to heat the water.

"No," continued Pardaloe, deep in a saucer of hot coffee, "I didn't see it. I was over on the west side of the creek—it's bad crossin' there. I don't know how Bill came up. They never could-a got him across down there. We cut over the reservation and plugged for Gunlock—" He pricked up his ears and interrupted himself. "Shucks! That sounds like somebody now!"

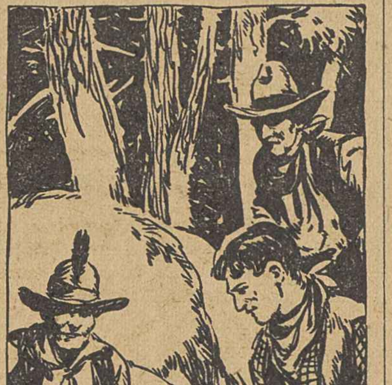
Jane listened eagerly. "I can't hear anyone," she said.

"You will in a minute. There they are again."

Jane ran for the door. "Hold on a minute, Missy," exclaimed Pardaloe. "Let's make sure who it is."

He opened the door himself, stepped quickly outside, and shut it behind him. Within a very few minutes, ages to Jane, she heard the stamping of horses. Pardaloe flung the door open and called for Carpy. Jane hurried out with him.

Drooping low, Denison, iron-willed, had stuck to the end of the gruelling ride. Scott told him they had followed up the east bank of the creek—he himself on Rebstock's horse; how by great good fortune they had found a flask of whisky in Rebstock's saddle-bag, and that this had helped revive the wounded man when they halted to "spell" him; and how they had crossed Deep Creek at a reservation ford not far below Gunlock ranch.



"I Know, Dave; I Know. What's Her Address?"

Carpy and Pardaloe lifted Denison down from the horse, Jane supported his head and stooped to caress him and murmur low words. They laid him on her bed.

While Carpy tore open Denison's clothing and made a hasty examination, buckets of hot water were brought in.

The surgeon, with wearied back, presently straightened up. "Jane," he said solemnly, "you're a lucky girl. The bullet that meant death for your boy struck his belt buckle and tore around his side. Look here. This was all I was afraid of, this stomach wound. I didn't think so much about Bill, here. But, Jane, I didn't want you fixing for a funeral when you ought to be fixing for a wedding! We'll get him back to the hospital in a few days."

"Oh, no, Doctor," exclaimed Jane unsteadily, but with cold decision.

"Why, what do you mean, girl?"

"I mean he's at Gunlock to stay. He's never going to leave it!"

Waste Paper Trade Now Reaches From America to Far Eastern Countries

It will probably be almost five months before the newspaper you are reading is used as a petticoat for a native pirl of upper Tibet, or as fuel for the suicide pyre of an Indian widow, but the chances are 83 to 1 that sooner or later the sheaves of newspapers cast out daily by the American housewife will be shipped to the Orient, following the same path as the scrap steel for Asiatic munitions.

Last year the trade in newspapers amounted to a total of almost $1,000,000 and weighed somewhere in the region of 50,000 tons.

From the East coast ports the journals are shipped either directly to the Chinese and Indian ports or are first freighted to the Californian ports, there to start their long journey.

Step by step it is possible to follow their trail from the rubbish piles of America to foreign nations 6,000 miles away.

First comes the junk man, paying possibly 10 cents for the accumulations of each cellar. The papers, a wagonload for a dollar, are taken to a paper firm, and sold at a slight profit, the amount depending upon the cleverness of the buyer and sellers.

There are companies that as an extra line provide for the future disposition of the merchandise. In one of these plants the bundles are stacked in cubic blocks measuring perhaps six feet each way.

Huge presses, exerting tremendous pressure compress the masses into blocks some five feet by three. Shrunk to such an extent that the printing is often lifted right off the sheet, the bales are wrapped in burlap covers and wired together for shipment.

According to the condition of shipping rates, the blocks are freighted by boat or train to the West coast. The ultimate destination, however, is the same—Singapore, Calcutta, Canton, Rangoon—as the demand requires.

It seems a lot of trouble for something that Americans consider only good for starting fires. But papers are extremely valuable in the poverty striken East, where a dollar a year man works for love of the money and not for love of the job.

You may think it worth while to pay a janitor a dollar just to get rid of the accumulation of newspapers in your cellar, but the Chinese often make what is to them good profit when one bundle of these compressed papers has been carried 1,000 miles through the bleak regions of inner China, there to be sold to native painters, house builders, fish peddlers, or tailors.

Owl's Mating Song

The mating song of the great horned owl is a succession of resonant bellowings in a single key—"Whoo, whoo, hoo-hoo, who"—quite variable as to length and form. Besides this the bird occasionally indulges in a sepulchral laughter, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo—which arouses anything but mirthful feeling in the listener.

★★★By VIRGINIA VALE★★★

THAT discussion about who will get the leads in the picture version of "Gone With the Wind" is still raging. One faction insists that the coveted roles were simply made for Miriam Hopkins and Clark Gable. Then a rumor sprang up to the effect that everything was settled; Talullah Bankhead and Ronald Colman were to play them.

Usually those discussions peter out with the parts being given to people no one had even thought of. Sometimes the public is asked to make suggestions, and the mail comes in by the ton, demanding a popular favorite in at least one role; if there are enough requests some attention is paid to them.

They do say that Ruth Chatterton is none too happy over the ending of "Girls' Dormitory." Originally it had a quite different one, with Miss Chatterton winning the hero, Herbert Marshall, when he realized that little Simone Simon was too young for him and that he had merely been infatuated with her. But things happened. The little Simone, it seems, has a way of getting what she wants, off the screen as well as on. So a new ending was the result.

Simone Simon

Another of those delightfully nonsensical pictures — and an exciting one, too — is "Manhattan Madness," with Jean Arthur and Joel McCrea. They seem to have a special talent at Columbia for turning out this brand of entertainment.

Jeanette MacDonald is going to have to work awfully hard before she is free to marry Gene Raymond and go off on her honeymoon—and she insists that that marriage is going to take place June 17th. Before that time she is to do three operatic roles—"Manon Lescaut," "The Firefly" and "Maytime." And as she likes to give a concert occasionally, that makes it hard.

Incidentally, we hear that she was asking a tremendous price for radio appearances, until she was reminded that, though she's well known to movie goers, folks who don't bother much about movies don't know her so well. But that may be just a rumor.

Phillips Lord, who writes and directs two of the popular radio programs, "Gang Busters" and "We, the People," doesn't listen to the more exciting broadcasts when he's just listening for entertainment. He likes Frank Black's music and Edgar Guest's "Welcome Valley."

Margaret Sullavan has never had a very high idea of her own achievements as an actress. She's even been accused of false modesty, because of the things she has said about her own performances. But she has proved what she meant by abandoning pictures, temporarily, and going into a stage play in New York. Says she's going to learn to act, something which can't be done in Hollywood.

Miriam Hopkins annoyed newspaper and magazine interviewers, we hear, when she was in New York on her way back to Hollywood from England. Made appointments with them for a certain day, and then went out early in the morning and just didn't come back. And Rosalind Russell annoyed one of the more important fan magazine editors by not being at all co-operative about an interview. So if you don't see much about either of them in your favorite magazine, you'll know why.

Miriam Hopkins

ODDS AND ENDS . . . It's reported that Clark Gable's ex-wife will marry one of the East's social headliners . . . If you hear that Elton Thomas wrote "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which Gary Cooper will do, remember that that's the pen name used by Douglas Fairbanks . . . The romance between Merle Oberon and David Niven is still blazing . . . Florence Eldridge, Fredric March's wife, who was "Queen Elizabeth" in "Mary of Scotland," has abandoned the movies for a return to the stage . . . Which will, no doubt, be the best way to get her what she wants in the movies . . . Bette Davis may have lost that legal decision to Warner Brothers, so that she can't make pictures in England—but remember, Bette likes to fight . . . Talk among radio folks is that Jack Benny needs a new script writer, this year's programs not being up to the standard established by the old ones.

Cosmic Ray's Life May Be Short but Full of Action

German Scientist Tells What Happens to It

SWARTHMORE, PA.—Early in the Twentieth century scientists noticed that a subtle electrical influence pervaded the earth's atmosphere. Ordinary air was found to possess the power of conducting electricity to an extent unexplainable by any facts known at that time.

Since this power became stronger and stronger as one went higher and higher above the earth, it was assumed to be caused by something coming from outer space. This something was given the name cosmic radiation.

Geiger Tells About Them.

One of the pioneers in this cosmic ray field was Prof. H. Geiger of the Physical institute at Tuebingen, Germany.

Recently, in Germany, Professor Geiger gave his interpretation of what scientists have learned about cosmic rays during the 30 odd years since their discovery. Research has shown that many of the rays are fast-flying electrically charged particles, and the German scientist tells what happens to such particle rays after they enter the earth's atmosphere.

The cosmic ray's life may be exceedingly short, but is indeed a complicated one. The original ray, tearing through the air, with nearly the speed of light, occasionally collides with the nucleus of an air atom.

Photons Are Light Bullets.

When this occurs a photon is created. A photon is a kind of light-packet or light-bullet similar to X-rays.

These photons likewise may collide with other air molecules and atoms. By a still-mysterious sort of alchemy taking place in the powerful electric field about the core of an atom, the photon—or part of one—becomes transformed into two electrons. Thus electrically charged particles of matter, one negative and one positive, are created by this collision.

Such particles also may suffer collisions and generate super-X-rays sufficiently powerful to eject negative electrons from other atoms of the atmosphere.

April to July Is Best Birth Period for Boy Babies

CHICAGO.—If it's a boy you want, Fond Parents, plan his birth date for some time between April and July.

American birth statistics support the view that conception occurring from July to September is "favorable to increased masculinity," according to the Journal of the American Medical Association.

English investigators find that rural areas produce more boy babies than do the cities, and from statistics available in the United States the same seems to be true here.

More Boys After War.

Social upheavals seem to bring more boy babies. During the World war and immediately thereafter, the ratio of male births increased in the war countries. Neutral nations experienced the same phenomenon but not to such an appreciable degree.

In England and Wales the upper classes give birth to more boys in proportion than to the lower classes.

In Greece the masculinity of births is exceptionally high. In Japan and Italy it is low.

W. T. Russell, the investigator quoted by the medical journal, finds no conclusive evidence that the sex ratio is related to the age of the parents, but any relationship that may exist is with the age of the father rather than with the age of the mother.

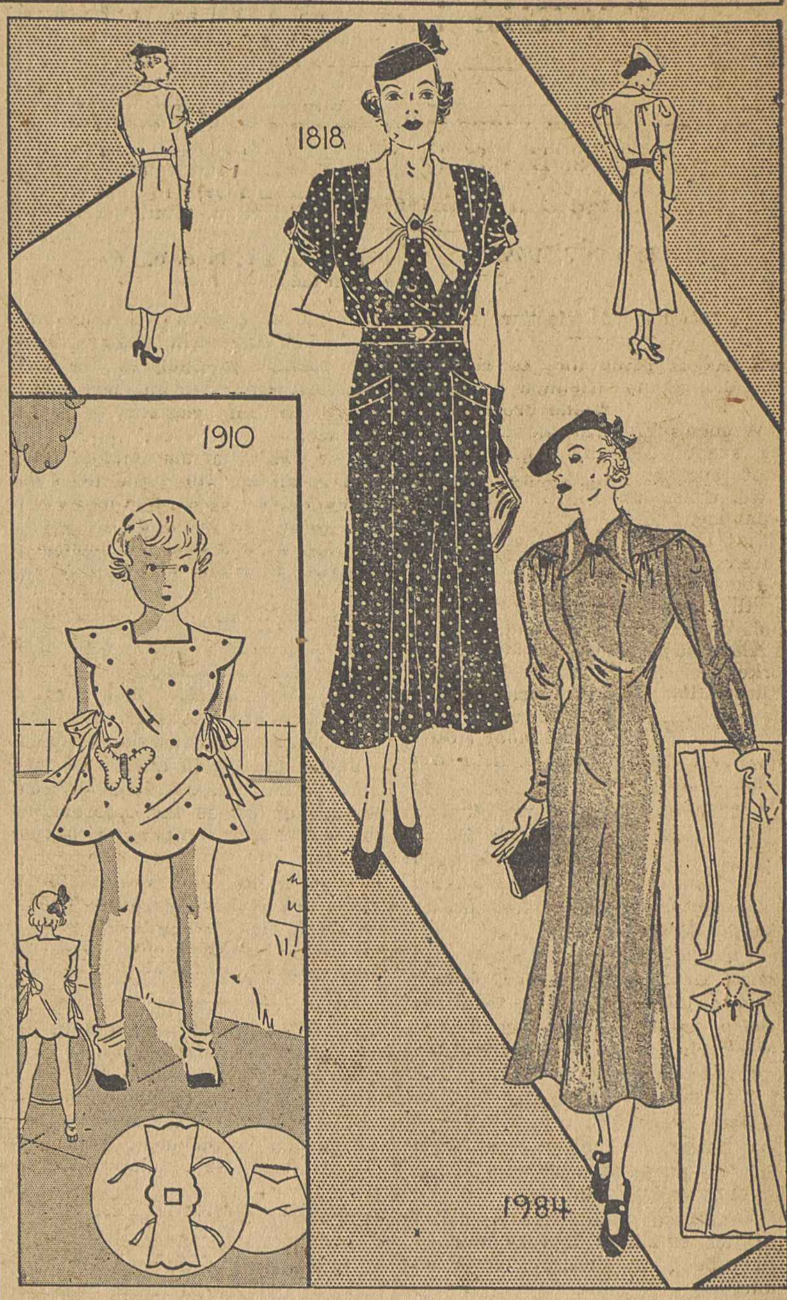
"The biologic fact of the preponderance of male births in the human race is an established one," says the medical journal, "but its purpose is still a matter of debate."

Chinese Making Paper From Swamp Reeds

Tientsin.—China, the world's first paper making country, is now so short on wood pulp that swamp reeds and grasses are being tried as paper materials.

Despite political disturbances, experiments with these materials are going forward here at Nankai University. One paper mill has obtained a patent on making paper from reeds.

Delightful, Modish Models



MATRON, miss, or tiny maid—you'll find here the answer to your wardrobe needs. These three delightful and modish models, specially designed for those who sew at home, cover a wide range of sizes and take high honors for style and economy combined.

LABOR TROUBLES

A good representation of Montevallo community attended a meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club, at the Elementary school Monday night. The guest speaker was Miss Mollie Dowd, conciliator for the Alabama Department of Labor.

Miss Dowd outlined the plan of procedure of the Labor Department to function as an effective agency for the settlement of any and all kinds of differences that may arise in Alabama between employer and workers.

Illustrating this practical procedure, she used her own recent experiences in some of the labor troubles, particularly in the field of textile operators.

It is apparent that the public mind in Alabama has a very keen interest in the possibilities of conciliation between industry and labor. There s a strong sentiment for harmony and a hope that it may be an accomplishment in fact as well as theory.

Miss Dowd very appropriately warned her audience of the dangers of disinterested persons attempting to settle labor disputes in some way other than allowing those concerned to have a chance to apply their own good sense and proper judgment.

"Labor disputes can not be adjusted by street corner caucuses of people who know nothing of the actual facts involved." She said. This, we think, is a very timely suggestion to the citizenship as a whole.

Much as everybody wants to see peaceful relations prevail between employer and worker, that does not remove the danger of one saying or doing the improper thing, if we assume to meddle in an affair that is none of our business and about which we may not have the proper information.

We believe the meeting Monday night will prove its worth in our community. We think the Business and Professional Women's Club did a lasting service in planning and carrying out the program which brought the representative group together in the free and open discussion that was made upon a most important public problem.

THE SPECIAL SESSION

It appears that we are to see another special session of theAlabama Legislature, beginning next Monday.

Will the lawmakers do anything? This is the big question in the minds of the people.

We urge them to remember that recovery has come to every phase of our business, except the schools. They have the opportunity and the duty to give to the schools that renewed life and hope that other things are enjoying. And if the Legislature does not do it, it will not be done.

Let us have a tax on liquor and other businesses, if any, that are not contributing their share to the expenses of our state's functions. Then, on top of that, let us have whatever else is necessary to guarantee the minimum program of our schools and colleges.

If some of our politicians should have to change a pre-election platform pledge, what could be more excusable than to do it for the sake of the proper education of the youth of our land?

And, after all, remember it is given to a wise man to change his mind—and a fool never.

Alabama should meet the challenge of our schools for the future, regardless of what has gone before.

FROM AN OLD FRIEND

A letter from an old friend, Joe Hollidaye, now at Kinston, N. C., to the editor of The Times, says: "I am in charge of a job shop for the Kinston Printing Company. I have been here nearly two years. We print two weekly papers. Dollie is operating the machine and Billie is large enough to do a lot of press work. Give our best regards to Eddie Watson, Bob Reid, Joe Klotzman and all our acquaintances in Montevallo" Joe used to be connected with the newspaper operations in Columbiana and Clanton, where he and The Times editor grew into a very delightful acquaintance. We had lost track of him recently and had no idea that he had gone as far as Kinston.

The Times was happy Tuesday to record visits from the entire newspaper fraternity of our neighbor town and County Capital, Columbiana. First, came Frank Norris, the old firebrand of Populism, who published The Peoples Advocate for many years. Following m were visits from Mr. Crouch, of Shelby County Democrat, and by Mr. Hugh Marshall, of eporter. Glad to see you, We hope you enjoy your visits to the best town in nty.

Crowe will spend the mi, Florida, "Where s the Winter."

CONGRATULATIONS TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

"The nation has spoken. Every American will accept the verdict, and work for the common cause of the good of the country. That is the spirit of democracy."

So ran the telegram dispatched by Governor Landon to President Roosevelt when it became apparent that the voters had rallied in unprecedented numbers in support of the administration. And that telegram represents something more than good sportsmanship—it marks an attitude that should be held by all people in every walk of life.

The Democratic victory was not a party victory. No mere party could be so overwhelming, or so completely break down sectional lines of partisan sympathy.

The victory was a very different thing—it was a personal victory for Mr. Roosevelt. No man in the country has so captivated the imagination and emotions of the people, and none has received such an expression of public confidence.

A Republican newspaper said the morning following the election that "the President today is the most popular figure our national life has known since Washington." It is impossible to gainsay that. The most popular of presidents, and those whose administrations stand out mountainously in our history—Jefferson, Lincoln, Cleveland—were never so popular as Mr. Roosevelt. The past records have all been shattered.

The time for partisanship has passed. The time for cooperation has come. This does not mean that the president should be followed blindly in every course—that would be unjust to Mr. Roosevelt himself as well as to the country. It does mean that all should work together in the common cause, as Governor Landon said, deliberating differences and adjusting varying points of view to the end that the great ideal of Democratic government be served to the ultimate of all capabilities.

Congratulations to the President! Few men in the world's history have been so signally honored by a great people—an honor which carries with it the gravest responsibilities. Every good citizen will hope sincerely that Mr. Roosevelt's second term as Chief Executive of the foremost nation on earth will be successful, and that his will be a high place in the history of our time.

ALABAMA'S HUGO BLACK

Alabamians eyeing the senatorial toga of Hugo Black were waiting to see how things went Tuesday. They can find no consolation as it now stands.

Black has grown in national stature and is now one of the first powers in Washington. Already there's talk about him in connection with the natioal ticket for 1940, based on part of the conspicuous service he rendered in the recent campaign.

He was a member of the Farley board of strategy, helping to make major decisions of policy, and he was used liberally as an ace trouble shooter on the hustings. He delivered something like 40 speeches, all of them in what was regarded as battle ground states. He spoke in New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana.

The fact that he is chairman of the Senate committee on education and labor made him a specially effective campaigner in the industrial states. An authority on labor questions, he likely will have an important part in shaping of legislation in which organized labor is interested.

Worn out by his campaign exertions, he is now resting in anticipation of a return to Washington in December. It is commonly understood that he will be a conspicuous figure in administration affairs during the next four years. Not since the days of Senator Underwood has any Alabamian loomed so large upon the national stage as Senator Black now bids fair to do. He comes up for re-election in 1938.

COMMUNIST VOTE

Adjutant General Goleman and Assistant Atty. Gen. John Haynes were arguing in the corridor. Chief Walter K. McAdory ,of the State Highway Patrol, not having been present for Haynes to argue with about the merits of the Methodist and Baptist Churches. Haynes and Coleman were discusing politics. "My County, Shelby, has mighty few Communists in it," said Haynes. "Well, Marshall has even fewer," answered Coleman and they set out down the hall to settle the question by the official tabulation in Howell Turner's office. The count was, Shelby, three, and Marshall, two.—Alabama Journal.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to friends and neighbors of this and surrounding communities, for their kindness shown us during the illness and death of our beloved wife and mother. May God amply repay each one for their kind consideration and goodness to us. We also want to bestow our thanks for the many beautiful floral offerings which were so freely given.—Mr. J. R. Moore and children.

Economic Highlights

"The Roosevelt victory is of such mammoth proportions as to leave no room for his opponents to be bitter or his critics to cavil. It is so overwhelming that alibis, analyses and explanatons seem foolish. The only thing to do is to cheerfully accept the result, with wonder that it was possible to be so blind before the election to the irresistible nature of the combination of sentiment and forces behind him."

So wrote Frank Kent, one of the most forthright of Roosevelt critics. This view is generally held by the professional publicists who supported Landon. Those who supported the president say with justice that they anticipated the result, that was inevitable—though most of them were surprised by the extent of the victory.

For the sake of the record, here is how the great battle of 1936 came out: The President carried 46 States, for a total of 523 electoral votes. Governor Landon carried 2 States, with 8 electoral votes. The popular vote gave the President a majority f about 10,000,000—26,000,000 to 16,000,000 for his opponent. It was the most decisive electoral college victory since the two-party system became well established.

So far so good. But when it comes to guessing that Mr. Roosevelt achieved the unprecedented, there is consderable difference of opinion, especially in the Republican camp. Thus, Walter Lippman, who supported Roosevelt in 1932, but turned to Landon in the last campaign, has written that the campaign was more or less normal—that it simply proved the truth of the old adage that an incumbent is unbeatable in a period of industrial improvement. Mr. Lippman also says that if the solid South, which no Republican can hope to carry under any circumstance—is eliminated from onsideration, such Republican candidates as Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, won just as handily.

On the other hand, famed William Allen White, one of Landon's closest advisors, sees the election very differently. He believes that "it was not just an election which the country has just undergone, but a political Johnstown flood. The dam gave way which has been slowly filling for 40 years, fed by the waters of Bryanism, of Theodore Roosevelt's progressivism, of LaFollette's Wisconsin insurgency, of Wilsonian liberalism, of the progressive bloc in the Senate under the administration of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. The waters of the New Deal cover the earth. Republcans dd not heed the warnings.'

Generally speaking, this view is widely held. In addition, practically all commentators agree that the Republican campaign was inept and badly handled, that the party organization was about as bad as it could be, and that Landon and his advisors failed to make the best of the situation. By contrast, the Democratic machine under Jim Farley was a marvel of efficiency and effectiveness. There was no waste motion—everything worked with the precision of a series of relay switches.

Furthermore, it is difficult to exaggerate the political importance of the President's personality. A natural born speaker, he has the rare faculty of establishing a personal relationship between himself and the voters. As many point out, no one in the political history of the last century has had so great a grip in the emotions of millions of American citizens.

The important question to be answered now is, What direction will future Roosevelt policies take? And here again there is a wide difference of opinion, even in the President's own camp. Supported as he is by amazingly different groups, no one but the Chief Executive himself can answer that question. Thus, one New Deal group is of the opinion that the president is likely to take a conservative course, now that business has recovered much of the ground lost during the depression, and will refrain from new experiments. This is a small group.

Another group feels that the president will swing sharply to the left and go whole hog along the path of a socialist or collectivist or fascist program. This, too, is small.

The largest group, and the one which seems to be best informed and closest to the White House, feels that the second Roosevelt administration will follow a middle-of the-road course—that the president will attempt the difficult job of holding the balance between radicalism on the one hand and reaction on the other. In other words, they feel that he will try to maintain a government-regulated capitalism—and at the same time keep the left wingers as contented as possible.

At this writing, the President himself has given but one indication of future policy, that was his statement that the budget will soon be balanced—a step which, if achieved, will naturally be regarded as conservative, and will be lauded by industry. He seems to feel that better conditions make it possible to reduce government relief spending by a considerable amount. This saving, plus the increase in tax income that results from improved industrial earnings and higher taxes, may do away with Federal deficits.

MONTEVALLO 27, ISABELLA 13

Montevallo romped on a much lighter Isabella team last Friday. Montevallo kicked off to Isabella, who fumbled the ball and Montevallo recovered. Then Confer took the ball three times in succession on off-tackle slants for a touchdown. After this first touchdown Montevallo made three other touchdowns. One of these was made by Lee who, after intercepting a pass in midfield, made a sensational run to make the tally. Montevallo also made three extra points.

Montevallo's defense usually holds up, whether the offense is good or not, but this time Montevallo's defense was lacking. As a result of this, Isabella made her first touchdown of the season last Friday.

Montevallo had a record crowd out for the game as a result of the "Sponsor" contest. Before last Friday's game the Senior III class of M. H. S. staged a contest to select two sponsors from a group of five girls. Misses Theda Wyatt and Margaret Fancher were finally selected to walk out on the field with Captains Lee and Harrison.

Up to this time Montevallo has won all of their games, except the one with Piper. As you remember, M. H. S. won the Jones Valley game by forfeit.

MOORE-BELL MARRIAGE IN MIAMI ON NOVEMBER 7TH

Mr. J. R. Moore announces the marriage of his daughter, Ertice Olene, to Mr. Ernest Bell, in Miami, Florida, on November 7th. The wedding ceremony was performed at the courthouse in Miami.

Mrs. Bell, the youngest daughter of Mr. Moore, formerly lived in Montevallo. On the day she was married, the bride was notified by telegraph, of her mother's serious illness. She arrived at the bedside Monday, November 9th, and the mother passed away on Armistice Day, Wedsenday, November 11th.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell will make their home in Miami. Their friends extend best wishes for their future happiness.

Rev. J. A. May has returned from Phil Campbell, Alabama, where he has been assisting in an evangelistic meeting.

Ben Ames Williams Writes New Serial For Our Readers

It deals with a famous physician, Dr. Greeding, who imagined himself endowed with strange supernatural power. He used it selfishly to gain his own desires at the expense of others, forgetting the old axiom that "he who eats with the devil must use a long spoon." Like the famous Dr. Faustus, this man was finally rebuffed by his own fiendish tactics.

Ben Ames Williams

Intermingled with this unique plot is a fascinating love story in which the doctor's daughter and a young college professor whom Dr. Greeding dislikes are the principals.

"Deputy of the Devil" follows a series of remarkable stories by Ben Ames Williams, including "Hostile Valley," "Honeyflow," "All the Brothers Were Valiant" and "Great Oaks." He has also written innumerable short stories for magazines.

Williams started his career as a newspaper reporter in Boston, following his graduation from Dartmouth college in 1910.

He now lives in Massachusetts, spending his summers in Maine indulging in his favorite sports of trout and bass fishing, tennis, golf and swimming.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala.—The State Conservation Board on October 30, voted to open the hunting season on squirrels in Sumter, Greene, Hale, Bibb, Chilton, Tallapoosa, Chambers and all counties south of these counties on November 1.

Under an earlier regulation of the Board, the squirrel season in South Alabama would have opened on November 20, and closed on January 31. The new regulation does not change the closing date nor does it change the squirrel hunting season in North Alabama, which opened October 15 and will close on January 15.

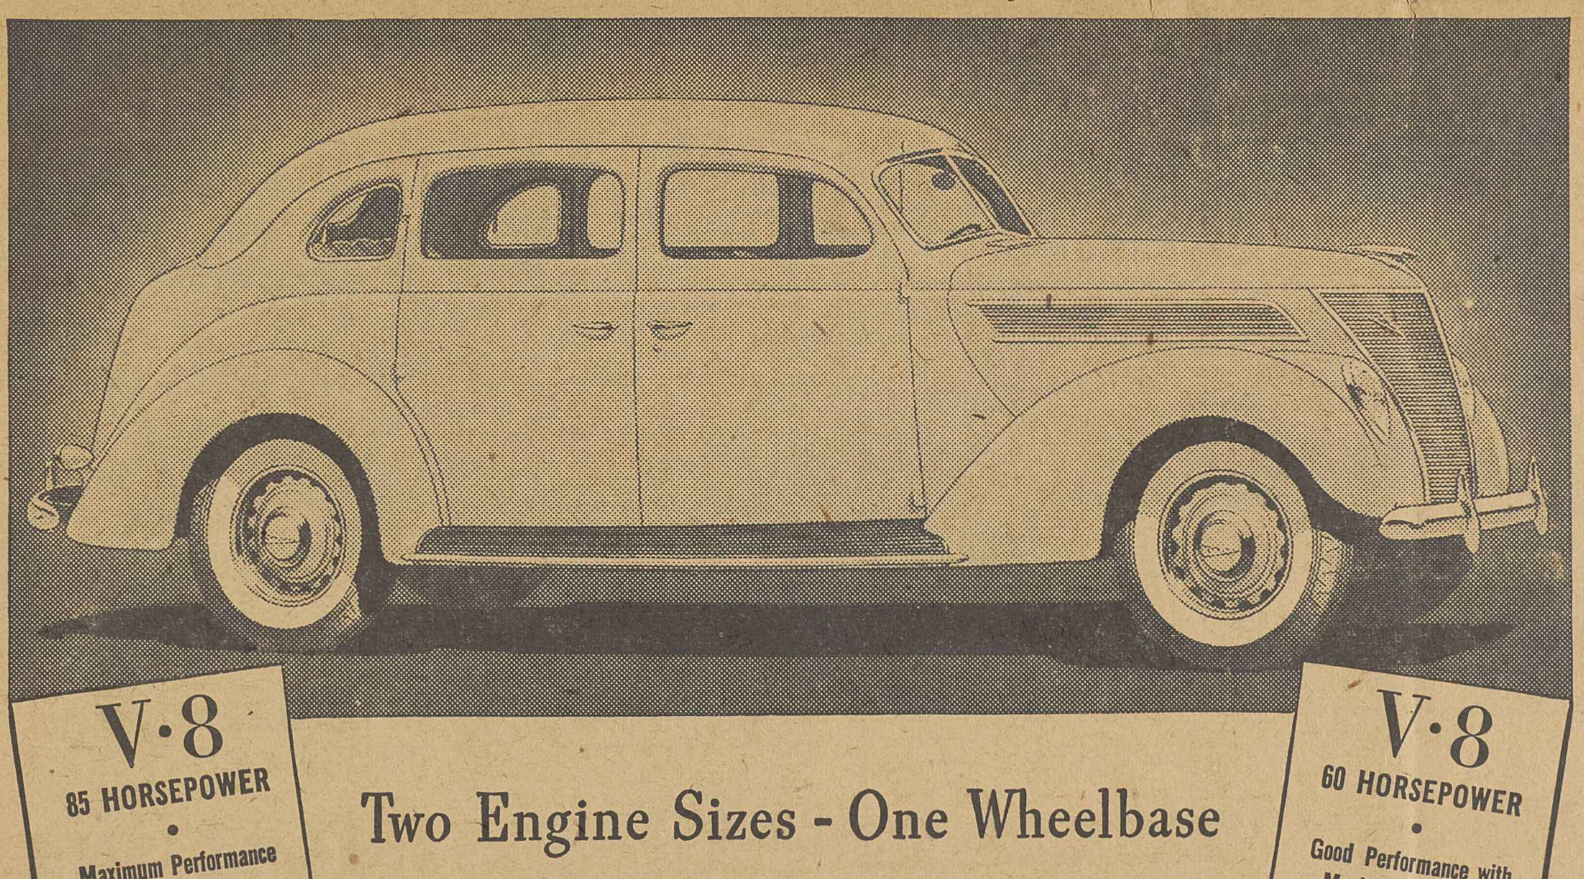
THE FORD V·8 FOR 1937
The Quality Car in the Low-price Field



V·8
85 HORSEPOWER
•
Maximum Performance with Good Economy
•
Bore, 3.062 in. Stroke, 3.75 in.
Displacement, 221 cu. in.

Two Engine Sizes - One Wheelbase
AND A NEW LOW PRICE

V·8
•
Good Performance with Maximum Economy
•
Bore, 2.6 in. Stroke, 3.2 in.
Displacement, 136 cu. in.

The New Ford V-8 for 1937 is the most beautiful Ford car ever offered. It is built in only one size—one standard of roomy comfort and modern appearance. But you may have either the improved 85-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum performance—or the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum economy. The smaller engine makes possible a lighter car—lower operating costs—and a lower price.

When you drive the 1937 Ford with the 85-horsepower V-8 engine, you are master of a power plant that gives everything you can possibly demand in speed and acceleration. Today, improved carburetion enables it to deliver its thrilling performance with unusually low gasoline consumption.

The new 60-horsepower V-type 8-cylinder engine delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness—even at speeds up to 70 miles an hour—with gasoline mileage so high that it creates an entirely new standard of economy in modern motor car operation.

We invite you to see this new Ford car, and arrange to drive one equipped with the engine that fits your needs.

AUTHORIZED FORD FINANCE PLANS
$25 a month, after usual down-payment, buys any model 1937 Ford V-8 Car—from any Ford dealer—anywhere in the United States. Ask your Ford dealer about the easy payment plans of the Universal Credit Company.

FEATURES

APPEARANCE—A newly designed car. Headlamps recessed in fender aprons. Modern lid-type hood hinged at the back. Larger luggage space. Spare tire enclosed within body. Completely new interiors. Slanting V-type windshield opens in all closed cars.

COMFORT AND QUIET—A big, roomy car. Extra space is in the body, not taken up by the engine under the hood. Comfort of the Center-Poise Ride further increased by smoother action of the long-tapering springs, with new pressure lubrication. New methods of mounting body and engine make this a quieter car.

SAFETY

BRAKES—New Easy-Action Safety Brakes, of the cable and conduit control type. "The safety of steel from pedal to wheel." Self-energizing—car momentum is used to help apply the brakes. Tests show that about one-third less pedal pressure is required to stop the car.

BODY—Not an ounce of wood used for structural strength. Frame structure all steel, sheathed with steel panels—top, sides and floor. All are welded into a single steel unit of great strength. Safety Glass all around at no extra charge.

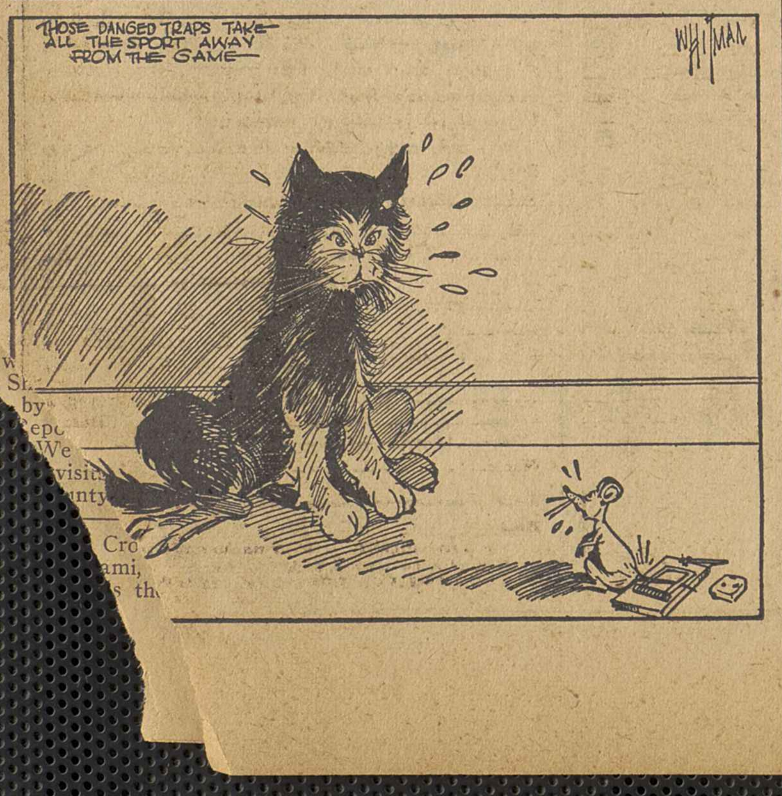
Curse of Progress



THOSE DANGED TRAPS TAKE ALL THE SPORT AWAY FROM THE GAME—
WHITMAN

With Music

He was a good barber, but his schooling had been neglected. On the walls of his shop was a card bearing the words: "Haircutting, 6d. Singing 3d."

When young Witting, commercial traveler, drifted in, he spotted the mis-spelt card.

"Short at the back and round the ears, please," he said, seating himself in the chair, "and you can give me a verse and chorus of 'When I grow too old to dream'."

Empty and Filled

One day a tramp came to a farmer's house and asked for a job. The farmer took him out to a field of turnips and told him to pull them. relates Ireland's Own, of Dublin.

"As, well," said the tramp, "an empty sack cannot stand."

The farmer took him into the house and gave him a meal. After he had finished the meal the farmer took him out again to the field, but the tramp said: "Well, sir, a full sack cannot bend."

Coaches Realizing Grid Fundamentals Will Pay Dividends

RECENTLY it was noted here that the professors of football were becoming more and more inclined to devote themselves to enlightened expositions of the game's fundamental practices. Instead of advising that the air be filled with forward passes they were making moderate and effective use of this weapon. In place of the lateral fripperies and the more gaudy shifts they were advising some intelligent application of the punt and field goal.

Such evidence of progress after an overlong period of blatant confusion has led to some examination of the causes immediately preceding the return to sanity. I believe I now have the reasons for the trend.

They are: 1. The increasing total of last period triumphs during the past five years. 2. The innumerable touchdowns scored standing up. Let us consider them in the order in which they are set down here.

Formerly the less pretentious colleges were so venal that they fairly gibbered in their eagerness to be sacrificed behind the Yale Bowl turnstiles at some early season date. Top-heavy scores then were almost as frequent as torn muscles.

So the period scores were comparatively uniform. Having torn their tank town adversaries to pieces during the first half flush of zeal, the major leaguers ambled across the dazed and wounded with far less zest but just as pretty touchdown results during the final moments.

Now, though, the great universities have deprived the little fellows of most of their crumbs. Columbia moved into Yankee stadium almost before the last World series customer had departed. Jim Crowley's Fordham boys have been playing to big crowds in the Polo grounds. Other high class exponents of the higher learning gloat a full month earlier than usual about how the exploitation of a few dozen young men can provide even tidier profits.

Jim Crowley

Obviously this matching of big time teams and of the big time bank rolls with which the teams are obtained, should produce better football. I think it does. I also think that there is some enlightenment in the fact that thirty-four of ninety-two important games have been won or tied in the final fifteen minutes of play this season.

Depend on Strong Line to Apply Pressure to Foes

Dr. Marvin Stevens, one of the better thinkers and more fearless talkers among the football notables, touched upon the subject a day or two ago. While dilating upon the virtues of his N. Y. U. line he pointed out that it is the steady pounding which really reveals the excellence of a team so well equipped up front. In other words, if pressure is relentlessly applied during the first two periods, something almost inevitably must crack before the finish.

Reduced still further this becomes the A B C of football—viz—the proper application of brawn will win games.

When men are well matched in weight, speed, intuition and experience and are equally well coached—as is the case among most of today's pennant contenders—two factors sway the results of their contests. The more glibly reported of them is luck. The more important is physical condition.

A tired boy relaxes for a moment in the line. He has practiced hard all week, trying to keep up with complicated plays. He has been pounded all afternoon. He still wants to win but the brain is almost as tired as the body on which it must depend. He relaxes. The steady pressure is applied once more. There is the break through and a game that might have been won is lost.

The touchdowns that come standing up are similar. Perhaps a fresh back is in the game. Perhaps a jaded boy shakes loose by some chance and is spurred by the victory urge. Tired brains functioning in tired bodies note him, but it is a fraction of a second too late. Leaden legs follow but the pursuit is useless.

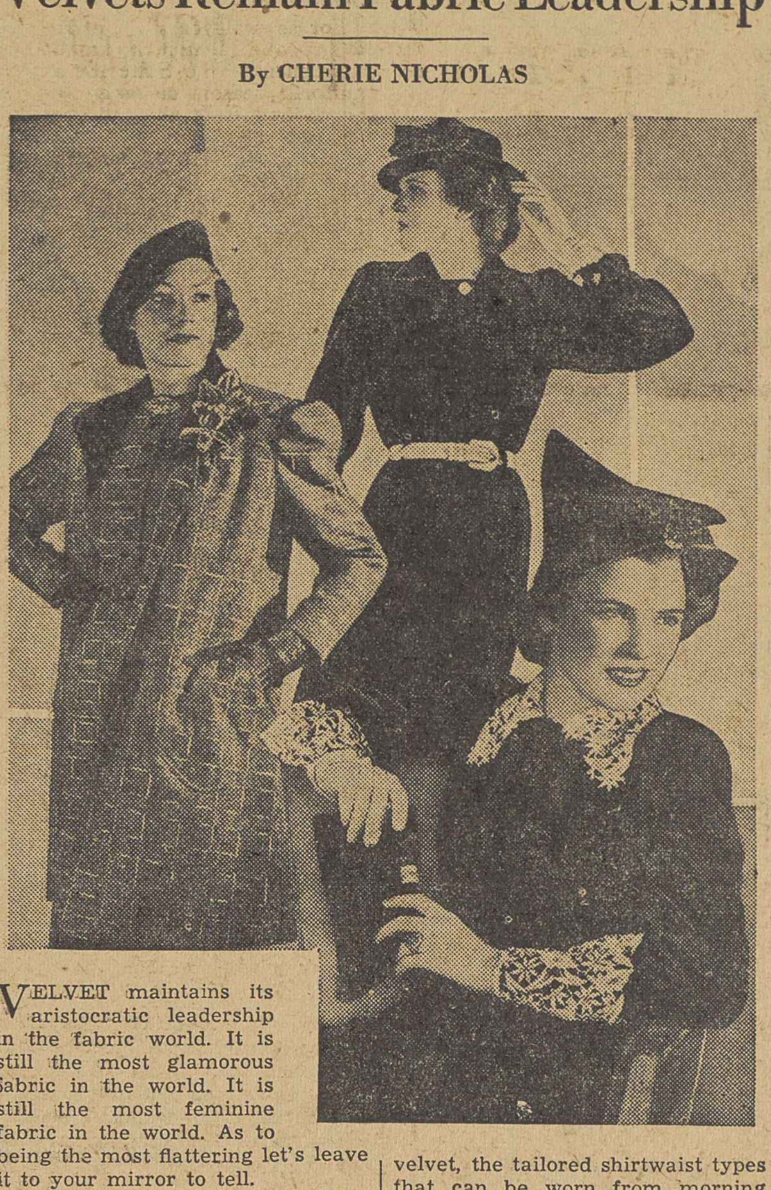
Velvets Remain Fabric Leadership

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



VELVET maintains its aristocratic leadership in the fabric world. It is still the most glamorous fabric in the world. It is still the most feminine fabric in the world. As to being the most flattering let's leave it to your mirror to tell.

Now that the miracle of making velvet crush - resistant has been wrought, there is nothing more to wish for in the way of the fabric ideal for active daytime wear as well as for festive night occasion. Not to be wondered at, we are thinking, that the news of crush-resistant velvet is being hailed with exceeding great joy throughout the length and breadth of fashionland for thus does it become a dependable, practical, everyday mode as well as a symbol of luxury and glamor for most any evening.

Chic Parisian women have adopted enthusiastically the tailored velvet suit with frilly, lacy blouses which are worn from luncheon on through the cocktail hour. Velvet combined with broadcloth is an outstanding fall fashion. Velvet is also widely used in revers, hembands, bindings, in collars and for buttons on wool, as in the town-country suit in clan plaid as shown to the right in the illustration. The hat is of matching velvet. Which leads us to tell you that "velvet with" is found in every type of suit from sports to the elegant dinner suits.

The fur - trimmed velvet suit is being shown in many styles—the tuxedo, the tunic, the short jacket and so on. These display rich furs, such as red fox, silver fox, Persian lamb and mink, in collars, revers, and most dramatic wide bandings (the rage this season) and clever manipulations on shoulders and sleeves.

The elegant velvet coat has the endorsement of fashion. It is found lavishly trimmed with fur, or untrimmed, with which one may wear one's own furs. It is a very smart coat for afternoon, for luncheon, bridge and cocktails and "don't dress" occasions.

In mentioning daytime fashions in velvet, the tailored shirtwaist types that can be worn from morning to night have an important place. It shops, goes to the office and feels at home at the theatre or informal dinner party. Thus has the practicability of velvet been increased enormously by the development of the crush-resistant type. It is a charming little shirtwaist velvet dress shown centered in the group. A white leather belt and button contrasts smartly against the black velvet. A felt Spanish sailor with vari-colored bows adds swank, and the white glace kid gloves worn are the finishing touch.

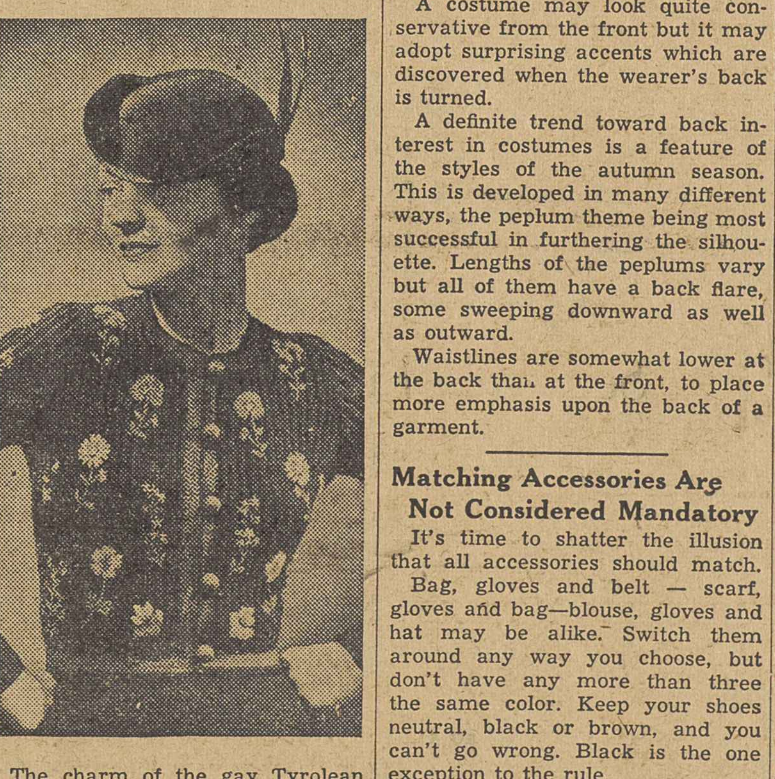
TYROLEAN KNIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



The charm of the gay Tyrolean colors is told in knitted fashions this season. A leading theme, resultant of the vogue for vivid peasant colorings, is the introduction of fetching hand - embroidery in the knitted realm. Of Austrian origin is the handsome black knitted costume pictured. The jacket especially interprets the color appeal of enlivening embroidery so characteristic of this picturesque people. This stunning black knit two-piece is distinguished with a Lanz of Salsburg jacket. It is authentic, therefore, of native dress. The knitting is done in a variation rib stitch and is yarn-embroidered in gay Alpine flowers.

PEPLUM THEME IN DRESSES FOR FALL

A costume may look quite conservative from the front but it may adopt surprising accents which are discovered when the wearer's back is turned.

A definite trend toward back interest in costumes is a feature of the styles of the autumn season. This is developed in many different ways, the peplum theme being most successful in furthering the silhouette. Lengths of the peplums vary but all of them have a back flare, some sweeping downward as well as outward.

Waistlines are somewhat lower at the back than at the front, to place more emphasis upon the back of a garment.

Matching Accessories Are Not Considered Mandatory

It's time to shatter the illusion that all accessories should match.

Bag, gloves and belt — scarf, gloves and bag—blouse, gloves and hat may be alike. Switch them around any way you choose, but don't have any more than three the same color. Keep your shoes neutral, black or brown, and you can't go wrong. Black is the one exception to the rule.

With a black outfit, all accessories may be black. But don't look too much like the bereaved widow—have a touch of color somewhere such as a clip, a string of beads or a bracelet.

Umbrella Pockets

Watch for umbrella pockets on fall coats. Usually these are executed in heavy silk, pleated and flared to resemble a folded umbrella.

Flower Pot Crowns

Flower pot crowns dominate winter hat styles.

"The Man Who-o-o"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

INSURGENTS

FORMATION of the Union party for this year's campaign and its nomination of Representative William Lemke of North Dakota for President recalls some of the other "insurgent" parties which have played their part in our political history. The first of these was the Peace party of 1812-15, composed of Democrat-Republicans and Federalists, mostly in New England, who opposed the War of 1812.

In 1824 there was a People's party, composed of Democrat-Republicans, who favored choosing electors by the people and in 1825 there was a Coalition party, so-called from the union of the supporters of Henry Clay with those of John Quincy Adams to elect Adams. There was an Anti-Masonic party in the field from 1827 to 1834 and in 1840-41 the Abolitionists formed the Liberty party. The Free Soil party, which later became the modern Republican party, was formed of Liberty party members, Whigs and Democrats.

The American party, popularly known as the "Know-Nothing party" was formed from members of other parties who became dissatisfied with the influx of foreigners and first raised the cry of "America for Americans!" In 1860 it was merged with the Constitutional party.

In this same year there were two Democratic parties—the Douglas Democrats (Northern) and the Breckenridge Democrats (Southern). In 1872 dissatisfied Republicans and pro-war Democrats formed the Liberal Republican party and nominated Horace Greeley for President. Other Democrats who wouldn't vote for Greeley formed the "Straight Out" or "Tap Root" Democratic party, which nominated Charles O'Conor.

In 1884 there was an Anti-Monopoly party which nominated Benjamin F. Butler of Massachusetts but which died a-borning. In that same year "bolters" from the Republican party who refused to support Blaine, the nominee, became the "Mugwumps" and supported Cleveland, the Democratic nominee. In 1896 there were "bolters" from both parties. Free silver advocates, led by Senator Teller of Colorado, left the Republican party, and "gold Democrats" deserted that party and its nominee, William J. Bryan, formed a "National Democrat" party and nominated two former Civil war generals—John M. Palmer of Illinois for President and Simon B. Buckner of Kentucky for vice-president.

Last but not least was the split in the Republican party in 1912 which resulted in the formation of the Progressive party under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt and the consequent victory of Wilson over Taft.

THE SALEM WITCHES PARADE

IF, IN 1888, you had read in the papers this headline: "Salem Witches to Parade for Harrison Tonight," you would probably have rubbed your eyes to make sure that you weren't seeing double and mixing up Seventeenth and Nineteenth century history into an amazing anachronism. But the fact is that the Salem witches did march for Harrison in 1888 and for the next 20 years they were a striking feature of many a campaign torchlight procession in Massachusetts and other states.

The Salem Witches were members of three militia units who dressed up in a uniform consisting of a Mother Hubbard dress with a white yoke on which was displayed pictures of Harrison and Morton, the Republican presidential and vice-presidential nominees, and a skirt of red, white and blue stripes dotted with stars. A scarlet cape, worn with one-half thrown back over the shoulder, was another striking feature and with it was worn a poke bonnet with a high crown. Each of the "girls" carried a broom torch.

At about the time the Salem Witches campaign battalion was organized in Salem, Republicans in Haverhill, Mass., organized the Brother Jonathans. Members of these two clubs became great friends and it was their practice to "double up" after the parade had proceeded a short distance with each "Brother Jonathan" gallantly escorting a "Salem Witch."

Many and varied have been the marching clubs which took part in torchlight parades in campaign years. But there has never been a more striking one than the "Salem Witches" of the campaign of 1888.

Secretary of the Treasury

In 1789 congress enacted a law providing that the secretary of the treasury may not engage in trade or business, own steamships or otherwise be active in profit-making enterprises during his incumbency. He is liable, on conviction, to a $3,000 fine, dismissal and may never thereafter hold office under the federal government. The same provisions apply to the treasurer of the United States and the register of the treasury.

Dixie's Biggest Hunt of Year In December

Montgomery, Ala.—Dixie's biggest hunt of the year will be held in the Black Warrior National Forest in North Alabama on December 17, 18 and 19.

These are the dates selected by the U. S. Forest Service and the State Conservation Department for Alabama's annual public deer hunt.

Although the hunt will take place one month later than has been customary in the past, the recent enlargement of the National Forest by several thousand acres should allow the authorities to better accomodate the legion of hunters that each year participate in the event.

Close to 1,000 nimrods took stands in the forest for the three-day hunt last year, many coming from out of State. No hunt was held in 1934, but the year before, a similar number converged on the forest in quest of the handsome bucks that roam the range.

While hunters were plentious last year, drivers and dogs were at a premium and this contributed to a bag of 26 bucks which might otherwise have been double this number. This shortsightedness on the part of the hunters no doubt will be remedied this year.

Since the 1935 hunt the name of the forest has been changed from the Alabama National Forest to the Black Warrior National Forest and its increased acreage now embraces parts of Morgan, Cullman and Walker counties as well as new territory in Lawrence, Winston and Franklin counties.

The three days set aside for the hunt will be the only open season on deer in these six counties this year as the Federal and State authorities are anxious to increase the deer population in this area as rapidly as possible. They estimate that no less than 3,000 deer now range the forest.

The only requisites for entering the hunt are a hunting license and a permit. The hunting license may be obtained from any county probate judge, and the permit, for which there is no charge, may be secured from Federal Forest Ranger, F. C. Hennenberg, at Decatur. No hunter will be permitted to kill more than one buck during the hunt, and the killing of does will be strictly forbidden.

The hunters will not stalk the game, but will be placed on stands spaced far enough apart to insure safety and will use shotguns in preference to rifles.

Mrs. Pete Givhan and Mrs. J. R. Lewis visited in Birmingham Monday.

Mrs. Ida Hendrick attended to business in Birmingham Saturday.

MONTEVALLO LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. Roy Hill and two children, of Dothan, Alabama, were guests of Mrs. M. L. Orr several days of last week.

Mrs. A. H. PJinkerson, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. M. L. Orr for some time, left Wednesday for Mt. Meigs, Alabama. From there she will go to Biloxi, Miss. for a visit.

Mrs. W. J. Warner, of Selma, sister of Mrs. F. W. Rogan, visited at the home of the Rogans last Sunday. She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Galloway have moved into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Shaw. Mr. Galloway is now working with his father, Mr. R. E. Galloway.

Miss Catherine Fancher and several friends visited points of interest last Sunday. They went to Old Bibb iron ore furnace site, in Bibb County, which is the oldest furnace in the state. Nothing remains but a huge mound of brick to indicate where a thriving industry was fifty years ago.

Mrs. C. L. Meroney had as her guests Tuesday, Mrs. F. W. Davis and Mrs. Tolliver Wallace Teague and Mrs. Merrill of Colum,biana and Mrs. Alice Carlisle, of Louisville, Kentucky.

APPEAL FOR WEARING APPAREL FOR THE NEEDY

Members of the Business and Professional Club will call upon you next week for any type of wearing apparel, which will be distributed to the needy in this part of the county. This will be done through the cooperation of Miss Myrtle Brook, who knows the situation of such cases.

ANNOUNCEMENT

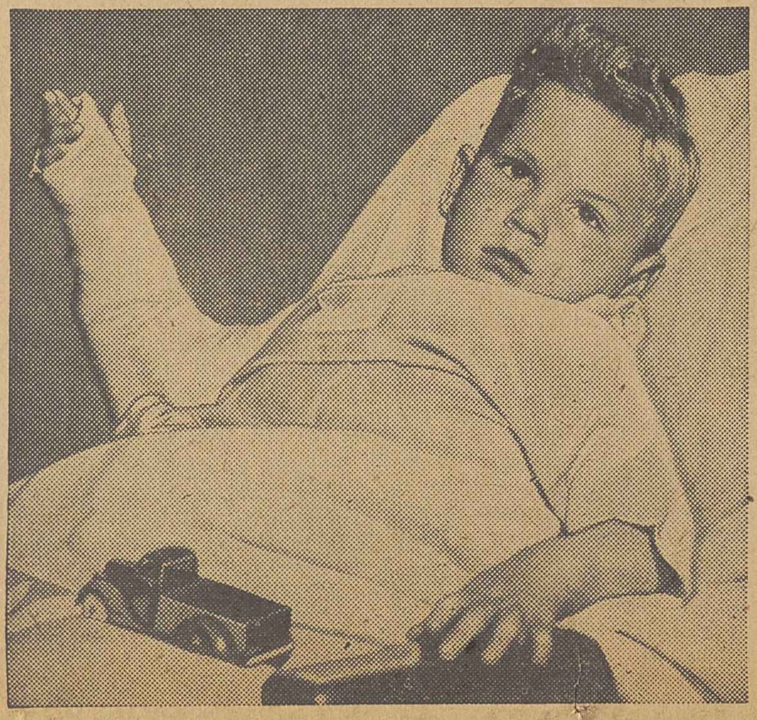
Mr. C. G. Dobbins, of Alabama College, will speak to the Baptist Brotherhood Class Sunday morning. He will have the regular lesson for the day as his subject.

Mrs. F. J. Morgan and Mrs. F. W. Reynolds, of Faunsdale, Alabama, were guests of Mrs. W. B. Reynolds and Mrs. George Craig Saturday.

Mrs. S. H. Woods, Sr. attended the funeral services of a friend in Carbon Hill Monday. Mrs. Woods is the mother of Mrs. Stanley Mahan.

Mr. J. R. Simpson is opening a place of amusement for the public. It will be a shooting gallery and is to be located in the stone building at the rear of Rogan'es store. He will probably open the latter part of the week. There will be prize shooting and other attractions.

"Now I Lay Me—"



This child was hurt when a tornado struck Tupelo, Mississippi, necessitating medical and nursing care for hundreds—care which in many cases could not have been given without Red Cross assistance. It is a fine tribute to the organization that the young beneficiaries of its health and relief services invariably place themselves in the hands of the Red Cross with a completely confident, "Now I lay me—."

RED CROSS HIGHWAY POSTS AID INJURED

1,000 Function At Key Points To Give Emergency Care To Traffic Hurt

Highway first aid stations, set up by the Red Cross to give emergency care to victims of traffic accidents. are saving lives, according to James L. Fieser, vice-chairman in charge of domestic operations.

"More than 1.000 of our emergency posts are already operating in 47 states and thousands of others will soon be established at key points along America's highways," Mr. Fieser stated.

The Red Cross highway posts are concentrated at danger spots in rural areas where medical aid is not readily available. The importance of this coverage of the open road. the Red Cross holds, is given sharper emphasis by the fact that there has been a 150 per cent increase in rural traffic fatalities during the past twelve years.

The project was initiated last year on a national scale as a practical approach to the highway accident problem. The Red Cross felt that it could best apply its strength by succoring those who continue to be injured pending a reduction in the highway accident rate through legislation and safety education.

"Our program brings first aid skill to the scene of accident in an effort to reduce the number of persons killed and maimed in automobile mishaps," Mr. Fieser said. "Our highway first aiders are not medical men in any sense, but it is their job to turn the injured over to the medical profession in the best shape possible."

The Red Cross highway posts are established at gasoline service stations, tourist homes, rural police and fire departments. The personnel of the posts are trained by the Red Cross in first aid, standard first aid equipment is installed at each station, and identifying signs for the benefit of motorists are erected beside the highway at both approaches to the station.

The attendants of these roadside units who qualify as first aiders volunteer their services through the Red Cross and may under no circumstances accept pay for caring for the injured.

To complement the highway first aid stations, the Red Cross has announced formation of mobile units. Several thousand trucks which regularly ply the highway in the course of routine work will be equipped with first aid kits. Drivers and crews will take courses in both standard and advanced first aid, and each truck will be identified as a Red Cross mobile unit. More than a hundred trucks are already operating.

"The highway police of eight states who have finished first aid training will join this army mobilized to cut accident fatalities and prevent complication of minor injuries through mishandling at the scene of accident," Mr. Fieser said. "We receive reports from our first aid stations daily, telling of essential care given to traffic casualties on the spot and of lives actually saved."

This and many other Red Cross programs of equal value are supported by the people of America during the annual Roll Call for members. This year the Roll Call will be held from November 11 to 26

Red Cross Potential Life Savers Number Nearly 2,000,000

First aid and life saving certificates issued by the American Red Cross since the start of the service 26 years ago now number 1,888,702. During the past year the Red Cross qualified 222. 693 persons in first aid and taught water safety and rescue methods to 80.961.

This army of First Aiders and Life Savers is one of the great safety factors in the nation. They are trained to give immediate first aid at the scene of accident, thus saving many lives and preventing permanent injury. Red Cross training includes skill in treating for shock, splinting fractures, checking arterial bleeding, applying artificial respiration, towing drowning persons to safety, and in the safe handling of boat and canoe.

Last year the Red Cross reached 10,000,000 homes with check lists of accident hazards in a nation-wide program to reduce the incidence of home and farm accidents. This year home accident fatalities were cut by several thousand according to statisticians A similar campaign has been launched this year through Red Cross chapters.

Season Opens For Big Game Hunting

Montgomery, Ala.,—That date on the hunters calendar with the big red circle around it arrives this month.

For the first time in Alabama's game regulated history one day—November 20—witnesses the opening of the hunting season on such prize game as quail, deer and turkeys.

The shattered shots that thus far have marked the squirrel and dove seasons in North Alabama and the abbreviated squirrel season in South Alabama will be supplanted by ear-splitting detonations as 75,000 to 100,000 hunters unlimber their heavier artillery on the bigger game.

This date likewise will raise the curtain on lesser lights as rails and gallinules and will open the 1936-37 season for taking fur-bearers for commercial purposes. The hunting season on bears, foxes, o'possums and raccoons has been open since October 1st.

For several years there has been a growing sentiment among the sportsmen of the State for a more uniform season on game and in South and Central Alabama for a delayed opening on those species whose mating season carry over into early fall.

The former was prompted by the belief that such a season would tend to reduce game law violations and the latter by a more propituous shooting season on squirrels and doves. As a consequence, North Alabama was permitted to shoot squirrels as early as October 15, while South Alabama did not start until November 1.

North Alabama also enjoyed an open season during September on doves but cannot resume dove shooting until December 20. In South Alabama, where the cry long has been no doves in September and no season in January, the season opens November 20 and runs until the end of January.

The new opening date of November 20 delays somewhat the start of the deer season, but establishes an earlier season on turkeys than heretofore. After that date, deer may be hunted in every county except Jefferson, Morgan, Winston, Lawrence, Franklin, Cullman and Walker, until December 31. The season is closed in Jefferson and in the other six a three-day deer season will be observed on December 17, 18 and 19.

The first half of the new turkey season extends from November 20 to December 31, and the second half from March 15 to April 15. Quail may be hunted from November 20 until April 20. The season on ducks, geese, brant, snipe and coot opens a little later on November 26, and will continue until Christmas Day.

The General Josiah Gorgas Chapter of the U. D. C., met at the home of Mrs. J. Alex Moore, last Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Moore and Mrs. F. W. Rogan as hostesses. After the regular business was attended to, Miss Rosa Wells gave a most interesting account of her trip to Mexico last summer, after which refreshments were served to twelve ladies.

Funds Needed For The Destitute

MANY GROUPS IN THE COUNTY HAVE ALREADY RESPONDED

In recent months the Department of Public Welfare has been calling your attention to the limited funds which are available for helping those in need and to the suffering which has been a result. Many groups in the county have responded in a commendable way. The Business and Professional Women's Club in Montevallo is taking a Thanksgiving offering of clothing which is to be distributed through Miss Brook, of the Sociology Department of Alabama College. Each Home Demonstration Club member is giving a quart of canned fruit or vegetables to be distributed through the Public Welfare Department to those families who are especially in need of fruits and vegetables in their diet. The Culture Club of Columbiana, the Unique Club of Vincent, and the Business and Professional Women's Club of Montevallo are assisting in crippled children's work.

The Columbiana school is preparing to make an offering of Christmas toys and the Vincent school is making a Thanksgiving offering.

The Department wishes to thank these and other groups for the services they are rendering. If there are other civic or religious groups considering special projects for Thanksgiving or Christmas, the Department will be glad to send a member of the staff to suggest the services which are most needed, or to aid such groups in the distribution of funds or commodiities which they may have available. The Department probably knows conditions in the county better than does the average layman and is in a position to make recommendations as to the wisest distribution of funds and commodities.

Food, clothing, and funds for medical attention are the crying needs.

The health survey, recently made by the Public Health and the Public Welfare Departments has shown that many school children are in need of glasses and tonsil operations. The situationi is serious and lamentable when children are deprived of the chance for an education because of a handicap which might be removed.

Annual Sophomore Dance Last Saturday

The annual Sophomore dance given in Main Assembly last Saturday night, was the high point in campus activity at Alabama College. Misses Anne Williams, Opelika, and Jean Watson, Georgiana, co-chairmen of the decorations committee, arranged for the theme of "Manhattan Serenade" featured in the decoration scheme. In West Parlor, a realistic Central Park, with its subways, trains and lamp posts was represented. Refreshments were served at an East side cabaret in East Parlor. Miss Doris Condon, president of the sophomore, led the dance with Forney Renfro, of Opelika. Miss Mabel Johnson, vice president, danced the lead out with Charles Locklin, of Montgomery. The dance featured three no-breaks and two lead-outs. Jimmy Hooper's Auburn Cavaliers furnished music. Chaperons for the dance were: Mrs. Reynolds, Miss Annie Kemp, Mrs. Mary M. McCoy, Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Harman, Dean and Mrs. T. H. Napier, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Dobbins, Miss Katherine Vickery, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Hood, Miss Josephine Eddy, Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Riddle, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Wills, and Dr. Minnie L. Steckel.

TRYOUT FOR ALABAMA COLLEGE DEBATING TEAM ON DECEMBER 1

At a meeting of debaters in Reynolds Hall Tuesday night, J. H. Henning, department coach, announced that tryouts for the Alabama College debating team will be held December 1. Appointed to direct debating groups were: Frances Foust, Cullman, Phyllis Poland, Mobile, Rachael Pettit, Canton, Ga., Ellen Farrish, Thomaston, Aileen Holley, Northport. The tryout will be in the form of five-minute talks on the affirmative or negative side.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Saturday, November 28, will be set aside in Shelby County as Achievement Day. Every member of the Home Demonstration Clubs of Shelby County is urged to be at the court house in Columbiana promptly at 10:00 o'clock. We will have a Christmas program, consisting of Christmas poems, stories, songs, candy demonstration, and an exhibit of Christmas gift suggestions.

You will be missing lots of interesting things as well as a good time so be here on time with your lunch.

"Henpecked Hero" To Be Presented

A three-act play to be given by the Jubilee Club at the Dogwood Schoolhouse Saturday evening, November 28, beginning at 7:30.

We assure you of two hours of clean, wholesome fun during which the plots become so involved that they fling the whole household and even family friends into a state of excitement and almost disaster. Your presence will be appreciated greatly. Admission is 10 cents and 20 cents.

The cast is as follows: Doris Darlett, a college student, also class poet, Myrtle Reach; Helen Hallmark, another college student, Margie Lovelady; Ted Slogan, football coach, Cheltz Blake; Bud Cedman, young athlete, Bill Langston; William Brown, a college professor, also the henpecked hero, Herman Peters; Iantha Brown, William's romantic young bride, Martha Carr; Mrs. Holden, the mother-in-law, Zella Vernon; Gabriel Botzky, a Russian count, Earlie Vernon; Lily Botzky, Gabriel's heartbroken sister, Eleanor Peters; Countess Kolmanoff, a widow, Jewell Harrison; Barker, a defective detective, Cecil Vernon.

CIVIC CLUB

The Montevallo Civic Club held its regular meeting Wednesday, November 18, at the Baptist Church. Dr. A. W. Vaughan, president of the club, presided.

The program committee announced plans for the next meeting, December 2, at which the club will be host to the football team of the Montevallo High School. This is an annual affair which has been given for the football boys for some time past.

The club voted to make the last meeting of the year its Ladies' Night entertainment, at which all club members will be expected to bring their ladies. A special committee for program and arrangements for this meeting was appointed, composed of Stanley Mahan, Dr. J. I. Riddle, and R. A. Reid, chairman.

The program of last Wednesday was presented to the club by the Town Council. Stanley Mahan called upon the Mayor, Dr. Chas. T. Acker, to present the speakers. The Mayor made some very impressive remarks about our public affairs prefacing the program, after which he presented Dr. Hallie Farmer, member of the Council, who is chairman of the Council Committee on Sanitation.

Dr. Farmer's talk was directed to a discussion of the Town's problems of sanitaiton, and revealed that it is indeed a problem which challenges the health and wellbeing of the community. Her explanation of how the use of Shoal Creek as a sewage disposal threatens our health was one of the striking points of her very able discussion.

Following Dr. Farmer, the Mayor presented Mr. C. G. Sharp. Council member and chairman of the Council Committee on Public Safety. Mr. Sharp's talk was very impressive, particularly his information on the subject of fire protection and the consequent effect of insurance rates. According to Mr. Sharp, our town is woefully lacking in the point of fire hydrants.

Mayor Acker concluded the program with some general remarks concerning the sincere efforts the Council has made to set up plans for the future to better conditions in Montevallo in Many ways. The whole program revealed that the Council has a positive determination to do its very best to improve the town's finances, sanitary conditions, streets, safety, etc. In these efforts they deserve the most hearty support of the citizenship. It is clear that much lies before us to be done, and the Council can not be expected to do it unless they have the support of the people in the Town.

MISS GENE LEWIS AT THE CHRISTMAS CARNIVAL

Miss Gene Lewis, Montevallo's representative as princess, is in Birmingham this week attending the many special events of the Christmas Carnival.

The time of two events in which Miss Lewis will participate is given here for the information of local people who may wish to attend:

The Grand Carnival Ball will be Friday night at the City Auditorium beginning at 8 o'clock.

The gorgeous and colorful street parade will be Saturday night beginning at 7:30.

TEA GIVEN AT HOME MANAGEMENT

The Freshmen Home Economics group of Alabama College, with the aid of Miss Nell Touchstone, of the Home Economics Department, entertained at a demonstration tea from 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesday. This group is studying various types of social usage.

Digest of Governor's Message to the Special Session of the Legislature

"Gentlemen of the Legislature:

"Each of us is here today because the people that sent us here had faith in us, 'faith that we have the heart to fill their need, the head to know and meet their need and the courage to do the needful.

"I reverently pray that each of us have faith in that people, even as that people had faith in us and may it be a living, acting for faith for 'faith without works is dead.'

"May Divine Providence direct us in meeting the needs of this hour.

"In the proclamation which convenes you, it is asserted that in my opinion an extraordinary occasion exists which demands this special sesion.

"Never in peace time has Alabama had more extraordinary demands for remedial legislation than now.

"We are confronted with a break down in our necessary functions of our state government.

HEALTH JEOPARDIZED

"The failure to pay the minimum appropriation of our health department jeopardizes the health and the very life of our people.

"We are paying only about 30 per cent of appropriations from the general fund. This limits the usefulness of every agency dependent upon that fund.

"Our county jails have some 400 insane, kept there because our state institution cannot take them. Under existing laws, the capacity of our state institution was increased around 30 per cent during my former administration, by a weekly allowance for upkeep which permitted that extension of plant. We still have plenty of law, but haven't the necessary money. For those pressing needs, we are met together today to do the needful.

"You and I put on the law book of Alabama appropriations that were to have been paid out of the general fund last year $12,468,772.33. On these appropriations there was paid only $7,490,080.03. We were $4,978,692.30 short of paying.

"We made appropriations to be paid out of that fund this year $12,013,386.88. Our best judgment is that the amount that will be paid thereon is $8,013,149.89 and that we will this year be $4,800,137.29 short of paying.

"Before making these appropriations they were studied item by item, long and carefully, were thoroughly discussed and fully understood. They were 30 per cent and more below the similar appropriation of four years ago. They were irreducible minimum. We knew then, and know now, they were a minimum to meet the then pressing needs, and they are still the minimum to meet that pressing need now.

"We made these appropriations deliberately, knowingly, and in good faith. Let us now have the good faith to pay them. We drew these checks, let's make them good. The obligation is ours. You voted for them and I approved them. Let's make good.

EFFICIENCY CITED

"Alabama is now conducting the most efficient fiscal administration in its history. I seek and welcome any and all suggestions of further economies.

"Let us clear some of the misinformation that is abroad in our land.

',Some have been made to believe that we have expended, last year $48,478,191.07. The truth is that the total disbursements of dollars by the

SOCIAL HOUR AT HOME OF DR. AND MRS. J. I. RIDDLE

Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Riddle entertained a number of friends Sunday afternon at their home. Those who enjoyed this delightful social gathering were: Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lewis, Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Reid, Mr. and Mrs. M. Ziolkowski, Dr. Kate Jackson, Miss Rosa Lee Jackson, and Miss Elizabeth England. Coffee and salad were served.

Dr. M. L. Orr, of Alabama College, participated in a Coosa County Teacher's Institute at Goodwater Saturday.

Miss Marguerite Gresham, freshman at Alabama College, spent the week end as guest of Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Reid.

Mrs. R. L. Tucker motored to Columbiana Friday afternnon.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Woolley, of Six Mile, were visitors here Saturday.

The monthly business meeting of the Methodist Missionary Society was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Church. Mrs. T. H. Napier led the devotional exercise. The department superintendents gave interesting reports.

Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Freeman, of Birmingham, visited Rev. and Mrs. O. R. Burns over the week end. Mrs. Freeman is a sister of Mrs. Burns.

The fire bug seems to be at large in Montevallo, as the Fire Department was called out twice this past week. Miss Olivia Lawson, of Alabama College, lost her car in a fire Sunday which demolished the garage. Also a woodpile caught on fire at the Kennerly's last week which gave them a great fright. A few weeks ago the Fire Department staged a mock fire on the lot adjacent to the Presbyterian Church. This attracted a large audience who were sure the church was on fire.

Members of the Fire Department are: Messrs. Brewer Carpenter, Pep Jeter, Inzer Reid, Phillip Arnold, John Rhodes, George McConnatha, A. E. Baumgartner, Cooper Shaw, S. M. Mahan, C. M. Gardner and W. M. Davis.

The Glee Club of Alabama College were presented in Decatur, Alabama, Wednesday night at the Riverside Auditorium. The Club comprises 27 members.

Mrs. Brewer Carpenter spent the week end in Selma.

Mr. and Mrs. James Holt Starling were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lewis Sunday.

Mr. C. D. Tatum, of Tatum Chevrolet Company, visited his family in Tuscaloosa over the week end.

Mrs. Riser will be remembered as Miss Myrtice Horn, daughter of Mrs. Lola Horn, of Montevallo, before her marriage to Mr. Riser.

'Gay Desperado' New Type Of Romance With Music

Something decidedly different in pictures with music comes to the Strand Theatre, Montevallo, when Pickford Lasky's "The Gay Desperado," begins a two-day engagement with Nino Martini, the great singing star of radio, opera and films in the title role, and Ida Lupino and Leo Carrillo in supporting parts.

A gay, colorful romance laid below the Rio Grande, this second offering of the newly formed Mary Pickford-Jesse L. Lasky Producing Company completely discards the usual backstage plot formula for pictures featuring famous songbirds and presents a thrill-packed action-filled, fast-moving film story.

The handsome Martini is said to give a great performance as the gay, swashbuckling Chivo, whose glorious voice causes him to be kidnaped by a Mexican bandit chieftain (Carrillo), who adopts American gangster methods, but is really a sentimental, music-loving fellow at heart.

Carrillo also kidnaps an American millionaire's weakling son, played by James Blakely, and his sweetheart, Ida Lupino. Determined to do the thing right, Carrillo calls in his idol of the American underworld, Public Enemy 3, to handle the ransom negotiations.

Martini and Ida Lupino fall in love and he manages to escape and effect the release of Blakely thru a radio plea directed straight at the heart of the sentimental Carrillo.

The music written especially for the film includes "The World Is Mine Tonight," written by Holt Marvel and George Posford, and "Adois Mi Tierra," by Miguel Sandoval.

The highlight of the operatic music is the Verdi aria, "Celeste Aida." Martini also sings three famous Mexican songs, "Cielite Lindo," "Lamento Gitano," and "Estrellita."

"The Gay Desperado" is an original story by Leo Birinski. Rouben Mamoulian directed from a screen play by Wallace Smith. The film is released by United Artists.

COUNTY CHAMPIONS

The Montevallo High School team scored a smashing victory over a strong Columbiana team last Wednesday. The final score wound up with Montevallo on the top, 18-0.

For the first time this season Montevallo went in there scrapping from the time the first whistle blew until the last one. Montevallo kicked off to Columbiana, who failed to go anywhere. Then Montevallo proceeded to march to glory. "Red" Confer finally carried the ball over for the tally. Hartley's drop-kick was wide. The next touchdown came in the second quarter. Montevallo had the ball in mid-field when Harrison bucked the center of the line and got into the clear. Lee paved the way for Harrison after he got into the clear with some beautiful blocking. Hartley's try again failed. In the third quarter Harrison again broke into the clear, this time from a crossbuck, and from there he reversed his field, scored Montevallo's third and final touchdown. The extra point again failed.

Frank Martin, Columbiana's flashy halfback, was not up to par because of an injury he received when tackled by Comer early in the game. Montevallo also had Columbiana's passes bottled pretty well.

Though the rivalry between the two teams is great, there always exists a very friendly feeling between the two teams, and it was a good clean game.

1936 TEAM THE BEST

The 1936 M. H. S. football team has the best record, to date, of any of the M. H. S. teams. They came out with 7 wins, 1 lose and 1 tie. On top of that, Montevallo captured the Shelby County penant from Columbiana yesterday.

Score by quarters:

WORKERS GET PENSION SLIPS

WINANT HAILS MOVE AS NEW DAY FOR AMERICA

Washington — A gigantic new government machine speeded up today as postmen carried 26,000,000 workers applications for Social Security Board's old-age pension accounts.

The enrollment was hailed as marking "a new day in America" with John G. Winant, chairman of the board.

"It is a day," he said, "which the workers of America will look back upon as inaugurating a new-found confidence in meeting the needs of an earned retirement."

To the large and small employers of the millions of eligible workers, postmen carried the cards on which employes must apply for registration.

When the employes have answered the 15 questions on the "application for account number"—giving name, address, birthdate, father's and mother's names, sex, color and similar identifying facts—the cards will be returned to the meshwork of new machinery set up to handle the old-age retirement job.

The card may be returned through the employer, a labor union, the postman, or by mailing it, postage free, to "Postmaster Local." All cards should be in by December 5.

The government later will send to each employe an identifying card, which Winant describes as "much like an insurance identifying card."

The money for the pensions will be obtained from taxes on wages and payrolls. Pensions, payable when a person reaches 65 and retires, will range from $10 to $85 per month, depending upon the worker's earnings from January 1st, 1937, to his sixty fifth birthday.

"Should he die before he is 65," the Security Board said, "a lump sum amounting to 3½ per cent of his earnings will be given to his family."

David Lindsey Chapter Met Tuesday

The David Lindsey Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution met with Mrs. A. W. Vaughan last Tuesday evening. Eleven members were present. The chapter is happy to welcome Mrs. O. R. Burns as a new member. She is transferring from the Dadeville chapter. After the business session two interesting papers were given. Mrs. Vaughan discussed home and community life of the colonial period in the northern colonies, and Mrs. Coleman discussed life in the Southern colonies. Following these papers was an interesting informal discussion of the program subject by various members. Mrs. Vaughan was assisted by her daughter, Miss Lanice Vaughan, in serving a delightful salad plate.

Shelby Couple Given Title 'Master Farmer'

The title of "Master Farmer" was bestowed upon five Alabama couples in Auburn on November 17. Mr. and Mrs. Olin Riser, of Alpine, were among the chosen few. They were presented with a gold medal and Master Farmer certificate, by Dr. L. N. Duncan, President of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, and Dr. Clarence Poe, of Raleigh, N. C., who is president of the Progressive - Farmer - Ruralist. The 1936 master farmers raise more than one cash crop, follow a live-at-home program, build up the fertility of the soil and improve their homes and home surroundings.

The five master farmers were selected from a large group of nominees throughout the state, score cards being filled out by county and district agents of the Alabama Extension Service and Representatives of the Progressive-Farmer-Ruralist.

Liquor Regulation and Gross Receipts Tax Given Approval of Chief Executive

SPECIAL EMPHASIS ON THE NEEDS OF EDUCATION AND HEALTH

Montgomery, Ala. — Governor Graves issued his formal call for the November 23 special Legislature session Saturday and asked for adtitional taxation and regulation of the manufacture of whiskey, wine and beer through a state referendum.

Handing copies of his call to newspaper men, the Governor said: "The call speaks for itself. I have no comment to make on it."

The text of his call follows:

"Whereas, in the opinion of the governor of the state of Alabama an extra occasion exists which demands the convening of the Legislature of Alabama in extraordineary session as prescribed by section 122 of the constitution of Alabama of 1901.

"Now, therefore, I, Bibb Graves, as governor of the state of Alabama, do hereby proclaim and direct that the Legislature of the state of Alabama convene in extraordinary session at the seat of government in Montgomery, Alabama, at 12 noon Monday, the 23rd day of November, and I do hereby designate the following subjects and matters to be considered and acted upon by the Legislature in extraordinary session assembled:

"1. To revise the revenue laws and to provide additional revenue for the schools and enable the state, county, and city governments to function adequately.

"2. To provide for the payment of all educational activities, experimental and extension services, out of the Alabama special educational trust fund, and to relieve the general fund of all such payments.

3. To provide an appropriation from the general fund to take care of any deficit in the social educational trust fund.

"4. To provide for the exemption of state and ad valorem taxes on homesteads as defined by the constitution and the laws of the state of Alabama.

"5. To set up a 'property tax relief fund' and reduce state ad valorem taxes.

"6. To regulate the manufacture and sale of spiritous, vinous and malt beverages through state-owned and operated stores or other state supervision and to provide for a referendum thereon to the electors of Alabama."

College Glee Club On Extensive Trip

Twenty-eight members of the Alabama College Glee Club left Montevallo Wednesday on a fall trip which will take them into six North Alabama cities.

Wednesday night the Glee Club will be presented in a concert at the Cullman County High School. The second concert will be given in Decatur, Thursday before the Parent-Teachers' Music Club. On Friday, the Glee Club will present a program of sacred music at the Methodist Church in Hartselle. Italy and Germany Recognize Insurgent Regime in Spain—Anti-Communist Pact Angers Russia—Tugwell Resigns—President on Unemployment.

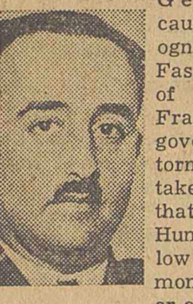
By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.



Gen. Franco

MUSSOLINI and Hitler threw Europe into spasms of alarm by suddenly calling into session the ministerial councils of Italy and Germany and causing them to recognize formally the Fascist government of Gen. Francisco Franco as the legal government of war-torn Spain. It was taken for granted that Austria and Hungary would follow suit. Maj. Ramon Franco, brother of the Spanish insurgent chieftain, had been in Rome and probably informed Il Duce that the general, whose attacks on Madrid were meeting with unexpected resistance, might lose the war unless he were given active support by the nations that sympathized with his cause. Mussolini and Hitler did not immediately announce that they would quit the international agreement for intervention in Spain, but it was believed they would soon be shipping munitions to Franco's armies. They withdrew their diplomatic representatives from Madrid and arranged to send others to the rebel government.

Great Britain and Russia were stunned by the action of the two dictators and cabinet meetings were hurriedly called. The British are determined not to be drawn into the Communist-Fascist conflict but they believe that Italy and Germany, especially the former, have designs in the Mediterranean that would peril Britain's seaway to the Orient and are preparing to meet any such threat. Russia's reaction was awaited breathlessly, and the soviet government was being provoked still further by the fact that General Franco declared a blockade of the port of Barcelona, capital of the almost independent province of Catalonia. This move certainly was made to stop the landing of munitions and food from Russia destined for the Spanish loyalist forces. England, France and other nations were greatly concerned over the blockade, for the port is largely used by their shipping. The Spanish rebels have created a strongly fortified port at Palma on the island of Mallorca that can be used as a base for bombardment of Barcelona from the sea. Blockading vessels may be supplied by Portugal, which warned neutral shipping to avoid the Barcelona port, though Lisbon had not yet formally recognized Franco's government.

An almost humorous note came from Geneva where League of Nations observers asserted that the Italo - German recognition of the Spanish insurgents violated Article 10 of the covenant which demands that league members respect "territorial integrity and the existing political independence of all members of the league." They seem to have forgotten how the league abandoned Manchuria to Japan and Ethiopia to Italy not so long ago.

The Italian grand council, with Mussolini presiding, voted to support the Duce's policies by giving him more airplanes, more guns, more warships and more men. It was frankly stated that the reason for this was the threatening international situation. Italian opinion was that if France joined Russia in aiding the formation of a radical Spanish government with its capital at Barcelona—in event that Madrid fell to the Fascists—there would be great danger of general war.

COMPLICATING the already complex European situation and directly threatening war is the alleged fact that Germany and Japan have united to fight the spread of communism, and that their pact is expected to be adhered to by Italy and perhaps various central European nations. This is of course directed mainly against soviet Russia, and Moscow is actively aware of the menace. It is understood that the agreement provides that Germany and Japan shall keep strong military forces in East Prussia and Manchukuo respectively; that the two nations shall exchange military information and orders, and that in certain contingencies Germany shall supply Japan with war materials.

An immediate source of friction between Germany and Russia is the arrest of 23 Germans in Moscow and Leningrad under charges of plotting to steal secret military information, to wreck industrial plants and to kill government leaders. Berlin protested the arrests but the soviet officials replied that all formalities governing such cases had been observed and that several of the prisoners had confessed their guilt. The German propaganda ministry said the story of the German-Japanese agreement, which came from Moscow, was a "periodic lie" which this time was intended to sidetrack German protests against the arrests.

THAT sea level ship canal across Florida from the Atlantic to the Gulf, condemned by the army engineers' board as not justified, started by the New Deal and stopped when congress refused to appropriate more funds, probably will now be pushed on to completion. The army engineers, having been asked by the President for a revisory report, have submitted one holding that the project would be justified "in the public interest"—an absolute reversal of opinion. The board also found that the canal would cost only $162,985,000, instead of $223,440,000, as estimated on December 30, 1933, when material costs were substantially lower than they now are. So far the sum of $5,400,000 has been spent on the project.

R. G. Tugwell

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL, known as the No. 1 braintruster, has resigned from his post as undersecretary of agriculture and resettlement administrator and accepted the executive vice presidency of the American Molasses company, of which another braintruster, Charles W. Taussig, is president, and a third, A. A. Berle, Jr., is a director. In accepting the resignation the President wrote to Mr. Tugwell: "Later on I fully expect to ask you to come back to render additional service." Mr. Tugwell will serve on a special committee of 38 just appointed by the President to study the farm tenancy problem. The new resettlement administrator is W. W. Alexander, who has been first assistant.

John G. Winant, who resigned as head of the social security board to take part in the Presidential election campaign, has resumed that position at the urgent request of Mr. Roosevelt and is directing the big task of enrolling the future old age pensioners.

SAILING from Charleston aboard the cruiser Indianapolis for Buenos Aires and the Pan-American peace conference, President Roosevelt directed the release of a statement in which he announced that the government will continue to spend money on a work relief program until July 1, 1938 at least. It is estimated that congress will be asked to appropriate as much as $1,500,000,000 for relief in the next session.

Although he professed himself gratified at the inroads upon unemployment by industry, the President commented upon the fact that private business has not yet absorbed vast masses of the unemployed and that millions of persons remain on the Works Progress administration pay roll and other governmental agencies.

Mr. Roosevelt declared it was "widely known" that many of the largest industries will not hire workers over forty years of age. To a large extent, he charged, this policy is responsible for the relatively large number of older workers on relief. And industry must expand opportunities for the hiring of unskilled workers, he said.

The mayors of the United States, in annual conference in Washington, were gratified by assurances from both Harold Ickes, head of the PWA, and Harry Hopkins, head of the WPA, that the administration will not cease its spending efforts to keep alive the emergency organizations intended to deal with the unemployment problem.

"I am convinced," Ickes said, "that the PWA should be made a permanent agency of government. It will expire June 30 next. On that date, many projects will not be completed. Necessarily, a law should be passed giving time within which to complete the tasks already undertaken."

Hopkins predicted the 1929 level of production would be reached next year. "Yet the end of our troubles seems a long way off," he remarked. "There were about 1,800,000 unemployed even at the 1929 peak, but next year, with the same volume of production, carefully prepared estimates indicate that there will still be some 6½ to 7½ millions unemployed."

FOR more than ten years the American government has been building monuments of the World war on French and Belgian battlefields and memorial chapels in the eight American military cemeteries in France, Belgium and England. This work is now completed and the American Battle Monuments commission, of which General Pershing is chairman, recommends that the structures be dedicated next July, twenty years after America's entry into the war. The approval of the President and congress is required.

Era of Good Feeling

Washington.—There is an "era of good feeling" going the rounds that is quite different than anything we have had since early in 1929. It is being promoted with a great deal of enthusiasm and present results as well as indications justify the promotion work that is going on in the New Deal press agent circles.

This era of good feeling is quite an interesting thing from another angle, namely, politics. It is being used by the politicians again to establish President Roosevelt in the same situation as he found himself at the beginning of his first term in the White House. I am afraid he is being built up again as a superman and, in politics, a superman or his position is hard to maintain in the public mind.

Business also is indulging in this era of good feeling. Business always puts its best foot forward, just as lovers do. It wants to develop a spirit of good will on the part of the public and it wants to show its financial backers how things are coming along all hunky-dory. There is nothing wrong in the attitude. It is perfectly logical and human—and it is very interesting to see this wave of healthy feeling grow.

The important, as well as the interesting, thing about this era of good feeling is that to the expert students it shows a gradual, if not conclusive, decline in depression conditions. It proves that things are on the up grade—not that they are at the top yet, but that a momentum is being established which may carry the economic recovery to the top if the federal government settles down and treats business with fairness.

As I said above, New Deal press agents are promoting this business recovery for all that it is worth. Naturally, they are attributing it to the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt as the basic factor in this upward surge of business. They are capitalizing it to the fullest because by so capitalizing it, the political party in power gets its due share of credit. There is no doubt that they will continue on this course because everyone likes to read or hear about improved business conditions, restoration of dividend payments, increasing volume of traffic, any and all things that show the nation is slowly but surely getting back on its economic feet.

While the New Dealers are shouting from the housetops how President Roosevelt has accomplished all of these things, there comes a discordant note from business itself. Business leaders, just like politicians, want credit for whatever is accomplished, whether they are responsible or someone else. They do not care any more than politicians whether the credit properly is theirs. It is simply an exposition of the vain, glorious trait that seems to exist in nearly everyone.

* * *

Whose the Credit

Business is seeking to show that it is pulling itself together, opening new factories, raising wages, in spite of New Deal policies with the handicaps that some of those policies include. So, business is seeking to counterbalance the politicians and the politicians, speaking through New Deal press statements, are trying to fortify their own position as saviors of the country. Neither one is correct. Without doing too much debunking, I believe it ought to be said that President Roosevelt and his associates have executed some government policies that have been helpful to the business structure. With equal frankness, it ought to be said that business leaders have taken the bull by the horns and have proceeded to help materially in putting commerce and industry back on the right track again. Neither one ought to take too much credit. Some credit is due each but neither one nor both together is entitled to claim all of the credit for the recovery of business that is now underway.

The answer to the upward swing of business lies chiefly in the fact that the depression has worn itself out. It would have worn itself out just the same whether the administration was New Deal or Republican. It would have accomplished just as much in the way of expanded buying power and increased production whether Mr. Roosevelt was re-elected or whether he had been defeated and Governor Landon of Kansas had been elected at the end of the recent national campaign.

I am reminded by this discussion of a remark that the late Eugene Black made while he was governor of the Federal reserve board. On that occasion I asked him whether there were signs of the end of the depression. His reply was, "not yet." He added, however, that the depression would destroy itself as every other depression in history had done and that when this point of exhaustion had been reached, commerce and industry would take an upward swing. Then, he added with reference to some of the economic students of the administration in power: "It will wear itself out and good times will come back again—and every doggone professor and economic theorist in the world will try to claim credit for it."

So, I think it can be said without equivocation that if anybody or anything is entitled to credit for the indicated recovery movement, we had better be fair and admit it was a combination of circumstances, not the least of which was the natural law of supply and demand. It seems utterly silly to me for any individuals or groups of individuals to attempt to corral all of the praise.

Wage Increases

Those who have access to the market pages of the great metropolitan daily newspapers must have been impressed by the rapid fire announcements coming from big industrial corporations of wage increases, bonuses for employees and melon cutting in the form of dividends for the shareholders. They must have been impressed, likewise, with the sharp rise in security prices that obviously has reflected the expanded business and increased earnings.

A prosperous nation may not always be a happy one but there is a certain psychology about a prosperous nation that makes it carefree. It is a psychology that makes the average man and woman forget to a large extent about the recent pinch of economic displacements and, as well, those same people are inclined to disregard and give no consideration to the morrow.

Let us look into those circumstances. When corporations or other forms of business have reasonable years in their particular lines, early in the winter they begin to see what the year's total will be. They can figure rather accurately what the returns will be in the last two months, say, after they have made their totals for the first ten months of the year. So, whenever they reach that stage in a reasonably successful year they can make their plans for distribution of the profits.

Now, we have a tremendously high tax rate on corporation surpluses and we have rather high tax rates on incomes of individuals. Corporations and other businesses, therefore, start figuring how to do the best they can with the earnings of the year. Some of them determine that their employees should share substantially in the profits of their labors; others want to distribute as much of these earnings as they may to their stockholders because such a showing creates a demand in the market for their shares and such a demand is influential in establishment of the corporation's credit for borrowing money if it needs to borrow from the banks. In either event, corporation managements obviously give considerations to the tax the corporation would have to pay and I think it is not a matter of condemnation for them to turn over as much of their profit as they can to those interested in the business instead of to a government which wastes so much.

To be perfectly fair, it must be said that the money now being distributed either in dividends or in bonuses to workers or in wage increases was earned before the recent election. Its distribution, however, is motivated largely on prospects for the future. In other words, those responsible for these distributions of earnings feel that they can let that money out of their hands. They may not be distributing all of the sums available but the "era of good feeling" is accepted by all of them as indicating the chances for continued earnings are bright.

* * *

How It Works Out

I have merely touched on the effect of distribution of earnings among the holders of capital. It is just as important to consider the effect of distribution of these earnings on the laboring classes. Labor has been convinced under the American system for many years that it is entitled to some share of the profits from its products. Employers are taking that same view to a greater extent than anywhere else in the world. When labor gets bonuses or gets increases in its pay, there is a reaction among those workers who have sound judgment that prompts them to do the best they can on their jobs. That is to say, they become contented workers and they are less susceptible to the propaganda of radicals who seek to promote strikes and labor disturbances to further the ends of communism. That is a part of the era of good feeling as much as the added earnings of corporations or the enthusiasm of politicians over victory.

End of the Treaty
Millions for New Farms
Too Many Apologies
The Mirror Monocle

Arthur Brisbane

Chancellor Hitler has demolished the remaining fragments of the Versailles treaty, notifying the great powers that they may no longer control, as they have done since 1918, the principal rivers of Germany.

The Rhine, Elbe, Oder and Danube rivers, within German territory, now return to German control and France is content to ask other powers to join a protest. Mere protests amount to little in European diplomacy, as the world learned from the Ethiopian war.

That settles, finally, the Versailles treaty, a foolish effort to enslave a nation that made the emergence of this, or some other, Hitler inevitable.

Mr. Tugwell seeks an appropriation of five hundred million dollars to provide poverty - stricken farmers, now on worthless farms, with other land that will support them; also barns, houses, out-buildings. He thinks $50,000,000 a year for ten years would do the work, and plans to vacate 9,000,000 "worthless acres."

Anything that will diminish human misery is desirable, even though incompetency may be in part responsible for the trouble.

In England, the government, guided by experts, is making excellent pasture lands of soil that was worthless. Our government might investigate that process.

General Markham, chief army engineer, advises putting an air base in the harbor of our Midway island, far away in the Pacific ocean. The War Department says, apologetically, that this would be a commercial development, although it might be useful for defense.

Why an apology? Nobody in Europe, Asia or Africa apologizes to us for building an air base, or asks our opinion about it.

The War department says there is no treaty obligation forbidding such an air base. If there were, what of it? Treaties can be cancelled, and should be when they are foolish or unjust—for further details, ask Hitler.

Germans are said to be wearing a new eyeglass called a "spy monocle." Arranged to look like the ordinary single eyeglass, the "spy monocle" is arranged with a mirror, permitting the wearer to look behind him and see if there is anybody listening to his conversation. German police eagerly discourage any one who suggests that the Nazi government is not perfect.

The opening of the Bay bridge, connecting San Francisco and Oakland, California, is important not only to California and the two united cities, but to the whole country.

This magnificent bridge, eliminating ferries on the bay that separates San Francisco and Oakland, is a magnificent accomplishment of engineering and public spirit.

Mr. Green's American Federation of Labor decides on a "fight to a showdown" with Mr. Lewis' "Committee for Industrial Organization," which wants to unionize all the 30,000,000 workers not yet organized, and seems to include taking over Mr. Green and his federation also.

Next on the program appears to be a big labor fight: Mr. Green is thoughtful, wise; Mr. Lewis is forceful, determined. The outcome cannot be predicted. The outside citizen will pray that there may not be too much interference with returning prosperity.

A greatly increased demand for tools shows that more men are getting jobs, and announcements of new wage increases, big and little, are many. Twenty-three more firms have announced better wages for 28,000 more workers.

An average increase of $130 a year, less than 50 cents a day, might seem unimportant, but it means one hundred and thirty million more dollars that 1,000,000 workers will have to spend, in a year. That is not unimportant.

England intends next time to devote her energy and strength to protecting herself.

Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, says England has no "commitments" like those of 1914, that would compel her to send troops to the continent if war should start. She will do as she pleases, which means that she will probably stay at home, busy with enemy airplanes, perhaps helping to finance friends on the continent, as she did in the Napoleonic wars, as she did before and since.

NEVER was a girl more excited over her first trip to New York than Olivia de Haviland was. For years she had dreamt of taking the trip from her home town (Saratoga, Calif.) but she had always supposed that she and her mother and sister would make it in a car, stopping everywhere, seeing everything.

Naturally, she had no idea that some day she would take it by plane because, as a motion picture actress, she couldn't be spared from the studio long enough to drive!

But that's the way she finally did it. And the thing she liked most was the view of Tennessee from the air in the very early morning. She had a grand time in New York. Her latest picture, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," had just been released, and the critics had raved about her beauty, as they always do.

Mary Pickford

Of course, Mary Pickford's plans aren't really exciting news any more, but all this autumn newspaper editors in the East have been spurred into action by the rumor that Miss Pickford and Buddy Rogers were being married that night. And when it was learned that she was on her way to New York, supposedly to dispose of her United Artists holdings, marry Mr. Rogers and sail for Europe, a lot of people sighed with relief. If only she'd get married and end that story once and forever, they exclaimed, it would be a blessing.

Clark Gable is to have the coveted role of the hero of "Idiots' Delight," when the play is transferred to the screen. Alfred Lunt, the very talented actor, has been doing it on the stage for some time, with his wife, Lynn Fontanne, playing opposite him, and the play is so successful that a staggering price was paid for the screen rights.

Greta Garbo may have new competition in the person of Tamara Desni, a foreign importation who arrived in this country recently. Korda, who is responsible for so many of the good English films, hails her as a great discovery. You'll be able to judge her possibilities for yourself if you see "Fire Over England."

There has been a lot of speculation about whether Randolph Scott's bride would live in Hollywood or not. Most of her interests, (except her husband) center in her country place in Virginia; it's said that she tried to persuade him to abandon Hollywood and live there, but he refused.

Now she's consented to try Hollywood, but if she doesn't like it she'll return to Virginia, and the marriage will develop into one of those long-distance ones.

If you find that sports events are being broadcast much better than they ever have been before, you can thank Red Barber for the improvement. He went to New York from the Middle West to help announce the World Series; and after his first appearance on the air the inner circles of the broadcasting business were running around in circles applauding his performance. Without any doubt he was the tops, so far as that type of broadcasting was concerned. Time has proved that he's just as good when it's football that he is talking about.

William Powell

—1—

The events to be related began upon a certain afternoon and early evening when Doctor Greeding became for almost the first time in his life furiously angry. Call these events coincidence; yet it is permissible to suggest that if human passions be supposed sometimes to have a force of their own, so that a violent emotion in one individual may without any physical action on his part project itself and impact upon other individuals, then these occurrences will fall into an ordered pattern.

Doctor Greeding's own experience had persuaded him that incidents do occur, and conditions do arise, for which there can be no natural explanation. Certain episides in his life, certain unique traits which he recognized in himself had long since convinced him of this.

Thus his sense of smell was far more acute than normal. If he came into an empty room, he knew instantly who had last passed through that room. In the same way, perhaps from a peculiarity of structure which his oculist early remarked, he could see with some precision in the dark. Incidentally, his eyes sometimes shone like those of an animal; and Mrs. Greeding might be startled, when they both awoke at night, to see her husband's eyes thus gleaming.

Doctor Greeding cultivated these unusual capacities—taking care, for instance, not to smoke, lest he blur his sense of smell; but this was a matter as much of inclination as of choice, for he had a dog's distaste for tobacco. Mrs. Greeding, and his daughter Nancy, respected this feeling on his part. Mrs. Greeding never smoked at all, Nancy never when she was near him.

But he had other gifts not so definitely physical. For instance, he sometimes knew what a person was about to say before the word was uttered. Or when he approached a street-corner, or a closed door, he might find himself perfectly sure that when he turned the corner, or opened the door, he would discover a certain person or scene.

Also, he had had occasionally the experience of wishing very much that something entirely out of the ordinary run of expectation would happen—and having the wished-for event occur. But this he attributed to his luck. Doctor Greeding was in fact a child of good fortune. Life ran well for him. He had married, with the deliberate intention of furthering his career, the girl he chose; and their life together had been all that he had hoped. He had desired one child, a daughter; Nancy was their only child. He had sought material and professional success, and found it.

And in other ways, in the small incidents of daily life, luck was likely to break in his direction. His mother—she was a simple woman—once told him that he had been born under a caul. "So you'll always be lucky," she explained . . .

The thing began with Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business man near Doctor Greeding's own age, whose life the Doctor had saved by a difficult operation. From that day, as a not unnatural consequence, their friendship had steadily deepened.

Today Jerrell had telephoned Dr. Greeding and made an appointment to lunch with him, at their club. During the luncheon they spoke of casual matters. Afterward, Jerrell started to light a cigar, then hesitated.

"Light it, Ira," the Doctor bade him, smiling. "The window's open; and if any tobacco can be tolerable to a sensitive nose, it is yours."

So Jerrell scratched a match. He was a man physically fit, lean and hard. His thick hair contributed to the youthfulness of his appearance; but there were betraying lines at the corners of his mouth. He said, after a moment, quietly:

"I want to have a talk with you, Ned—about Nancy." There was a slow color in his cheeks.

The Doctor nodded. "Yes, I know."

Jerrell looked at him curiously. "How can you know?" he asked. Doctor Greeding only smiled, and Jerrell said: "Ned, I always have a feeling, in talking with you, that you know what I'm going to say. You're a curiously understanding man." He chuckled. "I should not like to try to keep a business secret from you."

"If I could read your mind, I'd have been able to retire long ago," Doctor Greeding remarked.

"You don't—speculate, do you?" Jerrell inquired. He had never invited the other to participate in any business affair.

Greeding shook his head. "No. At least, I never have. I'm naturally cautious, and—it hasn't been necessary.

Jerrell finally spoke again.

"Well, you're right, Ned," he said. "It is about Nancy. . . . She's a beautiful, a lovely girl."

"Why, yes," Doctor Greeding smilingly assented, rather amused at the other's indirection. "I think so."

"Ned," he said, "here it is, in words of one syllable: If—well, I should like to marry Nancy."

Doctor Greeding's heart quickened its beat; but he held his tongue. Jerrell went on, hurriedly.

"Of course, I haven't spoken to her," Jerrell explained. "It seemed to me that under the circumstances I ought first to come to you—my old friend, and Nancy's father."

And he continued: "I see quite clearly the difficulties in the way. I am twenty years older than she is, twenty-two or -three years older. That is an obstacle. Then I have known her, as a child and as a young woman, for years; but she has thought of me as an old man—who grew older—for as long. That is another obstacle. There may be still others. It may be that she is—in love with some one her own age; and it may be that even if she were not, you and Mrs. Greeding would object to her marrying me, either because I'm so much older, or for some other reason."

He hesitated, and when Doctor Greeding still held silent, he went on:

"I don't want to—distress her, if she—already loves some one else, some youngster her own age. And I don't want to embarrass you or Mrs. Greeding, by putting you in the position of opposing her marriage to me."

He hesitated, said then: "That's the situation, Ned. What do you think?"

After a moment Doctor Greeding chuckled. "Well, Ira," he said, "I can't pretend to be—surprised. I've not been blind to your new interest in Nancy in these recent months. Mrs. Greeding has told me some things about your visit with them in Georgia." He added calmly: "And Nancy's fine. I should have been more surprised if you had failed to discover the fact."

He went on, thoughtfully: "Nancy has friends, of course—boys her own age. A girl of twenty-two is very much a young woman; but a boy of that age is still a boy. She has a troop of these youngsters at her heels most of the time; but no one of them more often than the others." He smiled. "I feel sure the field is open," he said.

"How about you? And Mrs. Greeding" Jerrell asked bluntly.

The Doctor hesitated, then went on: "The difference in your ages may seem to her an obstacle, as you say. She may feel it a barrier too great to be surmounted. On that point, I cannot speak. That is for Nancy to decide."

Jerrell said simply:

"Of course, in the last analysis. But would you and Mrs. Greeding—"

The Doctor met the other man's eyes straightforwardly. "I know you pretty well, Ira," he replied. "If Nancy loved you and wished to marry you, Mrs. Greeding and I would be—gratified."

Jerrell chuckled with a quick, youthful pleasure; but he sobered then, and he said gratefully:

"Thanks, Ned. I appreciate your attitude." And after a moment he added: "I— love Nancy, Ned. And I'm not so old as my years. I've lived decently, taken care of myself. I believe—if she came to love me—I could make her happy.'

Doctor Greeding nodded. "I know as much about you—physically—as you know yourself." He was proud of his tone. It was dispassionate and calm, with no hint in it of the excitement he felt.

Jerrell colored. There was always in him something deeply likable. He said awkwardly:

"I know this is an old-fashioned proceeding, my speaking first to you . . . And I don't want to be rebuffed. Are you sure she is—free?"

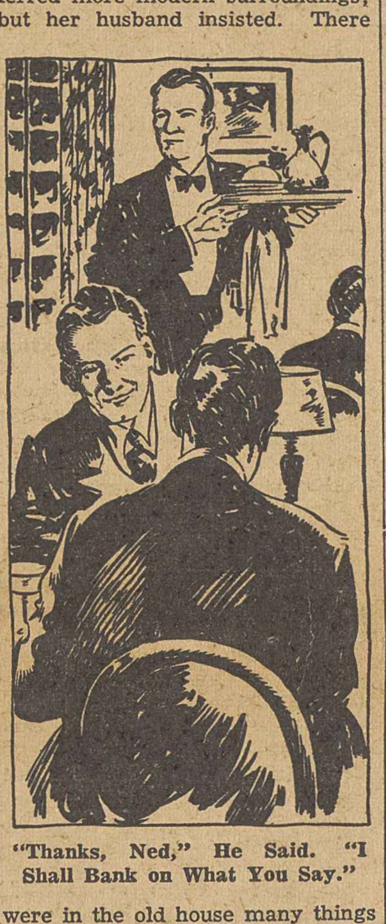
"Perfectly sure," Doctor Greeding promised. "I have her confidence. If there were anyone, I would surely know."

Jerrell smiled, and his eyes lighted. "Thanks, Ned," he said. "I shall bank on what you say."

Doctor Greeding drove back up town in a complacent triumph. He had no least misgiving of what was to come . . . Edward Greeding was the only son of a Maine farmer. Even as a boy on the farm, he revealed some unique and unusual quality; and his mother's pride furnished a driving motive force. By his own labors he put himself through Bowdoin and afterward through Harvard Medical school, where he ranked second in his class.

By the time he had finished his hospital work, both his father and mother were dead. In Cambridge he had learned to value the atmosphere of dignity and pride which surrounded some of the fine old houses there. In one of them—that of Doctor Bendon—he was a welcomed visitor; and he shrewdly decided that if Myra Bendon were his wife, his career would begin under good auspices. He wooed the girl—she was a little taller than he, plain and awkward, not beset by suitors—and won her. Later, when Doctor Bendon died, Doctor and Mrs. Greeding came to live in the old house that had been built by her great-grandfather a hundred years before.

Mrs. Greeding would have preferred more modern surroundings; but her husband insisted. There were in the old house many things—furniture, silverware and the like—which had been old and fine when the house was new; and Doctor Greeding had a keen appreciation of these possessions. He took pride in them, took pride in having achieved them. But Mrs. Greeding kept the old things from a sense of duty. There were a few things—a vase, a modern painting or the like—which she had bought and against the Doctor's protests insisted on keeping; and her own dressing-room, her particular domain, was decorated and furnished in a modernistic vein.



"Thanks, Ned," He Said. "I Shall Bank on What You Say."

The house stood on half an acre of well-landscaped grounds, with a fine bay hedge in front, and flowers, and a pool where goldfish swam, and a tennis court. The tennis court was at one side, and the wire screen designed to catch stray balls was itself overgrown by vines, so that the court was hidden from the eye of anyone not actually within the enclosure.

This afternoon—it was a day in May, when spring was already full blown, and the sun was warm—and only a little while after Doctor Greeding had assured Jerrell that Nancy was heart-free, the girl was playing tennis with Dan Carlisle. This young man was an assistant professor of economics in the university, and his book on the business cycle had already won respectful notice and was used as a text in the business school. He telephoned Nancy soon after lunch; asked whether she were free. She told him, eagerly, to come; and at a little before three he arrived to find her driving balls against the batterboard at the end of the court.

Doctor Greeding did not suspect that those great plans he had for Nancy were guessed by half the world; but they were not as secret as he supposed. Thus when Dan arrived, he peered through the gate in the screen around the court, and hissed sharply. Nancy heard, and called, "Oh, hello!" and she came swiftly toward him.

"Sh-h-h!" he warned her, finger on his lips; and he looked right and left, cautiously. "Are we alone?" he whispered.

"Idiot!" she laughed. "Yes, of course. Mother's gone to play bridge—won't be home till late."

"Ah!" Dan sighed contentedly. "And your father won't, either. So it's perfectly safe for me to show myself!"

"Don't be silly, Dan," Nancy indignantly protested. "You're not exactly an outcast, you know."

He insisted with mock gravity: "Indigent instructor plays clandestine tennis with daughter of wealth and beauty." He shook his head. "That's bad," he said.

Nancy cried, half-irritated: "Just for that, I shall beat you!" She spun her racket. "Rough or smooth?"

"Rough," said Dan; and the racket fell.

"Smooth," she announced triumphantly. "I'll take the serve!"

So Dan stripped off his sweater and crossed to the farther court, and Nancy's racket rose and swung in a free full circle. The ball clipped the line, went untouched into the backstop.

"Weren't you ready?" she called.

"Sorry," he confessed with a grin. "You ought to wear a veil or something, Nancy, or black your teeth! How can a man keep his eye on the ball?"

"You'd better watch this one!" she retorted, her cheeks bright, and served again. But the ball came back, low and fast on her backhand, and at her feet; and thereafter Dan managed to keep his attention on the game.

Yet—inattention might have been forgiven him. Nancy was slender, with loose dark hair; and she wore one of those scant tennis costumes calculated to permit the greatest possible freedom of movement, with no sleeves, and a skirt which even in repose scarce reached the knee. Her bare legs were golden brown from three months of southern sun, and her arms and throat were the color of honey. Dan thought her like that classic figure of Diana with the stag. Her movements were liquid and effortless; her body flowed through a succession of postures, each beautifully composed, like a fine work of art, which the eye recorded and remembered.

Dan himself was no work of art. He was taller than Nancy, but so broad of shoulder and heavy of leg that he seemed short and almost chunky. He moved about the court with a robust zest and a reckless waste of energy. His stroke seemed awkward, but had a surprising efficiency and power. Nancy had learned her tennis in a good school, and played easily and well; and she did in fact win that first set from him, though by sheer stubborn persistence he carried it thrice to deuce.

But in the second set his superior pace began to tell; the balls he hit had a steam behind them which when they struck her racket communicated the shock to her hand, to her wrist and arm. Little by little, her returns began to drift faintly to the right of the spot where she aimed them; she made errors. He broke her serve . . .

"Golly, Nancy," he protested, "you're blazing! Too hot?"

"Of course not!" She laughed at him. "You're no iceberg, yourself," she retorted. "You're red as beef! It makes me hot just to look at you."

Deepest Known Lake Is Located in East Siberia

The deepest known lake in the world is Lake Baikal, in East Siberia. It is the sixth largest lake in the world and the greatest fresh water basin in Eurasia. The length is about 412 miles and the width varies from 15 to 47 miles. The surface area nearly equals that of Switzerland. The deepest sounding has been 4,073 feet and the average for the entire lake is 2,307 feet. In proportion to area it contains the largest volume of water of any lake in the world, containing approximately the same amount of water as the Baltic sea and the Kattegat strait, although their surfaces together are 12 times greater.

Ancient Mayas Kept Thanksgiving Day

When football fans turn out for the Thanksgiving games they will perhaps realize that they are conforming with an old American custom, but do they know how old that custom is? asks a writer in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

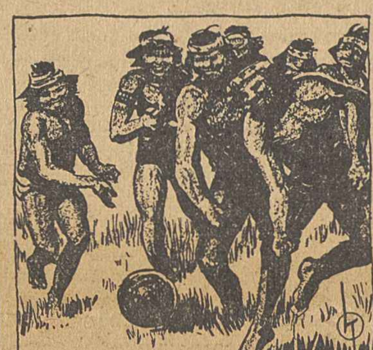
Thanksgiving football games were instituted in America about 2000 B. C. The custom began among the ancient Mayas, who, although they did not eat mince pie or sit in concrete stadiums, did dine on turkey and did set aside a day on which they offered up the first fruits of the harvest season, feasted and played, or watched a ball game in a stone-walled enclosure.

The department of middle American research at Tulane university has discovered that the Mayan games were like ours in many respects. Just as fans today travel for miles to see the Thanksgiving games, so did our predecessors on this continent journey across the land, on foot or horseback, to Chichen-Itza, holy city of the Mayas, to view the holiday spectacle.

In his description of the Mayan game, Maurice Reis, on the staff of the department of middle American research at Tulane, says:

"As it began when Rome ruled the waves and Frenchmen wore bear skins as their Sunday best, football wasn't just football. That is, the ball wasn't kicked with the foot and the scores were produced by persuading the ball to pass through a perpendicular ring high on a stone wall."

When the thousands of pilgrims who came every year arrived at Chichen-Itza, they offered sacrifices to the earth gods in an impressive thanksgiving ceremony led by the ruler.



The Ball Wasn't Kicked With the Foot in That Game.

"The earth gods," says Alredo Barrera Vasquez, of the staffs of the Mexican National Museum and the National University of Mexico, who is of Maya descent, "are called the Four Bacabs and are represented as supporting the four corners of the earth. Each god has an appropriate color: red for the east where the sun rises, black for the west where it sinks into darkness, yellow for the warm south and white for the cold north. Yum K'ax, Lord of the Forest, resides at the center of the universe and is characterized by the colors blue and green."

The Thanksgiving ceremonies still take place in some parts of Mexico today, although most of the old customs are dominated by the Catholic influence.

The name of the principal god of the harvest is lost. However, we have many representations of him on ancient monuments. He is always depicted as being young and handsome, symbolic of life and growth. From his head grows maize instead of hair.

"The Man Who-o-o"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A CANDIDATE "ANNOUNCES"

On THE morning of April 4, 1900, the New York World printed what has been described as "one of the most curious announcements of a presidential candidacy ever made, one of the most naive declarations ever given out by any man who had even the briefest parts in American politics."

Admiral George Dewey, the "Hero of Manila," had given an interview in which he said in part: "If the American people want me for this high office, I shall be only too willing to serve them . . . Since studying this subject I am convinced that the office of the President is not such a very difficult one to fill, his duties being mainly to execute the laws of Congress. Should I be chosen for this exalted position I would execute the laws of Congress as faithfully as I have always executed the orders of my superior."

"Not such a difficult office to fill," indeed! That was a jolt to the hero-worshiping American public. Already it had begun to suspect that its idol had feet of clay. It had gone wild over his victory in the Philippines. Upon his return to America, it gave him the reception such as few conquering heroes had. It had built a triumphal arch in his honor in New York and had raised money to buy a house in Washington for him. Not long after his return, he had taken a second wife who was much younger than he was and he had deeded the gift house to her. That didn't sit so well with his worshipers, nor did the social ambitions of his new wife. Moreover, a matter of religious prejudice was injected into the gossip about the Deweys.

Dewey had been approached on the subject of being a candidate for President and had disclaimed any such ambition. But a "Stop Bryan!" element in the Democratic party had persisted in promoting his candidacy and at last he yielded to the temptation.

Then he made his amazing announcement and the public immediately turned against him. Where he had been previously praised, he was now ridiculed. His candidacy was generally characterized as the "climax to a series of unfortunate mistakes." As quickly as that candidacy had blossomed, it withered. America apparently would elect a military hero President, as witness William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor and Ulysses S. Grant. But, as for a naval hero,—George Dewey was the first, and so far, the last, to find out that a sea dog isn't wanted in the White House!

A STURDY CAMPAIGNER

THERE is a physical side to this business of campaigning for the presidency.

In the earlier days, candidates went personally into the hinterlands, making, not one-night stands but brief pauses interrupted to move on to a newer and perhaps more fertile field. It was a tremendous strain on them physically.

Today, with improved travel accommodations and the help of radio, campaigning is not the arduous task of former years, but it has its moments.

William Jennings Bryan, torch bearer of extraordinary record in politics, doubtless is the man who proved the sturdiest campaigner of them all. And even he almost broke down.

Bryan was physically fit and energetic when he first stumped the country in 1896, bearing his cross of gold. He insisted on patronizing the local trains, riding in the day coaches at the outset of his tour.

In that campaign, Bryan delivered as many as 20 speeches a day, a great part of them from the rear of his slow-moving train. In Tennessee, his throat began to balk. When this was known, many curatives were pressed upon him. One bottle of a remedy for hoarseness was tasted by Benton McMillen of Tennessee and found to contain a caustic fluid which might have injured Bryan permanently.

It was toward the end of that campaign that Bryan began to approach exhaustion. He had completed a three-days' series of speeches in Chicago. Despite his splendid physique, the strain began to tell. He was scheduled to travel north of Chicago when his "loop" engagements were ended. But so trying had been the requirements of his tour that it was necessary to delay the start of the party for more than two hours.

Course of Lightning

The main flash of lightning does not travel from a cloud to the earth, but in the opposite direction. The main flash is always preceded by a "leader", which acts as a sort of pathfinder or trail blazer. The "pathfinder" travels from the cloud to the earth, while the main flash starts upward from the earth at the point struck by the "leader". It follows eactly the same path back to the cloud. The length of the lightning bolt has been found to vary from 1.5 to 4.7 miles.

REPRESENTATIVE ELLIS

Shelby's new representative, Hon. L. H. Ellis maintains his former recognition as one of the leaders in Alabama's legislature.

On the first day of the Special Session this week, Mr. Ellis introduced in the House the adminis tration's one and one-half per cent gross sales tax bill, designed and put forward as the main revenue measure for relief of the educational emergency of the state.

The record of leadership established by Mr. Ellis when he was in the Senate marked him as one with ability to direct important legislative matters. His present program will be followed with much interest by his friends in the state and more particularly in his home county of Shelby.

There may be a fight on the tax bill, but Handy Ellis will be "at the quilting."

RADICAL MEASURES WERE DEFEATED

An encouraging phase of the late election was the conservative spirit shown by the voters of various states in voting down radical and unsound measures.

The states of Oregon and Washington present a case in point. In both these states, the Federal government has undertaken great government- financed, hydroelectric developments — one at Grand Coulee, Washington and the other at Bonneville, Oregon. There has long been agitation to put the states into the power business on their own hook, and the private utilities serving the area have been subjected to malicious, unfair and unreasoned denunciation of political groups.

On November 3, the voters of Washington and Oregon were called upon to pass on measures which in one way or another, would have created districts and opened the way for bonding the people to construct publicly owned electric plants. These measures were defeated by extremely heavy majorities.

In other states, similar bills were likewise met with decisive "Nos" by the electorate. There was a wide spread general tendency to turn thumbs down on socialistic measures which would have put states into business at the expense of the already tax-groggy tax payers and private businesses.

The socialistic dream of government ownership of business is not held by the American people when they face it as a definite issue. Whatever their political allegiance, they are essentially opposed to limiting their oportunities as individuals. That speaks volumes for wisdom of the electorate.

A NEW ALABAMA WEEKLY PUBLICATION

The first issue of "Alabama, the News Magazine of the Deep South," will go on sale Friday in 132 Alabama towns and cities, it was announced today.

The new weekly journal is to be edited and published by Hubert Baughn and William Huie, both former members of the Birmingham Post Editorial staff. It is to feature state news of general interest, with a "militantly independent" editorial policy.

Printed on machine-finished paper with a striking two-color cover, the magazine will also carry pictures gathered from all sections of the state, as well as articles written by a group of contributing editors.

Mr. Baughn, 41, is known through out the state for his hard-hitting interpretations of political news. Before his association with The Post, he was connected with The Atlanta Journal, The Birmingham Age-Herald, and for five years was Washington correspondent for the Frederick I. Thompson papers in Alabama.

Mr. Huie, 26, is a graduate of the University of Alabama, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and for the past three years has covered general assignments over the state for The Post.

Editorial offices of the new publication are at 941 Martin Building, Birmingham. The Birmingham Publishing Company is to do the printing.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY DIVIDENDS ARE PAYABLE

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 19.—Quarterly dividends were declared today by the Board of Directors of Alabama Power Company on its $6 and $7 preferred stock, payable January 2, 1937 to stockholders of record December 12, 1936. These dividends amount to approximately $552,000.

At the same time it was stated that the regular quarterly dividends upon the $5 preferred stock payable February 1, 1937, will be considered and are expected to be declared at a meeting of the Board of Directors to be held in January 1937. These dividends will amount to $33,000.

Economic Highlights

A major political party can survive a long period of defeat of its Presidential candidates — as the Democratic Party, which did not get even close to control of the White House in 1920, 1924 and 1928, so vividly demonstrates today.

But can a major party survive an election in which its officeholders —who are the sole source of the patronage that is so vital to any political machine—are reduced to the lowest number in history?

That question is now being considered privately by Republican leaders—and publicly by practically all of the country's publicists and political columnists.

Under the American elective system, a party can receive a respectable popular vote and still be out in the cold when the time comes for calling the roll in Congress, State legislatures and municipal councils. That is what happened to Republicans in the debacle of 1936. Governor Landon polled around 37 per cent of the popular vote — yet received only 1 1-2 per cent of the Electoral College vote. Republican candidates throughout the country polled about 17,000,000 votes as against 27,000,000 for the Democrats —yet they were victorious in only a microscopic proportion of the contests.

Best example of this is the House of Representatives. It was universally conceded, before November 3, that the Republicans would make gains, irrespective of who won the presidency. Democratic spokesmen said hopefully that these gains would not amount to more than 20 or 30 seats, while Republicans claimed their gain would amount to more than 100 seats. Non- partisan commentators placed Republicans at 40 to 50 seats.

Actual result was startling. Instead of gaining seats, the Republicans lost 15. Instead of losing seats the Democrats gained 13. Farmer labor candidates gained 2.

In the Senate, it was mathematically impossible for the Republicans to achieve control, but everyone thought they would have a better showing next Congress than last. Result: The G. O. P. lost 6 seats. The Democrats gained 5. The discrepancy of one is explained by the reelection of Senator Norris on an Independent ticket.

Worst of all, a number of the remaining Republican senators belong to the "Progressive Bloc" which is bitterly opposed to Hoover, Landon, Hamilton and other leaders.

The next Congress, then, will answer the roll as follows: Democrats in the House, 334; Republicans, 89; Democrats in the Senate, 75; Republicans, 17.

Also vitally important to any party are Governorships—a great deal of the patronage that keeps political machines well oiled and members contented flows from statehouses. Here again the Republicans made the worst showing in their long history. There were 33 Gubernatorial chairs to be filled —and Democrats won 27 of them. This gives the Democratic party 39 State Chief Executives.

So the party that received the largest vote ever accorded a losing ticket, almost got nowhere in representation in high offices. (Complete figures for county and municipal elections are not obtainable, but the Democratic sweep was overwhelming.) Leaders of the party thus say with some just,ice, that our elective system is unfair to minorities. On the other hand, Democratic spokesmen say the Roosevelt victory is important not only because of the majorities attained, but because it extended to every section of the country and broke down long-established lines of partisan sympathy.

To get back to the original question, can the Republicans come back? Their party heads say they will. Among non-partisan commentators opinion is that the party has a good chance to come back—but that considerable reorganization must take place, a new and aggressive program must be adopted, and new faces must replace familiar ones in party councils. One leading Republican, Senator Fish, of New York, has already demanded that present party heads resign.

What will happen remains to be seen. The hard fact is that no major party ever was at so low a state as the G. O. P. is at present —the Democrats, in their hungriest days always had a large representation in Congress, governorships, state legislatures ,municipal councils, etc. But politics is a surprising game—and the unprecedented can always occur. One guess as to what will happen to the two-party system in the next four years is as good as another.

Father Coughlin, of the Union for Social Justice, promised before the election that if his candidate, William Lemke, did not poll 9,000,000, votes, he would goo off the air. Father Coughlin is now off the air, Mr. Lemke having polled only about 500,000 votes.

Never did minor candidates—Prohibitionists, Communists, Socialists, etc.—make a worse showing. In post-war history, the only third party leader to make a strong showing was Senator LaFollette who polled over 4,500,000 votes in 1924.

THANKSGIVING

Harvest! Ah! Yes—the time of year when the farmer, his wife and facily, can view the past year's efforts with satisfaction. At this time one forgets the hard days of toil and the dim days of defeat that have gone into making the harvest preparation possible.

When the fields have brought forth plenty, cellars are groaning with fullness, and pantry shelves are strutting with colors that range from the dark of the blackberry to the light yellow of the plum for the pudding—there is a supreme satisfaction about it all. Farm people most of all should be thankful. "For harvest is the earth's answer to those who have tended it and tilled it. Harvest is the benediction of broad fields, the gratitude of the garden and the supreme tenderness of the trees."

Farm people are not the only ones who experience aching moments of weariness. Men who work at desks know them and so do women who work at desks. There are tasks in every life that seem unprofitable and unspired at the time of their doing. All of us must travel grim roads that seemingly without a purpose lead up hill. But every task, no matter how small or how great, must have a time of completion. People who work at desks do not always have as much to show for their work as do farmers. No one ever worked harder for a harvest than did the farmer—Pilgrims for the first Thanksgiving. The depression through which we struggle would have been mere child's play for them. Failure, famine, stood on the right and left and cold and bitterness hovered all around. Their depression came coated in war paint and with poison arrows which they actually shot.

It was a great day when they used a feast to transform their enemies into friends. We sometimes forget to invite our friends to feast with us, much less our enemies.

It is true that we have made great progress since that time in the scientific world and along material lines. Have we progressed in proportion with our spirit of neighborliness?

FARM ELECTRIFICATION

The private utility industry is doing everything possible to advance the cause of farm electrification— in spite of politically-minded critics who would like to see the government take over electric operation and development.

Following figures are illuminating:

On September 4, 1935, a private southern utility inaugurated a planned schedule of 849 miles of rural line construction. A year later, it had built 882 miles of line, and had 232 more miles of line underway.

This company serves 4,280 rural customers within the state. In the construction, labor from local communities was employed to dig the holes clear the rights-of-way and similar jobs. Local electrifications found employment in wiring the homes and dealers in towns in the area sold the materials for wiring, fixtures and appliances.

The materials used by the utility in its construction program were purchased from dealers and manufacturers within the State.

This program was carried on by a private utility using private capital. It was not subsidized by the government, and it is not tax-free as are government plants—instead it pays gigantic sums in taxes. It has no Federal credit or securities behind it which amount to a lien against all the earnings of all the people. It is subject to state regulation, and so is not like government plants of the TVA type, which demand exemption from regulation and are controlled only by the whims of Federal politicians and officeholders.

This farm electrification illustration is cited as an example of a trend that is nation-wide. In a score of states private utilities are advancing farm electrification on a sound, economic and business-like basis, to the advantage of all concerned, and in spite of a socialistic political power program to hamper them.

MRS. LILLIE P. LOGAN

Mrs. Lillie P. Logan died at her home at Wilton on Thursday last following an extended illness. The deceased is survived by her husband, Mr. J. Felan Logan. Other immediate survivors are: Two daughters, Misses Jean and Mary Leonard Logan of Wilton; three brothers, Judge W. L. Pratt of Centreville, W. C., and L. C. Pratt of Bibb County; Mrs. W. A. Harvey and Mrs. F. F. Crowe of Montevallo, and Mrs. Green of Birmingham.

Funeral services were conducted at the home on Friday with Rev. A. B. Camant officiating, and interment followed in the family burial plot near Blocton.

COTTON REPORT

There were 6,204 bales of cotton ginned in Shelby County from the crop of 1936 prior to November 14, as compared with 5,584 bales ginned to November 14, crop of 1935.

GIRL SCOUTS

Girl Scouts are laughing at the idea that winter weather can drive them indoors. Their organization lists one hundred permanent camps throughout the country, that remain open all the year round and many more girls would use them if experienced older campers could be found as leaders.

DO YOU KNOW—

1. The body temperature of a bird.
2. The one thing that distinguishes a bird from all other animals?
3. How many eggs a pigeon lays for a "sitting?"
4. Some birds do not build a nest of their own?
5. Bread mold is a low form of plant life?
6. A cock roach is one of the oldest insects?

One thousand Indian girls in seventeen states are now registered members of the Girl Scout organization. While the fifty-seven Indian troopers range from Connecticutt to California, thirty are in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arizona, which, with Texas, make up the Girl Scout Cactus Region. John Collier, U. S. Commissioner of Indian Affairs, actively promotes the Girl Scout program in government schools, since it is in line with the modern official policy of providing Indians with the practical help that will enable them to lead happy lives among their own people. Many Indians are in troops with white girls, and go to the white girl's camps.

ANSWERS—

1. The body temperature of a bird is from 100 to 110 degrees F.
2. Birds are the only animals having feathers.
3. The pigeon lays, commonly, only two eggs for a "sitting."
4. The cowbird lays its eggs in the nests of other birds.
5. Bread mold is a close relative of the yeast plant.
6. Relatives of the cockroach were on this earth when the dinosaurs were rampant.

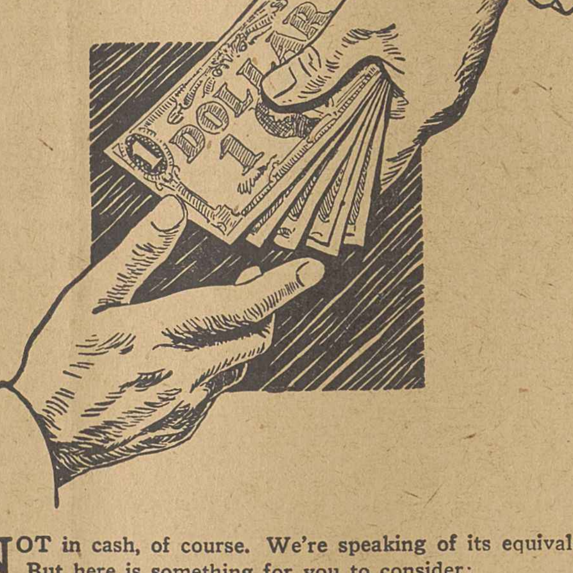
May we give you six dollars?



NOT in cash, of course. We're speaking of its equivalent. But here is something for you to consider:

Every year this newspaper brings you at least three outstanding novels in serial form. Purchased as books each would cost not less than $2, making a total expenditure of at least $6 per year.

Like yourself, we could find plenty of uses for that $6. Some member of the family is always in need of a new pair of shoes or some other necessity. But at the same time your requirements for good reading material must be met. By accepting these three novels each year we feel you are treating yourself to real enjoyment, at the same time giving your purse a substantial boost.

These novels are a source of constant pride to us. Every year we select them from the season's most outstanding best sellers, offered in serial form by a large newspaper syndicate organization. We'd like to feel that you—as a subscriber—always look forward to reading the coming installment in the next issue. It gives us a great satisfaction to know that here is another reason why our paper is popular in the home.

You are invited to begin reading our novels now. These regular brief visits to fictionland will prove a delightful interlude from your work-a-day activities. And it will make us happy to know that you are getting enjoyment from them.

A new Serial Story, "Deputy of the Devil" begins in this issue of The TIMES

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

On Sunday, Nvember 29, at the eleven o'clock worship service, Rev. Cox will bring a message on "Christian Liberty." In these days, when personal liberty is being impaired by governmental and social enactment, it behooves us to consider the glorious promise of the twenty-first verse of the eighth chapter of Romans. A special vocal selection will be rendered by Miss Edith Dees.

Following the morning worship service there will be a meeting of the Congregation, by order of the Session, for the purpose of ratifying the settlement of the will of Miss Selina B. Sommerville and for consideration of any other matter demanding congregational attention

Everyone is reminded of the meetings of the Church School, with Prof. W. J. Kennerly presiding, and the Christian Endeavor Society, convening at 9:45 a.m. and 6:45 p. m., respectively. A large gathering is expected at both meetings.

Mrs. Murray W. Fancher and sons, Murray Conner and Allen Prude, left Wednesday for Elba, Alabama, where they will visit relatives and friends.

Two Engine Sizes - One Wheelbase

AND A NEW LOW PRICE

THE New Ford V-8 for 1937 is the most beautiful Ford car ever offered. It is built in only one size—one standard of roomy comfort and modern appearance. But you may have either the improved 85-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum performance—or the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum economy. The smaller engine makes possible a lighter car — lower operating costs — and a lower price.

When you drive the 1937 Ford with the 85-horsepower V-8 engine, you are master of a power plant that gives everything you can possibly demand in speed and acceleration. Today, improved carburetion enables it to deliver its thrilling performance with unusually low gasoline consumption.

The new 60-horsepower V-type 8-cylinder engine delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness—even at speeds up to 70 miles an hour—with gasoline mileage so high that it creates an entirely new standard of economy in modern motor car operation.

We invite you to see this new Ford car, and arrange to drive one equipped with the engine that fits your needs.

AUTHORIZED FORD FINANCE PLANS
$25 a month, after usual down-payment, buys any model 1937 Ford V-8 Car —from any Ford dealer—anywhere in the United States. Ask your Ford dealer about the easy payment plans of the Universal Credit Company.

FEATURES

APPEARANCE — A newly designed car. Headlamps recessed in fender aprons. Modern lid-type hood hinged at the back. Larger luggage space. Spare tire enclosed within body. Completely new interiors. Slanting V-type windshield opens in all closed cars.

COMFORT AND QUIET—A big, roomy car. Extra space is in the body, not taken up by the engine under the hood. Comfort of the Center-Poise Ride further increased by smoother action of the long-tapering springs, with new pressure lubrication. New methods of mounting body and engine make this a quieter car.

SAFETY

BRAKES — New Easy-Action Safety Brakes, of the cable and conduit control type. "The safety of steel from pedal to wheel." Self-energizing—car momentum is used to help apply the brakes. Tests show that about one-third less pedal pressure is required to stop the car.

BODY—Not an ounce of wood used for structural strength. Frame structure all steel, sheathed with steel panels—top, sides and floor. All are welded into a single steel unit of great strength. Safety Glass all around at no extra charge.

Ben Ames Williams writes 'Deputy of the Devil'

Fiendish were his plans . . . cunning were his methods. But Dr. Greeding, the man whose strange powers held sway over friend and foe alike, could not combat the stronger power of love that was destined to ruin his plan!

You'll read with amazement how a series of foreshadowed incidents gave this deputy of the devil his supreme confidence . . . and later you'll read with satisfaction how that confidence was shattered by a force stronger than hate.

The deputy of the devil became a man again; his very soul at last rebelled against the tortuous path in which it was being driven!

Red Cross Nurses Combat Disease on Wide Front

At the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, there were 673 Red Cross nurses bettering health conditions and caring for the sick in 604 communities. These Red Cross public health nurses cared for a total of 233,616 persons during the year and made more than a million visits on their behalf.

The annual report of the American Red Cross states further that these nurses cooperated with doctors in examining 671,057 school and pre-school children, with 342,361 physical defects found and curative treatment arranged in 209,080 cases.

In 979 Red Cross chapters 1,733 graduate nurses taught Red Cross home hygiene and care of the sick, issuing certificates to 53,126 persons completing the courses. In addition, 1,777 Red Cross reserve nurses were called upon during the year for disaster and epidemic control work.

Membership in the American Red Cross last year showed an increase of 299,695. A total of 4,137,636 men and women enrolled, their dollars enabling the expanding Red Cross program of service to be carried forward at full strength. An increased membership is sought this year at Roll Call time, November 11 to 26, to meet the increasing demands upon the organization during 1937.

MEN'S BROTHERHOOD CLASS

Dr. A. W. Vaughan, of the Alabama College faculty, will be the speaker at the Men's Brotherhood Class at the Strand Theatre next Sunday.

The class meets at 10 a.m., and all men of the community are invited and urged to be on time.

Miss Lucy Hood and Miss Sadie Weir attended "The Great Waltz" at the Municial Auditorium in Birmingham Monday night.

Mrs. George Craig and Mrs. W. B. Reynolds were visitors in Birmingham Monday.

Mrs. Harlan Russell had as her guest last week end, Mrs. Rowena McDuffey, of Montgomery.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Mrs. Jack Holcombe (nee Cora Lee Harris), was honored with a miscellaneous shower Tuesday atternoon, November 17, from 2 to 4 o'clock, by Mesdames Walter Howell, Milton Bridges and Arthur Holcombe, at the home of Mrs. J. C. Rogers.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were received by the honoree, after which refreshments were served by Mrs. Howell, Mrs. Milton Bridges, Mrs. Arthur Holcombe, Mattie Knowles, Mary Sue and Mildred Holcombe to the following:

Mesdames Ezikel Eddings, Dock Johnson, W. C. Underwood, E. L. Garrett, Lela Douglas, Anna Frost, Callie Frost, Jessie Sorrell, Earl Swinford, Ollie Taff, Charlie Knowles, Thelma Knowles, Mamie Holcombe, Lois Russell, Florence Pate, Gladys Allen, Jessie Lawley, Dean Brasher, Mabel Dinwiddie, Jennie Brasher, Evelyn Wyatt, Fred Johnson, Hazel Rogers, Milton Bridges, Walter Howell, Arthur Holcombe and Messrs. Monty Lee Lovelady, Geraldine Lawley, Margaret Burgin, Mary Sue Holcombe and Mildred Holcombe.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Albert Gill, prominent Mobile sportsman and member of the State Conservation Board, has been elected president of the Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo Association, succeeding the late L. G. Adams, of Mobile.

Mr. Gill was elected at a meeting of the Rodeo Board in Mobile. At the same time, the Board named Sam Brandwein, first vice president, R. L. Bidez, second vice president, and re-elected Sam Lackland, secretary and treasurer. All reside in Mobile.

Pending the election of a permanent head, Mr. Gill served as chairman of the executive committee of five, which directed preparations for the record-breaking 1936 rodeo held last August 17,18 and 19. The other members of the committee were Pat Byrne, John Shaw, Mr. Bidez and Mr. Lackland.

Observing the Sabbath

One Sunday morning a sturdy "auld Hielander" and his son were walking to kirk over the Scotch moors. After a long silence that seemed to the laddie unendurable, he remarked, "It's a fine day, faither."

No answer.

They walked on another two miles in silence. "It's a fine day, faither," repeated the boy.

"And it's not the day to remark aboot it, Sandy," said the father severely.

Goal Posts Belong to Winning Team, Coast Judge Rules

CUTUPS can now go to work on the goal posts without fear of tangling with the law. A California judge has ruled in a test case that, legally and morally, the posts belong to the winning team. . . Gil Dobie, highly acclaimed for his excellent Boston College coaching, says that Temple is the second best team he has viewed in five years. First place goes to the 1935 Princetons. . . Incidentally, Princeton, once famed for punt blocking proclivities, is one of the few Eastern elevens to fail to block one this year. . . Dallas fans are imploring home town sports writers to forget the famous Fordham boomerang pass and start boosting. Southern Methodist for the Rose Bowl. They claim that the Mustangs are even better now than they were twelve months ago.

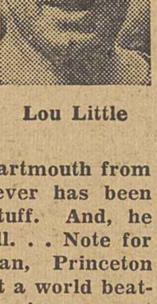
If you hear Harvard's players blasting Old Roscoe and Young Sam, don't jump too quickly to conclusions. They merely will be popping off about the blocking and tackling dummies upon which they must daily exercise. Archie Soucek, Navy end, has plenty of precedent to aid him when he leaps to snare a pass. Three other Souceks, all from the same family, previously have been in the Navy air service.

Add gents to keep an eye on. . . Porter Tull, who was brought up from the scrubs at the start of the season and has missed only twenty-seven minutes at center in Tulane's six games since then. He backs up the line like a Ticknor or a Tony Siano. . . Add sophomores who will bear watching—Ed Aldrico of T. C. U. The Texans claim that he is so good that they already have forgotten Darrell Lester, who brought All-America fame to the Horned Frogs for the past two years. . . Also note the 183-pound Tony Calvelli of Stanford, who played guard at prep school and started October as a center. Since then he has become a back in the Bobby Grayson tradition. Which means that he is a great plunger, even better defensively, and set some sort of record by completing six straight passes in the U. S. C. contest.

Zeke Williams, the gray-haired end who tackles so savagely for U. S. C., is a brother-in-law of Ken Carpenter, Olympic discus notable . . . In 1913 the University of Florida opened the season by defeating Southern College, 144 to 0. On the following Saturday Auburn licked Florida, 5 to 0. . . Yale Bowl was designed in such a fashion that, at 3 p. m. on November 15 of each year the sun shines across the short axis of the field. Thus neither team is handicapped by having sunlight in its eyes. . . Jock Sutherland of Pitt leads the nation's coaches in miles traveled while fidgeting on the bench in the midst of a tight game . . . Because he claims he was misquoted after the Notre Dame game last fall, Gar Davidson, ordinarily a most affable young man, now is the hardest of all coaches to interview.

Recalling When Grid Game Was Really Rough

Lou Little always laughs when people sigh about how rough the game has become. According to the ringmaster of the Lions, there never was a season to compare with 1919. The players were older, eligibility rules were lax and football was a pretty tame business for those fellows who had participated in the recent European pastime of war. Little says the 20-19 game won by Dartmouth from Penn that season never has been equaled for rough stuff. And, he adds, it's just as well. . . Note for next year: Hinchman, Princeton Frosh halfback, is not a world beating ball carrier. but he is an expert passer and reminds you of Mike Miles on blocking and defensive assignments. The boy, incidentally, comes from a sport family. His brother was All-America at Ohio State several seasons ago and his Daddy is the Hinchman who played big-time baseball and scouted for the Pirates.



Lou Little

Mid-Western letter writers are touting Ken Nelson, Illini end, as the best punt blocker in recent semesters. The one he blocked for the winning touchdown against Michigan was his seventh in three years of varsity competition.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy — "milk of magnesia" — many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

Deux Fruit Salad

When you stew the prunes, add an inch-thick stick of cinnamon and three or four whole cloves. Cook the fruit until tender but not the least bit soft and mushy. When cool remove pits, leaving the prune as whole as possible. Peel apples, cut in quarters and remove cores. Then cut in thin slices. Dip apple slices in mayonnaise and then into crumbled Roquefort cheese. Dip prepared prunes into mayonnaise and then into grated yellow cheese. Arrange on individual salad plates on leaves of crisp lettuce.

Cost of Average Home

The average value of residential buildings, exclusive of apartment houses, in the United States is $4,778, according to the Census Bureau. The average rental is $27.15 a month, with 12,351,549 families paying rent. This figure does not include renters of farms.

Slightly more than 25 per cent of the renters in the country pay monthly rents of from $30 to $50; 21 per cent, $10 to $20; 12.7 per cent, less than $10; 12.2 per cent, $50 to $75, and 4.8 per cent more than $75. Four per cent of the families pay $200 or more a month rentals.—Detroit News.

Now Ease Neuritis Pains Fast

Bayer Tablets Dissolve Almost Instantly

In 2 seconds by stop watch, a genuine BAYER Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. What happens in this glass . . . happens in your stomach.

For Amazingly Quick Relief Get Genuine Bayer Aspirin

Hence — when you take a real Bayer Aspirin tablet it starts to dissolve almost as quickly as you swallow it. And thus is ready to start working almost instantly . . . headaches, neuralgia and neuritis pains start easing almost at once.

That's why millions never ask for aspirin by the name aspirin alone when they buy, but always say "BAYER ASPIRIN" and see that they get it.

Try it. You'll say it's marvelous.

Most Ancient India Is Revealed in Chanhu-daro Ruins

Trade City Uncovered by Archeologists

AMERICAN archeologists have unearthed a buried city in India showing more vividly than ever before what the most ancient civilization of India was like. The ruins, found under mounds of earth at Chanhu-daro, northwestern India, date back five thousand years in their oldest era.

Chanhu-daro had homes of burnt brick, and the brick was just about like modern brick in size. The houses had bathrooms and drains that are pronounced superior to the sanitary arrangements in cities of other civilizations of their time. The people were industrious at many lines of skilled labor. They made toys for children of cities around the country. They were workers in bronze and copper. They turned out quantities of beads, making some so tiny that forty to an inch could be strung, and boring holes so fine that nothing coarser than a hair would thread these beads.

As Chanhu-daro was on a trade route, the goods of the city were dispatched by ox-load or pedler's pack to other, distant cities.

It Had Great Floods.

The picture of a trade town of ancient India, as old as the famous ruined city of Mohenjo-daro, is the result of excavation by two institutions, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the American School of Indic and Iranian Studies. It is only within three years that the Indian government has changed its law, to permit outside universities and archeological organizations to dig in this region.

The Indus valley, where Chanhu-daro stood, had its trouble with floods, like Ur of the Chaldees and many another ancient town. The field director of the expedition, Ernest Mackay, finds that at least three great floods attacked the city. After such a flood, the people were forced to leave the place entirely, and in some sequences of the city's history debris pile over the abandoned ruins before settlers came to rebuild.

After the Harappa culture, as the oldest civilization at this site is named, there followed a people of about 2000 B. C. who lived in matting houses, and had only rough paving under their feet. These people made great quantities of pottery which archeologists hope will shed more light on the migraions and trade relations of their era.

Gas From Fruit Skins Stops Potato Growth

WASHINGTON.—The skins of ripe apples, pears and hawthorn fruits produce a gas that keeps potatoes from growing, Dr. O. H. Elmer of the United States Department of Agriculture has found.

Doctor Elmer measured a large number of the effects that this gas, produced by the living skin of sound apples, has on potatoes. He found that the respiration of the potato was speeded up, and consequently the activity of all the other processes directly connected with the potatoes' respiration was also increased.

Sufficient concentration of the gas stops potatoes from sprouting, and keeps them well preserved for long periods of time, the experiments show. Chemical investigation disclosed that the unknown gas was ethylene, the gas used in carbide lamps. Interestingly enough, this gas has for some time been used by produce experts to keep citrus fruits while in transit, and to aid in ripening them.

Wild Cinchona Trees Found in Costa Rica

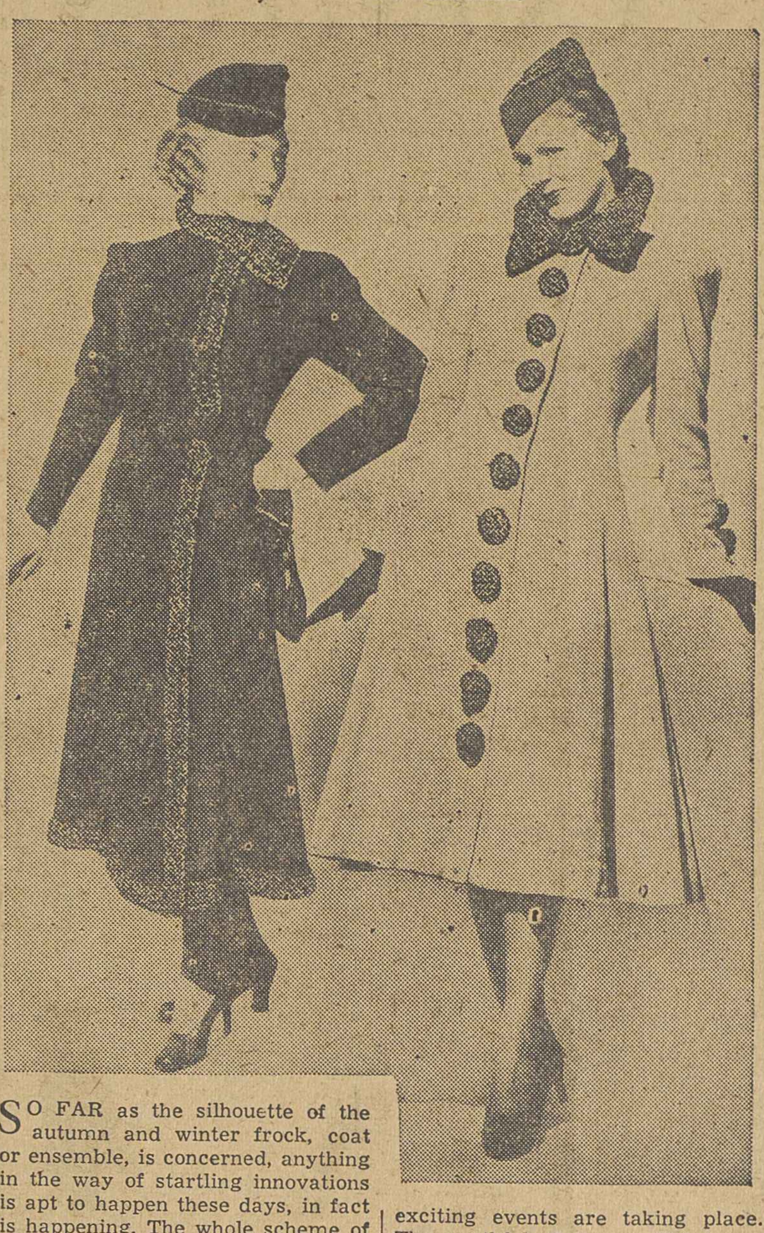
CHICAGO.—Cinchona trees, the source of quinine, have been found growing wild in the Central American republic of Costa Rica.

Specimens of this unique discovery have been received at the Field Museum of Natural history here. Wild cinchona trees have not hitherto been known outside their ancient home in the Andean highlands of South America.

The world's supply of quinine is at present derived from plantation trees in the East Indies. The old South American cinchona forests, mercilessly exploited, were practically wiped out many years ago.

The Chic New Princess Silhouettes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



SO FAR as the silhouette of the autumn and winter frock, coat or ensemble, is concerned, anything in the way of startling innovations is apt to happen these days, in fact is happening. The whole scheme of things is changing. For one thing it is back to short wide-at-hemline skirts that current fashion has dared to go—fourteen inches from the floor if you care to follow the extreme.

The present wide swing hemlines are indeed a radical departure from the sleek sheath skirts of past-season vogue. Take note of the word "swing," if you please, for it is a word that is a big word in connection with the newer fashions. Your costume to be chic must have "it" (meaning swing) and it is the new wide-at-hemline skirts that are giving exactly the style-right swing in demand.

To recount further the changing moods of the mode, comes now into the style picture high-waist, square-neck, puff-sleeve directoire trends, also quaint Victorian fashions, also Spanish themes, likewise picturesque Tyrolean costumes and that which is perhaps making the greatest impression of all — the very charming new princess "lines."

The princess influence is as everywhere present in daytime clothes as it is in formal evening clothes. From the formal evening angle the message is of regal black velvet gowns cut exquisitely a la princess, the long unbelted lines of classic simplicity sweeping out into expansive hemlines. The very beautiful moire silks so favored for dinner and dance gowns yield gloriously to princess styling, as do also the fashionable metal cloths and brocades.

With all due recognizance of the importance of the princess silhouette in the evening mode, it is in the daytime fashions that the most exciting events are taking place. The youthful, flattering little princess gowns tailored of swanky wool weaves, preferably broadcloth, duvetyne or suede cloth are fashion "firsts" for day wear. The majority of them button down the front from neckline to hemline and they are enlivened with dramatic touches of color—perhaps a banding at the throat and on the sleeves and about the wide hemline of braid in the now-so-much-talked-of coronation colors or in the vivid Tyrolean reds, greens, blues and yellows.

As to the new coats styled along princess lines, you will agree that the accompanying illustration conveys the message more eloquently than words. The models pictured also exploit the use of Persian lamb in ways that are most attractive. The coat to the right goes extreme in the matter of the new princess lines. It is made of beige broadcloth. The buttons and young-looking collar of Persian lamb are typical of the manner in which designers are handling supple and thin fabriclike furs. Developed either in gray or beige there is no smarter coat to be found in all fashiondom.

The "swing" model to the left of black broadcloth is just the genteel type that makes best dressed women look better dressed. As we all know by this time the all-black costume leads the style parade. Note the binding all about the edges of Persian lamb that is a favorite fur treatment this season. To complete the costume - ideal the hat must have a touch (if not all fur) of Persian lamb to match the trimmings. Later add a matching fur muff.

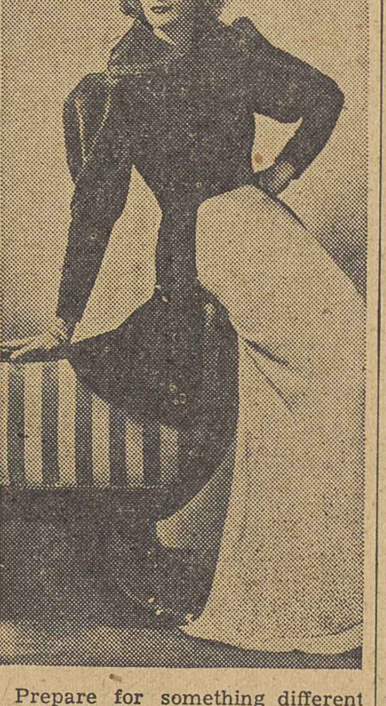
NEW COAT LINES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Prepare for something different in the newer evening coats. The latest models are apt to have a Napoleonic look and there is also a trend to borrow lines from the dignified mannish frock coat and similar cut-away effects with long coat tail at the back. Formal types of town suits are also taking on coats of this new influence. For these black broadcloth is the favored material. The coat pictured is typical of the new movement. It is designed for evening wear and tops in this instance a light gray gown embroidered in rhinestones. The coat is of slate gray velveteen.

CONTRAST OF COLOR CHARACTERIZES HAT

Tailored Suit With Fur Is Ideal for Autumn Days

If you don't have to worry about a budget and can go ahead and buy an outfit for now and a warmer one for later, a tailored or dressmaker suit with fur is ideal. It may include slim skirt and jacket with fur collar and cuffs or a plain jacket and skirt with fur-trimmed topcoat, swagger or fitted.

The most popular version of the formalized variety come in black broadcloth with Persian lamb or silver fox; brown broadcloth with mink or brown Persian. The sports types are finished with wolf, lynx or raccoon collars and are made from the new rough, nubby woolens.

Silver Threads

The current coin of fashion is silver gleaming on crepe or satiny backgrounds. A blouse with the glitter of silver—needn't be expensive at all—will turn your suit into a five o'clock costume.

Skirts and Sleeves

While there are exceptions to this rule, in most cases plain sleeves are used on dresses when the skirt is flaring, and full sleeves on dresses having narrow skirts.

Poor Soil Needs Proper Treatment

Land That Produces Lowest Yields Found to Respond to Building-Up.

Supplied by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Those soils which produce the lowest yields without treatment make the best response to soil-building practices, according to a bulletin, "Crop Yields from Illinois Soil Experiment Fields," published by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

"With the less productive soils, the increased yield from treatment was several times as great as the yield obtained without treatment," the bulletin states. "However, on the more productive soils yields from the plots without treatment were several times as great as any increase that could be attributed to soil treatment.

"Despite this fact, on each field there was found at least one practice that raised the efficiency of production enough to pay for the treatment.

"Whether the crop-producing capacity of the less productive soils can be raised to the present productive levels of the better soils seems doubtful. The gray and yellow soils after 25 years have potential levels only about one-half the level of the better untreated soils."

Since 1876 when the Morrow plots, oldest soil experiment field in America, were established, the College of Agriculture has been studying the soils of the state to learn practices which would bring about more efficient production, lower the cost of production, improve the quality of crops grown on the soil and maintain soil fertility.

With the Morrow plots located on the grounds of the agricultural college at Urbana, a number of outlying fields have since been established throughout the state to study soil types in each section. During the past year's crop season, 26 permanent fields were in operation.

Straw as Feed for Live Stock for Fall, Winter

Straw from grain threshing, as well as small grain hay or sheaf grain, may well be widely utilized in corn belt live stock feeding this fall and winter, or at least until emergency forage crops and pastures develop, says Wallaces' Farmer.

The most satisfactory results from straw as a feed for dairy cattle are obtained when it is used to take the place of only one daily hay feeding. The intake of straw can be facilitated by increasing the palatability with molasses. Either cane or beet molasses, diluted with one to two parts of water and sprinkled over poor hay or straw, will help. Beet molasses is more laxative than cane molasses and therefore should be fed more sparingly at first.

Straw probably is most valuable as a roughage for idle horses and for wintering beef cows. Straw also can be fed to sheep and to working horses to some extent, but it is important to add enough protein supplements and concentrates to supply the needed elements that are lacking in straw.

Navicular Disease

Navicular disease is very difficult to treat successfully. Its location within the hoof makes its treatment hard to administer. The sesamoid sheath becomes inflamed and the navicular bone is involved. It occurs in the front feet, usually only one being affected. A horse may seem lame at first and after exercise the lameness disappears. If lame in both feet the gait is stiff. The front shoe shows most wear at the toe as a result of putting the foot down toe first to favor the tender parts. Blister and rest are about the only treatments, and they give only temporary relief.—Rural New-Yorker.

Millers' Toll

Wheat testing 60 pounds to the bushel should return abut 38 pounds of flour to the producer when the wheat is exchanged for flour. Sixty pounds of wheat will mill 44 pounds of flour, 14 pounds of bran, and 2 pounds lost in the milling process. This means that the miller keeps 6 pounds of flour, and all of the bran and shorts in a bushel of wheat when the flour is milled on the exchange basis.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

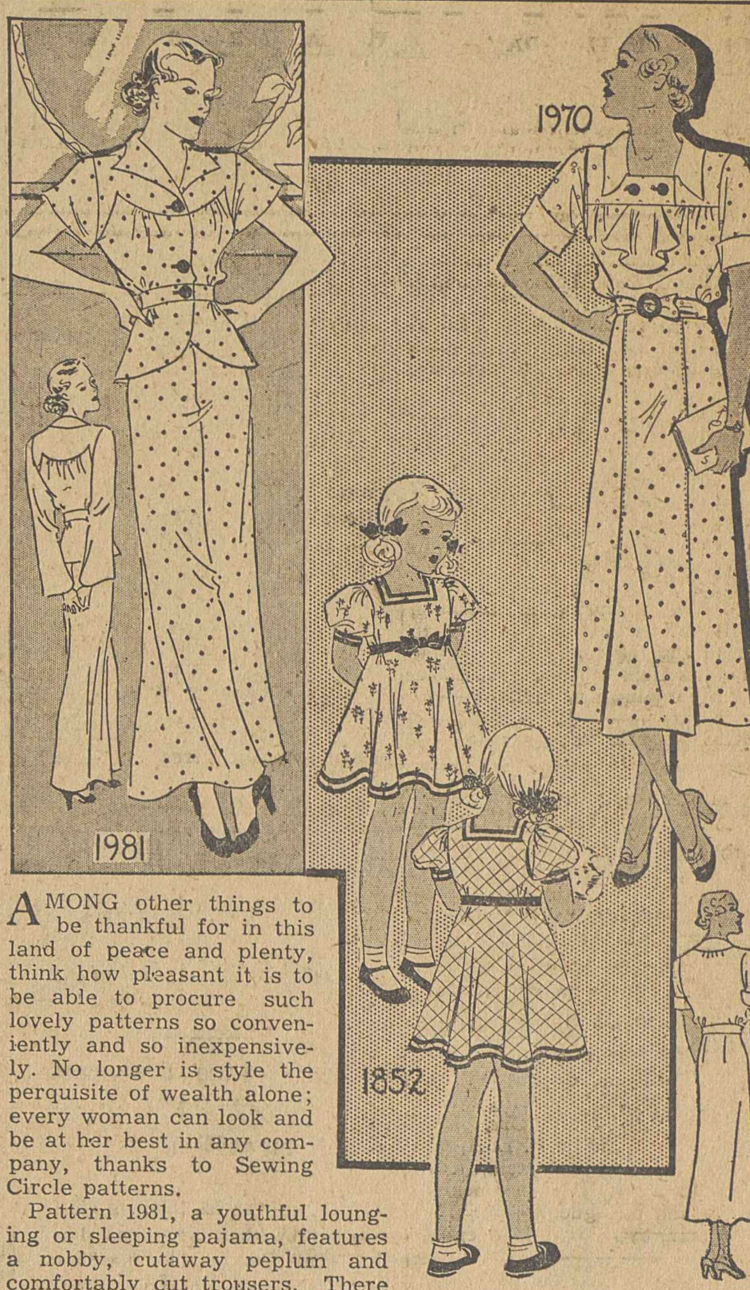
Seed Corn

Much seed corn is not fancy in appearance, but it may be entirely satisfactory for seed, nevertheless. In the dry areas, stalks that were able to mature even small ears may be regarded as having better than average resistance to drouth. It is advisable, however, to avoid saving moldy ears or those which come from stalks infested with smut, rot or any other kind of disease.

"Green Wrap" Tomatoes

Since the tomato season in any locality lasts but a few weeks most consumers who insist on the "fresh" vegetable the year round get what is known to the trade as the "green wrap" (tomatoes that are held in storage and ripened) about eight months out of the year. This business of picking green and ripening on the way to the consumer has become a well developed and highly successful business.

Lovely and Inexpensive



AMONG other things to be thankful for in this land of peace and plenty, think how pleasant it is to be able to procure such lovely patterns so conveniently and so inexpensively. No longer is style the perquisite of wealth alone; every woman can look and be at her best in any company, thanks to Sewing Circle patterns.

Pattern 1981, a youthful lounging or sleeping pajama, features a nobby, cutaway peplum and comfortably cut trousers. There is an easy yoke, a cleverly cut collar, and a choice of long or short sleeves. A grand Christmas present for an intimate friend as well as a perfect addition to your own wardrobe, why not make them twice in alternate materials? The sizes range, 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34 bust) requires 5 yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1852 fashions into an adorable little frock which will make small eyes dance and sparkle. Just eight pieces to the pattern, including the band and facings, you can run it up in a jiffy and have a perfect gift for your baby daughter or favorite niece. As simple as can be, it is nevertheless pert and engaging, truly a prize. Send for it in size 2, 4, 6, or 8 years. Material selection—dimity or swiss or voile or crepe or gingham. Size 4 requires just 2 1-8 yds. of 35 or 39 inch.

Pattern 1970 is a comely and graceful morning or daytime frock for matron sizes, the sort that goes on in a hurry and wears well without a lot of fuss and bother. The jabot is softly feminine and the panelled skirt is cut along lines every larger woman appreciates. The collar and cuffs are in contrast, if you wish, and the selection of materials is practically unlimited. This lovely pattern is available in all of the following sizes—36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Size 40 requires 4 3-8 yards of 35 or 39 inch fabric plus 3-4 yd. contrast.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

ANNUAL VISITING DAY FRIDAY AT SCHOOLS

On last Friday about seventy-five parents, visiting teachers and friends registered at the Elementary and High Schools. Anniston, Columbiana and Shelby County were all well represented on this annual visiting day. The sixth grade gave an English Fair ending a unit on the British Isles. They also baked an English plum pudding which was served to the guests. Donations of canned fruit were brought for distribution by the Welfare Committee of the P.-T. A.

At eleven o'clock, the band, under direction of York Kildea, played in the auditorium.

The guests ate their lunch at the school cafeteria with the children.

In visiting each room they saw an every-day schoolroom situation. At the High School regular work was carried on during the morning, but the afternoon was devoted to entertaining visitors. The Home Economics Department served cookies and hot punch in their building.

WEEK OF PRAYER

The Week of Prayer will begin next Monday and will run through Friday, meeting each day at the church at 3 o'clock. All the ladies are urged to attend the meetings.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB MET WITH MRS. HARMAN

P.-T. A. MEETING TUESDAY AFTERRNOON

On last Tuesday afternoon the P.-T. A.'s regular meeting of the month was held at the Elementary school. Mrs. Murray Fancher, president, presided over the meeting. Mr. C. G. Dobbins was the impressive speaker for the afternoon, having as his subject "Honesty."

A short business meeting was held in which reports of the committees denoted excellent work. The food sale on Thursday proved to be very successful.

Refreshments were served in the cafeteria, Mrs. Bill Tidwell, chairman of the hostess committee, was in charge.

NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL DEPARTMENT AT METHODIST CHURCH

The North Alabama Conference granted $5,000 for the building of a new Sunday School department at the Methodist Church here. Construction will begin at an early date. This addition to the church will be quite an advantage to the advancement of the Sunday School. It will be erected on the lot at the rear of the church.

RED CROSS AID TO MORE THAN 500,000 DISASTER VICTIMS

Large Urban Areas Devastated As Elements Hit 20 States East of Mississippi

"The number of disaster victims assisted by the Red Cross during the fiscal year ended June 30 was more than four times the number aided in the previous twelve month period," Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman, said in commenting on highlights of the annual report just issued. "Over 13.,000 families were given food, clothing, shelter and medical care, and thousands of homes were rebuilt or repaired by the Red Cross to enable them to carry on."

Pointing to the many-sided problems created by the wide variety of types of disasters which occurred during the year, Admiral Grayson said, "The Red Cross sent hundreds of trained workers into 39 states to meet the many exigencies of catastrophes which included earthquake, epidemic, explosion, fire, hurricane, ice lock, landslide, refugee relief, shipwreck, tornado and typhoon. The Red Cross took charge at the scenes of 105 domestic disasters of major severity."

The report emphasized the marked value of Government-Red Cross cooperation when disaster strikes, giving as example the flight of Army bombing planes which dropped Red Cross food to marooned refugees at Renovo, Pennsylvania, during the Spring floods. More than 10,000 persons were rescued from the second floors of homes in Wilkes-Barre and Kingston through Coast Guard-Red Cross cooperation at the height of these same floods.

"Government agencies and relief groups were of invaluable assistance to Red Cross relief forces at all times," Admiral Grayson stated.

The complete resources of Red Cross leadership, training and disaster experience were brought into play by the Spring floods and tornadoes which took so heavy a toll of life and property in eastern and southern states this year, the annual report reveals. The Red Cross aided 77,000 families in 14 flooded states east of the Mississippi and 6,000 families in 6 tornado hit states south of the Mason-Dixon line in this one operation.

"Never before have as many metropolitan centers borne the brunt of attack by wind and water within a single year, challenging Red Cross preparedness and efficiency by so wide a variety of pressing human problems," Chairman Grayson said.

In its work of relief to disaster sufferers the Red Cross expended in excess of $5,200,000 for the year. The report points out that this figure does not include assistance given in 27 lesser disasters with a total of 2,000 persons aided, and adds that additional millions will be used to "clean up" Spring floods and tornadoes.

"Numerous local disaster situations occurring during the year were met by Red Cross chapter funds and manpower," Admiral Grayson said. "In each major relief operation undertaken the great army of Red Cross volunteers aided trained workers with the task of rehabilitating those without resources who had suffered losses.

"The Red Cross disaster relief service is one of many Red Cross activities supported by the American people through membership at the time of Roll Call, held each year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving."

Rev. and Mrs. O. R. Burns, Mrs. Geo. Deshazo, Mrs. C. H. Mahaffey attended a Methodist rally in Tuscaloosa Tuesday.

Governor's Message

state was $28,340,354.18, which of course included all such receipts as county gasoline tax, federal aids of every kind, receipts from the docks commission to pay on their bonds. Disbursements of every kind is included in that $28,000,000.

"This misinformation about the $48,000,000 was gotten by counting the same thing over and over again, by adding the totals of every account on the books. . . . . No tax payer has paid anything on great road programs that has given us more road construction than ever in the day when we were dispensing $25,000,000 on bonds.

"By arrangements in Washington we supplied the payroll, but the counties put those of their own selection to draw the pay, and the taxpayer pays none. These facts dispel practically all that has been said about increases in the state's pay roll. . . . .

FUTURE NEEDS VIEWED

"We need an additional $4,000,000 for this fiscal year and for the two that follow it. Our revenue measures are for this emergency and should terminate by their own terms, at the end of this quadrenium, leaving our successors the ample time from January to October to provide for the problems that confront them.

"If we should have any liquor revenue, let us use it for the reduction of the ad valorem tax on all other properties than homesteads, and thus bring quickly a full development of our whole state and its every resources.

"I earnestly recommend to you the enactment of an excise tax to be known as a privilege license on retail merchandising of personal property and that the measure of that tax be one and one-half per cent of the gross receipts of that merchandising business that is so licensed, to be payable monthly on the basis of the receipts of the preceding month. This is to include amusements run for pay.

"Careful estimate convinces us that this will bring in about four and one-hall million dollars per year. . . .

"I urge that you put the returns from this license tax in the Alabama special educational trust fund charged with the reimbursement of the amount that it takes to exempt homesteads from the 6½ mill state tax. That charge would amount to something like $850,000 of $900,000 the first year. It would probably increase thereafter. That will leave us an additional $3,600,000 or more earmarked for education and I would transfer every educational and extension program from the general fund to that special educational trust fund.

"To make sure that there would always be enough in this special educational trust fund to pay the appropriation for education, I recommend a further bill be passed appropriating $1,000,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, out of the general fund to supply any shortage that may arise in the special educational trust fund.

"In this way the educational and farm programs will be assured of 100 cents on the dollar on the appropriations. They will know that they are going to get that much and in order that they may also know that they are not going to get any more than that amount fixed by their appropriations, I recommend that you pass a bill establishing a 'property tax relief fund' and that every surplus at the end of each year in the special educational trust fund over and above the appropriations, be transferred to the property tax relief fund' and that all the monies in that 'property tax relief fund' be used to reduce the millage tax on all other ad valorem properties; that it be mandatory upon the governor, as of October 1, to proclaim the reduction in the state millage tax on property other than homesteads by the amount that the fund in the 'property tax relief fund' permits.

BALANCE USE ASKED

"If there be any income from liquor or from any other source in the general fund, over and above the operating balance of three-quarter million dollars which we had on hand at the beginning of this fiscal year, that any such balance also go into that 'property tax relief fund' and also be used in the reduction of millage on other ad valorem property . . . .

"You will note that the last clause is to provide for a referendum to the electors of Alabama. Had this not been inserted it would have required two-thirds vote to have had such a referendum, but this insertion was not for that reason alone. It is because I am firmly of the opinion that the long established policy of Alabama on intoxicants should not be changed unless and until the people shall approve same.

"When your special session asked for advisory opinions of our Supreme Court you were informed that you could not delegate your authority on such matters as revenue bills because it was your responsibility that could not be delegated. In the vernacular you were told that you couldn't 'pass the buck' but must 'face the music.' You remember the court took exactly opposite position on a referendum on an intoxicant bill—that that referendum was in accordance with the fundamentals of our laws.

STATE STORES URGED

"I am equally insistent upon a plan whereby government will get all profits that may arise from any legalization of intoxicants. The experience of our state and others is that under a license system the profits go to the operators and not to the government. It is my opinion that it can be more easily enforced through a state store system.

"I believe that a state store system can be made to net the government two and one half millions of dollars annually, provided we have the co-partnership and wholehearted cooperation of county and city government affected Therefore, I urge you to divide the proceeds; 60 per cent to the state; 20 per cent to the cities; and 20 per cent to the counties.

"I believe that 60 per cent to the state with the co-partnership and cooperation of the courthouses and city halls will bring more revenue than 100 per cent to the state without that cooperation. The counties and cities need help and it will be fair all around to so divide it."

"If such a system should be put through it would be my plan to have at the head of it some man of highest type available that never has had or never will know any politics, that is fearless and clean as some retired general or admiral.

"I would want to have the full responsibility for its enforcement in accordance with the laws you pass, and to that I would ask you to put the power in my hand and let me be responsible, and clothed with the power to meet the responsibility, to see that it is executed in accordancvewith your will.

SHARING IS AIM

"The proceeds of this would go into the general fund which would take care of any appropriations remaining therein, all educational and agricultural programs having been transferred to the Alabama special educational trust fund; would take care of health, welfare and the other necessities; would leave us enough to increase the allowance of the insane hospital and, with the surplus that I anticipate from the educational trust fund, would, beginning October 1 next, reduce the state ad valorem taxes by two or more mills.

"The bills which will be laid before you will carry out this general program; will provide that established hotels, restaurants and clubs may sell in unbroken packages these intoxicants, and the bill puts no limitation on municipalities as to what license they may charge to these vendors.

"Gentlemen, we will have met the duty of the hour if we enact the program here suggested.

"May God give us the vision to see that duty and the courage to do it, and do it now."

LEGION TURKEY SHOOT LAST SATURDAY

The annual turkey shoot sponsored by Hendrick - Hudson Post of the American Legion, was held at Fancher Field last Saturday.

Cecil Wells was master of ceremonies. He reports that the interest of local sportsmen in the event was enthusiastic, which fact enabled him to dispose of all available turkeys, and to turn into the charity fund of the local Post a clean profit of over $40 for the day.

Mr. Wells and the Legion Post extend their thanks to all who contributed to the success of the occasion, and hope that everyone will enjoy their Thanksgiving turkey.

THE NEW POSTOFFICE

Day by day the new Montevallo post office building is coming nearer to completion. The roof is on, the inside walls are plastered, and the other phases of the finishing touches are being applied.

The job is so far advanced that the remainder of the work can be carried on regardless of the weather. This would indicate that the contractor, Algernon Blair, will live up to his reputation of completing his jobs in advance of the time limit.

SHOOTING GALLERY

Mr. Kenneth Cunningham, by an exhibition of superior marksmanship, was acclaimed the winner of the prize for the past week at Simpson's Shooting Gallery. It was a cash consideration of $11.90.

Simpson's gallery is located at the back of Rogan's store, and is proving a popular place for those gay sportsmen who enjoy matching their skill with the rifle.

Music Club Gives Opera Party

The Montevallo Music Club entertained on Saturday evening at an opera banquet, given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy L. Chamberlin, in Montevallo. Invitations to the banquet were in the form of opera tickets, and club members and guests were costumed to represent various opera characters. Hosts and hostesses besides Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlin included Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Vaughan, Mr. and Mrs. Micieslaw Ziolkowski, Dr. C. T. Acker, Misses Honor Winer, Katherine Farrah, Lorraine Pierson, Dawn Kennedy, Ellen-Haven Gould, Josephine Eddy, Sadie Weir, Mary McWilliams and York Kildea.

The entrance to the Chamberlin home was decorated to represent the front of an opera house. The dining room was arranged in the manner of a medieval banquet hall, with the stage at one end. Heavy purple curtains and wall-hangings were in evidence. The long table, arranged in banquet style, was covered with a white damask, down the center of which ran a strip of silver. Gold and silver leaves and bowls of gold and silver nuts were placed at intervals. Silver candelabra burned in tall tapers, and a massive silver coffee service was placed at each end of the table. An elaborate banquet was served.

Mrs. A. F. Harman and Miss Honor Winer presided at the coffee services.

At the close of the dinner, tableaux were presented depicting scenes from "Tosca," "Hansel and Gretel," "Faust," "Pagliacci," and other well known operas. Appropriate overtures and arias were played during the presentation of the scenes.

Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed by the guests.

Chairmen of the various committees who helped to make the affair a success were: Miss Lorraine Pierson, Costumes; Mrs. Guy Chamberlin, decorations; Miss Honor Winer, tableaux; Miss Katherine Farrah, Music; Dr. A. W. Vaughan, dinner.

Guests in addition to those already named included: President and Mrs. A. F. Harman, Dean and Mrs. T. H. Napier, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Trumbauer, Misses Lenice Vaughan, Anna Irvin, Alfreda Moscrop, Martha Allen, Eleanor Ren[illegible], Hallie Farmer, Edith Lindberg, Elizabeth Stockton, Melba Griffin, Marva Hough, Lucile Hudson, Mrs. Gould, Mrs. Kennedy and Kermit Wooley.

Dr. Burns To Deliver Series Of Sermons

Beginning next Sunday and running through the month of December, Rev. O. R. Burns will preach a series of sermons on "Faith" at the Sunday morning services of the Montevallo Methodist Church.

In emphasizing the different aspects of religious faith, for each sermon the life of some conspicuous Bible character is chosen. The topics will be as follows:

December 6—"The Faith that Raises an Altar." (Abraham).

December 13—"The Faith that Produces Vision." (Joseph.)

December 20—"The Faith that Establishes a Nation." (Moses.)

December 27—"The Faith that Saves." (Paul.)

The public is cordially invited to hear these services. It is believed the services will be most interesting for those who attend for the series.

Our New Postoffice Nearing Completion

Construction Engineer Wallace reports that on the first of December the postoffice was 76.86 per cent complete. The progress is still above normal. The plastering is practically complete. The terrazzo floor of the lobby will be ready for polishing by the first of next week. Last week the building received its preliminary inspection by Mechanical Engineer, Russel, and District Engineer, Richey, both of whom are from the Atlanta District Office of the Public Branch of the United States Treasury Department.

Mr. Henry I. Flinn, contractor on the Fairfield, Alabama, Post Office, now under construction under the supervision of Construction Engineer, Wallace, was a visitor here on Tuesday, December 1st.

The outlook of public work at Dogwood Mine near here is very promising, according to Mr. Cross, President of the Little Gem Coal Company. This will be of interest to the merchants who are directly affected by slack time at the various mines nearby. Mr. Cross states that they will have more orders than can be filled if the cold weather continues, and that regular work can be looked forward to during the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hicks and children spent Sunday in Randolph.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Davis and children spent the week end in Clanton with relatives.

McConaughy-Jenkins Wedding An Event Of Thursday, Nov. 26

A marriage of much interest to the friends of the bride and bridegroom, both prominently connected throughout the state, was that of Miss Kate Sampey McConaughy and Mr. Joseph Embree Jenkins, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. W. P. McConaughy and Mrs. McConaughy in Montevallo, at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, November 26th. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with ferns and white and gold chrysanthemums.

The marriage vows were read by Rev. J. L. Jenkins, of Birmingham, brother of the groom, before an improvised altar of ferns, baskets of large white chrysanthemums and tall candalabra holding white candles.

Preceding the ceremony, William McConaughy, brother of the bride, lighted the candles at the altar and Mrs. McClellan Ratchford, sister of the bride, gave as a violin solo Borowski's "Adoration" accompanied at the piano by Miss Ruth Schuessler, who was in charge of the wedding music. The bridal party entered the room at the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March. The first to enter the room was Mrs. McClellan Ratchford, the bride's sister and only attendant, followed by the groom and his best man, Mr. William Riser, of Atlanta. The bride followed on the arm of her father by whom she was given in marriage. Throughout the ceremony "The Evening Star" from Tannhauser, was played softly. The impressive ring ceremony was used by the officiating clergyman.

The bride, charming at all times, was beautiful in a suit of blue with silver gray accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses and valley lilies, tied with a large bow of taffeta ribbon.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. McConaughy entertained at a reception. The color scheme of white and green was carried out in the dining room decorations and refreshments. The bride's table, covered with lace and appointed in silver, was centered by a beautiful embossed bride's cake topped by a miniature bride and groom.

The bride, the youngest daughter of W. P. McConaughy and the late Mrs. McConaughy, who, before her marriage was the beautiful and highly talented Kate Sam[illegible] violin. As a student she enjoyed unusual popularity and was the recipient of many honors. She is a member of the Beta Lambda Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi.

Mr. Jenkins, the son of the late Rev. George L. Jenkins and Myrtis Schuessler Jenkins, was graduated from Auburn and is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha, Omicron Delta Kappa and the "A" Club fraternities. He is at present employed by the State Tax Commission in Montgomery where he and his bride will reside after a short wedding trip.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were: Mrs. George Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. George Jenkins, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. McClellan Ratchford, Judge and Mrs. W. B. Bowling, and Mrs. Carl Schuessler of LaFayette, Alabama, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Dean, Messrs. Maxwell and Cullen Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Beck of Montgomery, and Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Messer of Birmingham.

Team Entertained by the Civic Club Wednesday

The Montevallo High School football team was entertained last Wednesday by the Montevallo Civic Club. Those present included the members of the Civic Club, the twenty-seven members of the team, the three managers, and Coach Leon Hicks.

The meeting was opened by the president of the Club, Dr. A. W. Vaughan, after the guests had filed in. Before the entire meal was served Coach Hicks introduced each boy, and told where he lived, what position he played, and any other points of interest about the boy that he thought would be interesting.

After this introduction, the meal was eaten. The boys, and men too, thoroughly enjoyed the meal and wish to thank the Baptist w[illegible]en for preparing it.

Next the Civic Club took up private business. Then Mr. W. M. Wyatt, program committee chairman, introduced Coach Hicks who made a fine talk on "this Season's Squad and some of its peculiarities."

In his talk Coach Hicks summarized briefly the team's record this season. In this summarization he dwelt largely on the Jones Valley game, telling how we won the game by forfeit, and just how the boys looked to him. The Coach said that there was no outstanding star around which he built his team, but that each player played for the team and not for himself. He said that most schools built up their team around their star, but, he said, this team has no outstanding player; they're all equally good. Some of the peculiarities were that some of the boys had to walk, catch rides, or otherwise transport themselves, a distance of twelve to fourteen miles. He especially praised these boys that had to walk so far, for their sticking to the practices. He also acknowledged "Red" Confer's not having been absent from practice in the two years that he had gone for team. Coach Hicks said, in his talk, that nineteen out of twenty-seven men made letters this time. Out of these nineteen, twelve men graduate, but, he stated, the outlook for [illegible] next [illegible] pro[illegible]

Next, Coach Hicks introduced Captain Percy Lee who spoke in behalf of the team and thanked the Civic Club for the[illegible] dinner.

Then President Vaughan stated that they, the Civic Club, would like to know in advance what they could do to help the team. After that the Club was dismissed.

Looking Backward And Ahead

Well, the football season for the Montevallo High School has come to a close. It seems fitting that their last game of the year should be their best. The Montevallo Bulldogs won the county championship by defeating their arch rival, Columbiana, last week 18-0.

With the going of this year's football season Montevallo will lose twelve letter men. But these positions will be ably filled in most cases. In M. H. S.'s backfield four out of six letter men will graduate: Captain Lee at quarterback, alternate captain Harrison at fullback, and Confer and Weems at the two halfbacks. The other two letter men in the backfield are Cahoon who played right half, and Carey who played fullback. Brown is expected to fill in well at left halfback, because he is one of the hardest driving backs ever seen at M. H. S. The quarterback position will be hit the hardest of any on the team except center. Captain Lee, who occupied this position this season, was a prudent field general and his position will be particularly hard to fill, since he was also the punter and passer.

In the line Montevallo is pretty well fixed, except at center. On the ends Montevallo will lose two veterans in Hartley and Spurgeon, [illegible] Findley and Ambrose will fill these two positions easily. The two veteran tackles of this season, G. Cahoon and Liddle, will remain, though their able alternate teammate, John Carr, graduates. Montevallo loses two veteran guards in Leslie and Lee, but two other veterans remain, Johnson and Comer. Next to the hardest position on the team to fill, as there were only two centers on the team, and they both graduate. Griffin and Winslett had no substitutes.

Out of a squad of twenty-seven boys twelve will graduate, but Montevallo can have just as good team or better next year if certain positions are filled.

The citizens of Montevallo supported the team better this year than they ever have before. And the team's success has been partly due to this fine support. We hope that Montevallo will support its team even better next year. In view of this fine support, the high school officials are planning on many more home games. Remember, the number of games played in Montevallo depends upon how well you support the team.

New Text Book To Aid Students

In line with the new trend in education, three Alabama Professors, one each at Alabama College, Auburn, and the University, have collaborated in writing a textbook designed to aid junior high school students in exploring occupations by actual participation.

Authors of the new text, "Exploring the World at Work," are: A. C. Anderson, Professor of Secondary Education at Alabama College; Dr. Paul Irvine, Professor of Education at Alabama Polytechnic Institute; and Dr. H. C. Pannell, Associate Professor of School Administration at the University of Alabama. This book is one of a guidance series edited by Dr. Benjamin Showalter, Professor of Elementary Education at Auburn.

In a prefatory statement, "To the Pupil," the authors say: "This book suggests projects by which to explore the work that is done in a number of occupational fields. It provides you with plans by which you can try yourself out as a worker in a number of fields so that you may discover your abilities and interests."

Among the fields explored are plant agriculture, animal husbandry, and occupations dealing with printing, music, acting and entertaining, woodworking, transportation and communication, textiles and clothing.

The new book is a sequel to "The World at Work," a textbook produced by the same authors in 193[illegible] and used in Alabama ju[illegible] schools.

Dr. Harman Will Speak At Richmond

With President A. F. Harman scheduled for an address, and Dean T. H. Napier holding membership in one of the most important committees, Alabama College officials will have a prominent place in the fifteenth annual meeting this week in Richmond, of the Southern Association of Colleges for Women.

Dr. Harman is to speak Wednesday morning on "The Place of the Fine Arts as an Integral Part in a College Curriculum." His address will be part of the general program on "An Integrated Curriculum."

As a member of the committee on non-membership colleges, Dean Napier will have a part in transacting some of the most important business of the convention.

New Student Board Formed At College

The Student Government Association at Alabama College announces formation of an official Speech Contest Board, which becomes the seventh major student organization on the Alabama College campus.

The new board has been organized for the purpose of promoting and regulating all intrumural and intercollegiate speech contests on the Alabama College campus. Board members will determine the policies to be followed in all student activities connected with the Speech Department of the college, and will arrange balanced schedules for work on and off the campus.

Representatives to the board from the classes are:

Seniors: Annie Laurie Beckham, Selma; Aidalu Butenschon, Oxford; Vivian Booker, Carbon Hill; and Margaret Ellis, Columbiana.

Juniors: Dorothy Laird, Highland Home; Martha Nicolson, Selma; Sara Wyatt Bonner, Roanoke; and Mary McLendon, Birmingham.

Sophomores: Kathleen Williams, Birmingham; and Julia Jane Berry, Bessemer. Freshmen representatives will be elected the second semester.

In the future all members of the board will be elected in the annual student government spring elections.

SHE WAITED 83 YEARS TO GO 30 MILES TO CITY

Mrs. Frances Falkner, who will be 83 years old on Christmas Day, took her first trip to Birmingham from her home at Sterrett, only 30 miles away, a few days ago.

She made the trip by auto—"for she has never been on a train in her life," her granddaughter, Mrs. J. D. Snell, of Birmingham, said today.

Today, back at her home in Shelby County, Mrs. Falkner described the sights she saw, and even broached the possibility of another trip to Birmingham. She hasn't traveled more, because she "just doesn't care to go away from home."

Making the round trip in one day, she visited in the home of her son, Jeff B. Falkner, 4236 10th-ave.,N. She came with another son, J. E. Falkner, of Sterrett.—The Birmingham Post.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Johnson and sons spent the holidays in Talladega.

Alabama College Social Activities

On Wednesday night the dance group of the Athletic Association, under the direction of Miss Edith L. Lindberg, physical education instructor, gave the first recital of the year in Palmer Hall. Members of the group were: Aidalu Butenschon, Oxford; Nina Culley, Birmingham; Frances Cumbee, Five Points; Nell Chappel, Alexander City; Joyce Garrett, Dadeville; Ella Mae Hargrave, Ensley; Aileen Holley, Northport; Jane Howell, Birmingham; Aileen Kresting, Spring Hill; Brownie Lollar, Fayette; Lucie McDonald, Birmingham; Elizabeth Martin, Enterprise; Helen Moss, Selma; Kathryn Mullen, Selma; Jean Oliver, Dadeville; Mary Potts, Alexander City, Eleanor Smith, Mobile; Louise Vance, Birmingham; Anne Wilcox, Birmingham; Eleanor Watson, Georgiana.

The dance group gave a program of two parts. The first was composed of selections from "Peer Gynt Suite" by Greig. The second part consisted of dances carrying out the themes of well-known compositions.

Following the program in Palmer Hall, a formal dance, arranged by the Athlectic Association was given in Main Assembly. The color scheme of green and white was carried out in the horns-of-plenty which decorated the walls, and in the canopy of streamers that led to the landing where the orchestra played.

Beginning the activities for Thanksgiving Day, a worship service was held in Palmer Hall, under the direction of Brownie Lollar, Fayette, president of Y. M. C. A.

Drouth Commission Gets Data for Program—Britain Moves to Protect Her Shipping From Spanish Fascists—German-Russian Break Threatened.

CHAIRMAN MORRIS L. COOKE and other members of the federal great plains drouth commission are holding a series of meetings in the drouth blighted states for the purpose of formulating a relief and control program and are calling in the farmers to consult with them. At the first of these sessions, in Bismarck, N. D., officials and agriculturists of Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska and North and South Dakota heard O. W. Roberts, federal meteorologist, give the encouraging promise that "greater than normal precipitation is anticipated in those states next spring on the basis of light precipitation this fall."

M. L. Cooke

Reports of existing conditions, however, showed that the situation is serious. Gov. Walter Welford, of North Dakota, told the conference that water levels throughout his state are seriously diminished, constituting a major problem for the state and federal governments.

Another official declared that North Dakota's live stock situation is "most deplorable," that virtually no live stock is left on ranges in western sections of the state and that feed is seriously scarce in all sections.

"There is no magic wand at the disposal of the government to make drouth areas bloom," Mr. Cooke said. "We came here to hear your suggestions and we hope to gain from this and similar meetings data which will guide future, helpful legislation.

"The reports so far received indicate that much can be done through government assistance and expert advice."

"The position of Ne[illegible]undland, astride the mouth of the St. Lawrence, is an insuperable obstacle to the treaty in its present form," the resolution said, "inasmuch as Newfoundland is a crown colony of Great Britain and is entirely separate from Canada.

"This crown colony as well as the St. Lawrence plug of Anticosta island should both be ceded to the United States to guarantee our safety in case of war."

The new president of the association is Arthur J. Weaver, former governor of Nebraska and now president of the Missouri River Navigation association.

GREAT BRITAIN asked Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the Spanish rebels, to establish a safety zone for neutral ships in Barcelona harbor which the Fascist chieftain had declared blockaded. Franco's reply was not satisfactory, and besides, one of his vessels sank an unidentified ship off the capital of Catalonia. Therefore the British government promptly started a considerable number of warships toward the Mediterranean, cruisers and submarines being included. Foreign Minister Eden already had assured parliament that British shipping would be protected on the high seas with all the might of the British navy—which is something to give the Spanish Fascists pause. France took the same stand, but warned its merchantmen to conduct themselves "with extreme caution."

Excitement over the torpedo attack on a loyal Spanish cruiser by a submarine which the Madrid government more than hinted was a German vessel was allayed by the report that the undersea boat was a Spanish submarine that had gone over to the rebel side.

Madrid was being continually hammered by rebel shells and bombs, and there was intense fighting daily in University City, the northwest section of the capital, where the insurgents had penetrated. The American embassy was closed on orders from Washington and Eric C. Wendelin, charge d'affaires, gave protection to those Americans who wished to go to Valencia to board a United States warship. The German and Italian embassies, abandoned by their staffs, were seized and sealed by the defense junta and a number of Fascist refugees were arrested in the former. Berlin scoffed at this action but Rome called it banditry.

E. I. STICKLING, a German engineer, was sentenced to death in Russia for sabotage which he was said to have confessed. Hitler had his ambassador in Moscow make earnest demands for postponement of the execution, and then suddenly announced that if the sentence were carried out Germany would sever diplomatic relations with the soviet government. Great Britain feared such action would seriously aggravate the European war situation and so Prime Minister Baldwin interceded. He asked German Ambassador Von Ribbertrop to urge Hitler not to bring about the open break with Russia, and he instructed the British ambassador at Moscow to appeal for mercy for Stickling. Thereafter the soviet government commuted the German's sentence to ten years in prison. Several of his fellow plotters were shot.

The agreement directed against the communist internationale, which angered Russia, was signed by Japan and Germany in the Berlin foreign office. Under it the two nations are to co-operate in a campaign against communism, and they invite other nations to join them.

JOSEPH E. DAVIES, wealthy lawyer of Washington, has served the Democratic party in various ways for many years and has contributed liberally to its campaign funds, and now he has been rewarded. President Roosevelt has appointed him American ambassador to Soviet Russia to succeed William C. Bullitt, who was transferred to the Paris embassy.

J. E. Davies

Mr. Davies, whose wife is the former Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, heiress of the big Post cereal fortune, is a native of Wisconsin and practiced law in that state until 1913, when he went to Washington. He was chairman of the federal trade commission under President Wilson in 1915-'16, and was taken along by Wilson as an economic adviser to the Versailles conference. Before that he had served as western manager of Wilson's campaign and as secretary of the Democratic national committee, and he was offered in 1918 the ambassadorship to Russia, to Italy and the governorship of the Philippines. He declined, however, so he could run for the United States senate from Wisconsin. He was defeated. He was active during the recent campaign, serving on the advisory committee at Democratic headquarters in New York.

President Roosevelt signed the Davies commission before he left on his South American cruise, but the announcement was wit[illegible]ld until word was received from [illegible]oviet government that Davie[illegible]persona grata at Moscow.

REPORTING on its annual survey, the National Child Labor committee says the improved business activity has been accompanied by a general increase in the use of child labor, with "appalling conditions" in some industries.

"It appears to be hard for the individual who sees business and trade reviving," the report said, "to pause to consider the extent to which this process of creating wealth is being built upon the backs of children who need to be in school instead of having their youth ground out of them at labor."

KARL VON OSSIETSKY, German pacifist who has been imprisoned by the Nazi government after being convicted of treason, has been awarded the Nobel peace prize for 1935—and the Nazis are exceedingly indignant, looking upon the award as "an impudent challenge and insult to the new Germany." Ossietsky, who is seriously ill, was released from prison recently but is under guard by the secret police. His "treason" consisted in printing an article some time ago saying the German army was secretly rearming.

The peace prize for 1936 was given Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentine foreign minister, recently president of the League of Nations assembly and active in ending the Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay.

ORIS P. VAN SWERINGEN, the Cleveland financier who, with his late brother M. J. Van Sweringen, created a great railway empire, died suddenly while on a railroad trip to New York. In his 57 years of life he rose from being a newsboy to a commanding position in American transportation. The great depression almost ruined the brothers financially, but Oris was well on the way to complete financial recovery.

DICTATOR JOSEF STALIN, in one of his exceedingly rare public speeches, presented to his fellow countrymen the proposed constitution which he himself has written for the U. S. S. R. The document promises many new liberties and privileges to Russian citizens. These include equal suffrage, the secret ballot, the right to work, leisure, material security in old age, education, equal rights for women, universal equality of citizenry, freedom of conscience and the right to worship, freedom of speech, press, assembly and meetings and the right to organize into any group except political bodies.

THAT work relief as administered by the federal government be gradually discontinued is [illegible] of the board of [illegible] Chamber of Commerce. The board adopted a report of a committee headed by John W. O'Leary of Chicago which held that the work relief "proves in operation to fall far short of its purposes and to create new problems."

J. W. O'Leary

"The committee," said the report, "does not propose sudden and instantaneous stoppage. Those gradual steps should be taken which are always essential when adjustments have to be made upon a considerable scale.

"There is at present danger that, ceasing to have work for unemployed persons as its function, this activity will undertake to replace some of the functions of private enterprise in advancing recovery. There can be no substitute for private enterprise in the development of improved economic conditions."

NEW YORK'S state's unemployment insurance law was upheld by an equally divided United States Supreme court, Justice Harlan Fiske Stone being absent on account of illness and taking no part in consideration of the case. There was no formal opinion and no announcement of the lineup of the court.

In the opinion of legal experts the court's action has wide implications affecting not only state employment insurance and other social legislation, but also the administration's social security program.

BY A vote of 21,679 to 2,043 the convention of the American Federation of Labor approved the action of the executive council in suspending the ten unions that are with John L. Lewis in his Committee for Industrial Organization movement. However the convention accepted the advice of President Green and voted to renew the council's offer to talk peace with the rebel unions and to give the council power to call a special federation convention and expel the rebels if peace negotiations fail.

The convention approved the executive council's decision that no steps should be taken to form a labor political party.

EDWARD F. McGRADY, assistant secretary of labor, was still trying to bring about a settlement of the great strike of maritime workers, but didn't seem to be getting along very well. Indeed, the situation was made worse by nationwide strike calls to the Masters, Mates and Pilots association and the Marine Engineers union. Federal operation of emergency ships to Alaska and Hawaii was discussed but not decided.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington. — Many observers around Washington lately have noticed something of a change in President Roosevelt's attitude since the election which so overwhelmingly returned him to office. From most any standpoint you assume, you will note, I believe, a more critical attitude on the part of the President concerning the schemes advanced by his advisers. He is apparently examining the suggestions, the proposals and programs laid before him much more cautiously and carefully than was his record during the past three years.

Change in Roosevelt

It is yet too early to catalog this attitude as a change on Mr. Roosevelt's part but surely it is noticeable. If he continues it, it is all to the good for the country. If he continues it, it cannot fail to mean better administration, better legislation, sounder national policies. It necessarily must mean as well, that there will be fewer of the half-baked ideas, plans which the President had not considered fully, programs he had not thought through.

One of the important indicators of this changed attitude on the part of Mr. Roosevelt comes in the form of an announcement in which Mr. Roosevelt named a committee of outstanding agricultural authorities and citizens whose job is to prepare a long-term program for alleviation of the farm tenant problem, if not its complete eradication. Secretary Wallace will head this committee which is to report early in February and the appointment of Mr. Wallace to this job incidentally seems to assure his retention as head of the Department of Agriculture—and there had been some question whether he would remain.

Of course, the farm tenant problem long has been a cancerous growth on American agriculture. It has been spreading. Previously, I have reported in these columns how official figures disclosed an increasing number of farms operated by tenants and owned by absentee landlords. It has been a problem for some years and seems to be growing more acute. Hence, the President's move would seem to mean that the federal government [illegible] going to put its [illegible] to the oar and [illegible] to do something about it.

* * *

Now, it may m[illegible] that the federal government w[illegible]reate another b[illegible] dollar government - owned corporation or it may mean subsidies or any one of a number of other federal aids. I do not want to prejudge it, however, because certainly the President is to be commended in approaching the problem in a sensible way, namely, the creation of a committee to give the question a thoroughgoing analysis before legislation to alleviate the condition is proposed.

What It May Mean

That is what makes it so significant. A year or two or three ago, some braintruster sitting in a cobwebby office would have suddenly had a thought about the "renters" and other types of farm tenants; he would have felt very sorry for them and would have determined in his own mind that they must be made the beneficiaries of "the more abundant life" right quickly. He would have sought and obtained an appointment with the President; would have related the beautiful picture he had conceived in his own limited mentality and, in all probability, Mr. Roosevelt would have shouted, "fine, fine."

The next thing that would have happened would have been the drafting of a piece of legislation for submission to congress. It would have gone to Capitol Hill with the stamp of administration approval and all of the automatons of the house and senate who owed their positions to Roosevelt blessings, would have voted for it. It would have become law without serious debate and, as in most cases, without most of the representatives and senators having understood what it was all about. The results of such legislation are beginning to show and it is going to be necessary to remake a great deal of it. The trouble was that these theorists and impractical men never were able to see more than one narrow phase of the problem with which they were dealing and Mr. Roosevelt did not take the time to find out for himself what all of the factors were.

It is quite evident, therefore, that one thing the New Deal badly needs is more co-ordination among its own people.

* * *

I referred above to the necessity for co-ordination among governmental departments as to policies and that leads into the long-time need for actual reorganization of the physical structure [illegible] federal government. [illegible] tain signs emerging [illegible] ing now occurrin[illegible] advance of a c[illegible] that in[illegible] may be[illegible]

Changes Needed

ward: this much needed reorganization.

It is highly important that it be done. I think everyone agrees with that statement. Mr. Roosevelt is in a position to do it. He is one of the few Presidents of recent years who has been in a position to do it. He is in that position because of the tremendous majority his party possesses in house and senate and I think it can be said unequivocably, if Mr. Roosevelt cannot do it or does not do it, it never will be done.

It goes without saying that there are scores of unnecessary agencies now in existence, most of them the children of the New Deal. There is overlapping; there is conflict of jurisdiction and there is a superabundance of ideas from every source that affect or influence operations of other agencies. It is a tangled skein and the untangling is going to be a difficult job. The whole setup is shot through with politics and politicians and to decapitate political patronage is a man-sized job. The job now may be made even worse in this regard by the fact that never in history have there been so many shades of opinion in congress. The natural result of this sort of thing is that the various groups of blocs insist on carrying out particular pet schemes and those pet schemes nearly always mean a new governmental bureau, commission or what have you.

As far as present conditions have developed, none can foretell exactly what Mr. Roosevelt has in mind concerning the new government structure. It goes without saying, of course, that the major departments, each headed by a cabinet officer, will constitute the basic framework of whatever co-ordination or consolidation Mr. Roosevelt eventually proposes. But it is outside of this framework where the real co-ordination is needed. It is among the countless alphabetical soup agencies that the pruning knife and the axe must be wielded with utter abandon. A lot of needless and, in many cases, irresponsible government policies are worked out here. It is among these agencies as well where waste in the form of reckless spending and badly conceived programs has taken place to the greatest extent under the Roosevelt administration.

* * *

Such [illegible]ordination and consolidation as the President attempts, therefore, can accomplish a very great deal in the way of budgetary reforms and relief for the taxpayers if the job is undertaken seriously. Indeed, as the situation now shapes up, elimination of about 50 per cent of these so-called emergency agencies and complete eradication of their parasitic policies constitute an important approach to a balancing of the Treasury budget.

Relief for Taxpayers

Since this is a fact, it must be recognized that the proposed consolidation movement has obstacles outside of political patronage. Politicians enjoy spending money and when they see various of their pet bureaus or commissions going the way of all flesh, they naturally will be frightened and it will take all of the strength Mr. Roosevelt possesses to keep them in line when they realize that money is being taken out from under their very noses.

Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt can reorganize the government. He has 329 Democratic representatives in the house and 75 Democratic senators. Against this legislative strength of the party in power are 89 Republican representatives and 17 Republican senators, minus three or four senators who wear the Republican label but who are New Dealers at heart.

If Mr. Roosevelt is serious about this government reorganization and if he wants to force it through, I have no doubt at all that he can gain public support for his program. I have no doubt at all that if he were to go on the radio and deliver an address about the plan, there would be such a deluge of mail to representatives and senators from their constituents that they would not dare oppose the scheme. There would be more than one reason for support of the President in this activity. Next to the fact that people out through the country generally hate bureaucrats and red tape in their government, the important reason for the support which Mr. Roosevelt surely could have would come from the taxpayers who are beginning to realize what the federal government is costing them. That is one job that the Republicans did in their campaign to elect Governor Landon of Kansas. They made the country tax conscious and it is an influence that is going to rise up and haunt the New Deal administration and members of congress for some months to com[illegible]

Bacteria Attacks Unprotected Areas of Meat--Expert Explains Way to be Sure Meats Will Keep Thru Summer

By S. Eugene Colgin

I have smoked more than two billion pounds of meat. On my father's farm 30 years ago I discovered what happened to meat during smoking in the old smokehouse. Fine drops of moisture appeared on the hams and sides. The smoke was "condensing" on them. This led to my discovery that smoke could be condensed, and simply "brushed on" the meat. What untold hours of backbreaking labor FIGARO Condensed Smoke has saved since then!

S. S. COLGIN, who discovered FIGARO

Years of research, since, have revealed what really causes meat to spoil. Note photograph "A." This is what the eye of the microscope sees when focused on that old enemy, green mold. Mold is a "fungus"; technically not a bacteria, but its action is similar. This parasite attacks the surface of the meat. Photo "B" shows the cause of rancidness, usually near the bone. It is a bacteria, shown here through the microscope's eye. And photo "C" shows that pest called the "skipper," which is in reality the larva of a fly. It lays its eggs on the meat, and at the first warm spell, they hatch.

There is only one known way to prevent all these troubles. That is thorough smoking. Of course everyone knows how uncertain the old smokehouse is. Other so-called smoking methods, or substitutes for smoking, are likewise risky. How can you tell whether or not the meat is thoroughly smoked? But if you want to be SURE your meat will come through the hot summer months sweet and wholesome and eatable, brush every square inch with FIGARO Condensed Smoke. It penetrates. It positively prevents skippers, mold, rancidness, or drying out of the meat. And it costs only one-third of a cent per pound! Your dealer has it, or can get it, in two sizes—32-oz. (enough for 500 lbs.), $1.50; and 16-oz. (enough for 250 lbs.), $1.00.—Adv.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle aged surgeon, is possessed of seemingly supernatural powers. He is able to anticipate what people say before they utter a word; occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, however, is in love with Dan Carlisle, a professor at the University who has little means.

"Of course not. We'll play two sets out of three," she insisted stubbornly, and they came back to the court again.

She coasted through the remaining games of that set, husbanding her strength, making him run when she could, placing the ball rather than driving it. He took the set at six-four.

"There," he suggested. "That makes it even-Stephen. Let's call it a draw!"

"Of course, if you're tired," she said derisively.

He grinned. "You're a glutton for punishment."

"I've just begun to fight," she warned him.

"All right, have it your way," he assented. "It's my serve. Let's go."

And without pause, they began again; but Dan's game now had softened. She won his serve, then her own, and the first three points of the next game. On the third point he served a double fault; and she picked up the balls and walked toward the net.

"Dan, you beast, you're letting up," she said in angry accusation.

"Not a bit of it," he insisted.

"Liar," she retorted, and her eyes were hot. "Don't you suppose I know? And if there's anything I hate, it's to be babied."

"Why, listen, Nance," he protested. "I— Well, as a matter of fact," he confessed honestly, "I thought you were pretty hot and tired. We're not playing for blood, you know!"

"I'm going to beat you if I can," she said furiously. "And you're to beat me if you can. Is that clear?"

He hesitated, himself angry now. "Perfectly," he retorted then. "You asked for it. I'll give it to you!"

And he turned and stalked back to the service-line. She took her place to receive. "Ready?" he barked.

She nodded, and the ball came blazing at her. Her whole arm tingled from the shock of it. Her return caught the net cord, dropped for an error.

His jaw was set, his face bleak. "Ready?" He took the game. The next. The next. He won five games in a row; and with the score two-five against her, she prepared to serve.

Driving herself to the limit, she served and came in. His return was hot; she met it weakly, could no more than pop the ball feebly into the air. She saw his body bend backward for the smash, saw the sweeping curve of his racket, heard the explosion of the shot; and then something struck her bare leg just above the right knee.

She felt a pang like flame, a sickening agony. She heard his low cry of dismay, and heard her own voice in a keen fine wail of pain; and the world swam and dissolved, and she was on hands and knees, on the ground, dizzy, almost fainting.

Then he was holding her in his arms, and crying out regrets and self-reproaches, and trying to lift her; and the sandy surface of the court abraded her bare knees; and then she was being carried, and abruptly she was being kissed, and so forgot her hurts. Chaos resolved itself into order again, glorious and beautiful. She lay on turf, cradled in his arms, clinging to him.

"I didn't mean to, Nancy!" he cried desperately.

"Please mean to, Dan," she whispered, drawing him nearer.

"I don't mean—this," he confessed confusedly. "Oh, I've meant this, always, I think. Only I never had the nerve. But—hitting you . . . Was it awful? I'd rather break my arm."

"It was terrible," she assured him, smiling through tears. "I thought I'd die! Nothing ever did hurt so. Please be sorry for me."

"Sorry? Honey, I'd—" He hesitated, and his eyes clouded, and he released her. He said awkwardly: "I'll get your coat. You'll be chilled."

"I'll never be cold again, darling," she vowed.

But he left her while he fetched her coat and his sweater. She looked ruefully at the red blaze on her knee.

"That's going to be black and blue," she told him, when he returned.

"And red, and orange, and yellow," he predicted. "You let your father look at it. It might need something."

"I think it's grand," she said, smiling at him as he knelt beside her, drawing him near. "I hope it stays that way for days and days."

And a moment later she said: "If I'd known it took that to make you—do this, I'd have let a ball hit me long ago!"

He frowned miserably. "Nancy, I shouldn't have—kissed you."

"Why not?" she demanded. "I liked it. I think you should do it again."

He protested: "You know darned well—I can't, darling."

"Why can't you?" she challenged.

"It's just a matter of common sense," he urged. "You know what your father and mother—"

"Is it them you want to marry?" she demanded hotly. "Dan, you make me tired!"

"I know," he said. "And I'm sorry. But—my salary is less than your dress-allowance. And it will never be much larger. I'll be a professor, eventually, of course; but you know what that means. It might be years before we could even manage to keep a cook!"

"Will you please get it through your thick head," she insisted, "that I want to marry you. Do you think I'm afraid of working, of being poor, or anything, as long as I have you?"

"It isn't what you think, sweet," he said. "It's your mother and father!"

She said after a moment, seriously: "Mother's all right. I can count on her. She knows you, your people—knows how fine you are. But father might be unreasonable." Her brow furrowed. "I've never felt that I—know father very well," she confessed. "He's given me everything, done everything for me; and I know he's proud of me. But I always have a feeling it's a sort of impersonal, possessive pride. Sometimes I'm—afraid of him!"

"Nonsense," he urged. "He's a mighty able man, and a fine man. I don't blame him; but Nancy, from his point of view, you rate some one a lot better than me!"

She drew the coat more snugly around her shoulders. "He sha'n't interfere," she said, a faint desperation in her tones; and suddenly she clung to him. "Dan, Dan, I want you. I want you."

He held her close and tenderly; and when he spoke, his head was high. "All right, Nance," he said simply. "I don't know how we'll manage it, but what you want is what it's going to be. We'll work it out, somehow. I'll see your father."

He saw her eyes shadow with faint fear. "Not yet," she objected. "Let's not tell anyone yet."

He chuckled reassuringly. "Whatever you say," he assented. "Now run along and get that shower! Good-by."

When, an hour or so later, Doctor Greeding came home, he alighted from the car at the side door, and came into the house while Thomas took the car to the garage. But in the small side hall, he paused, attentive, and stood for a moment motionless, almost as though he were listening; but there was nothing to hear. Yet his posture suggested that he heard something, or sensed something.

And this was in fact the case. After an instant he saw the rackets and balls where Dan had laid them down; and he crossed and picked up a ball, and then a racket, and held them in his hands. He frowned faintly, and looked right and left. The question in his mind was answered now, and the answer was unwelcome.

He put down the tennis gear and ascended the stairs. Nancy's room was opposite the head of the stairs; he hesitated, then knocked on her door. She called sleepily:

"Who is it?"

"Mother home, Nancy?" he asked.

"I don't think so. I don't know. I've been asleep."

"All afternoon?" he protested, without opening the door. "On a fine day like this?"

After a moment she replied. "No," she said. "I played tennis for a while."

"Who with?" he asked, carefully casual.

Again it was an instant before her answer came. "Judith Plank came over," she replied at last.

At that word, the man's brows drew together, and a surge of unaccustomed anger swept him; but without com[illegible]ent, he went on toward his o[illegible]m. He closed the door behin[illegible] [illegible]ood alone there, his head bent, his thoughts racing. For he knew that Nancy had lied; and that his daughter should lie to him, since it implied a criticism of himself, woke in the man a fretful rage.

It was a moment before he perceived in her mendacity the further implication that she was fond of Dan Carlisle; and Doctor Greeding's eyes flickered at the thought.

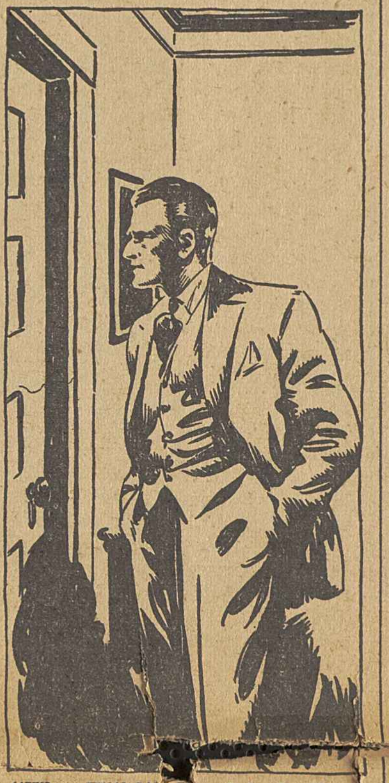
He saw that the door into Mrs. Greeding's dressing-room was open, and crossed to the door and spoke her name; but she was not here.

He stood in the doorway, looking around this room furnished in a fashion so distasteful to him. The black-and-white chairs, the gaudy draperies, that hideous, ridiculous malformed chunk of marble, shapeless, meaningless. All the anger aroused in him by the knowledge that Nancy had lied, and what her lie implied, concentrated suddenly upon this ugly marble.

He crossed and picked it up in his hands, turning it over and over, hating it. He wished to break it into bits, smash it to dust. He abhorred this harmless chunk of marble with an unreasoning venom. It was the scapegoat upon which he poured out his wrath.

And while he stood thus, holding the marble in his hand, a strange thing occurred: Suddenly the statuette was no longer in his grasp. Rather, it was snatched away from him as though by an invisible force. The thing left his hands, and for an instant, while time stood still, it seemed to waver in the air.

Then it fell to the floor. The fall was no more than a few feet; yet the solid marble, even before that impact, appeared to burst apart in midair. It lay in a litter of shards and dusty fragments.



"Who With?" He Asked, Carefully Casual.

Doctor Greeding's eyes distended with an incredulous astonishment, with something like dismay. He stood for a long time looking down at this rubbish. Then he wiped his brow and went softly back into his own room.

CHAPTER II

Doctor Greeding closed the door behind him, as uneasy as a guilty small boy. Mrs. Greeding, he knew, treasured that absurd statuette; she would be, when she saw it broken, querulous and angry. But this in itself was not enough to account for the inward disturbance which shook him.

It was incredible that a fall of three or four feet upon a hardwood floor should have shattered that solid chunk of marble into a hundred pieces; yet it had! Another man would have dismissed the incident as casual mischance; but Doctor Greeding even in this moment suspected that something within himself, something violent and explosive, had struck the statuette and shivered it to dust. He rejected the thought with all the power of his logical and scientific mind; yet it persisted.

And he had, too, that sensation common to every man: the certainty that somewhere, somehow, this had happened to him before. He was even able presently to identify this memory. As a boy on the farm he had been whipped one day, and sent to his room to reflect upon his sins. There a lamp, at which he was staring unseeingly through a mist of angry tears, somehow toppled off the table beside him and fell and was broken. Accused, he denied—in honest sincerity—that he had touched either table or lamp, and was whipped again for his denial. His father, between strokes of the strap, said vehemently:

"One thing I can't stand is a lying young one, Ned! I'll take it out of you!"

And Doctor Greeding remembered that hour now. That day, sent to his room, he had been in a brooding fury at the thrashing he had just received. This day likewise he was filled with a tempestuous rage. After his conversation with Ira Jerrell, the discovery that Nancy had been playing tennis with Dan Carlisle was enough in itself to disturb him. Dan, from Doctor Greeding's point of view, was a penniless instructor, with no prospects worth considering—and no discoverable ambition likely to lead to financial success. Certainly he was not equipped to rival Ira Jerrell.

Yet he was young, and even Doctor Greeding could perceive a certain charm in him. So, finding that Dan and Nancy had been this day together, the man was quick to a jealous alarm. When Nancy lied to him, his uneasiness became anger—which, translated and focused upon a material object, had shattered solid marble into dust!

Doctor Greeding contemplated these facts in silence, conscious of strange stirrings in himself. Presently he pressed the bell. Ruth, the second maid, answered. She was a thin, pale, black-haired woman, who habitually wore an expression of pained disapproval. She and Margaret, the fat cook, had served the Greedings loyally for years.

"Fetch me a cocktail," Doctor Greeding directed.

"A cocktail?" Ruth echoed, in protesting astonishment; for Doctor Greeding was an abstemious man, not given to drinking alone.

"Certainly," he said crisply. Then with a cautious feeling that some explanation was necessary: "I'm tired. I'll lie down awhile. Are we dining at home?"

"No sir," she told him. "At the Jordans'." And she disappeared.

He had removed his outer garments and put on a dressing-gown before she returned with the shaker and a glass upon a tray. She set them grudgingly on his table and withdrew; and he drank two or three cocktails, quickly, standing at the window where he might watch for Mrs. Greeding's return. There was a deep impatience in him; and when his wife's open roadster presently turned in from the street, he swung about toward her dressing-room, waiting for her to come upstairs.

He could hear her in the hall below giving some instruction to Ruth; and he resented the delay. Then he heard her come up the stairs, heard her open the door of her dressing-room, next his own; and then her instant cry of consternation, and then her call:

"Ruth! Ruth!"

The maid came hurriedly up the stairs, and Mrs. Greeding demanded: "What happened to my statuette, Ruth? Look at it!"

The Doctor stood by the closed door between their rooms, listening.

"I don't know, Mrs. Greeding," Ruth indignantly protested. "I didn't know anything about it. I haven't been in the room since just after you left."

"Who's been here?" Mrs. Greeding demanded. "Who's been upstairs? It couldn't just fall; and even if it did, it wouldn't break all to bits like that! That statuette was valuable, Ruth. If you did it, you might as well tell the truth."

"I didn't, Mrs. Greeding," the woman insisted stiffly.

And Mrs. Greeding said apologetically: "Of course not. I didn't mean to seem to doubt you. But who else has been upstairs?"

"Only Miss Greeding, and the Doctor," Ruth returned.

Then Doctor Greeding opened the door between the two rooms. "Hello, Myra," he said casually. "What's the trouble?"

Mrs. Greeding turned toward him. She was a large, fair woman, with hair a little too insistently yellow.

"Ned!" she cried. "Some one's broken my statuette! See!"

"Probably fell off the stand," he suggested.

"Nonsense!" she cried indignantly. "A fall might have cracked it; but it's just ground to bits. Look!"

"It must have been an accident, Myra," he urged impatiently. "Never mind that now. You can get another. I want to talk to you!" He looked toward Ruth, and the woman grimly disappeared.

"Another?" Mrs. Greeding cried indignantly. "Another indeed! Ned, don't you realize that works of art don't come by the dozen! That statue was unique! It was one of Payson's things, and he's practically my discovery, and that would have been priceless when he became known. Another! Ned, sometimes you're the most irritating man!"

Doctor Greeding fought to keep his voice under control. The affair of the statuette was disquieting enough, certainly; but there were other matters better worth discussing. He managed a smile.

"I'm sorry, Myra. Perhaps if you subsidize Payson sufficiently, he'll do you a copy. I expect he'll be glad of the commission."

"But he can't, Ned! Works of art—"

Doctor Greeding said sharply: "Tosh, Myra! Drop it, can't you?"

"But it looks as though some one had just pounded it and pounded it," she urged, in an increasing mystification. "It couldn't possibly break all up that way just by falling."

He said irascibly: "Will you be still! Forget the fool thing. It isn't worth all this talk, surely!"

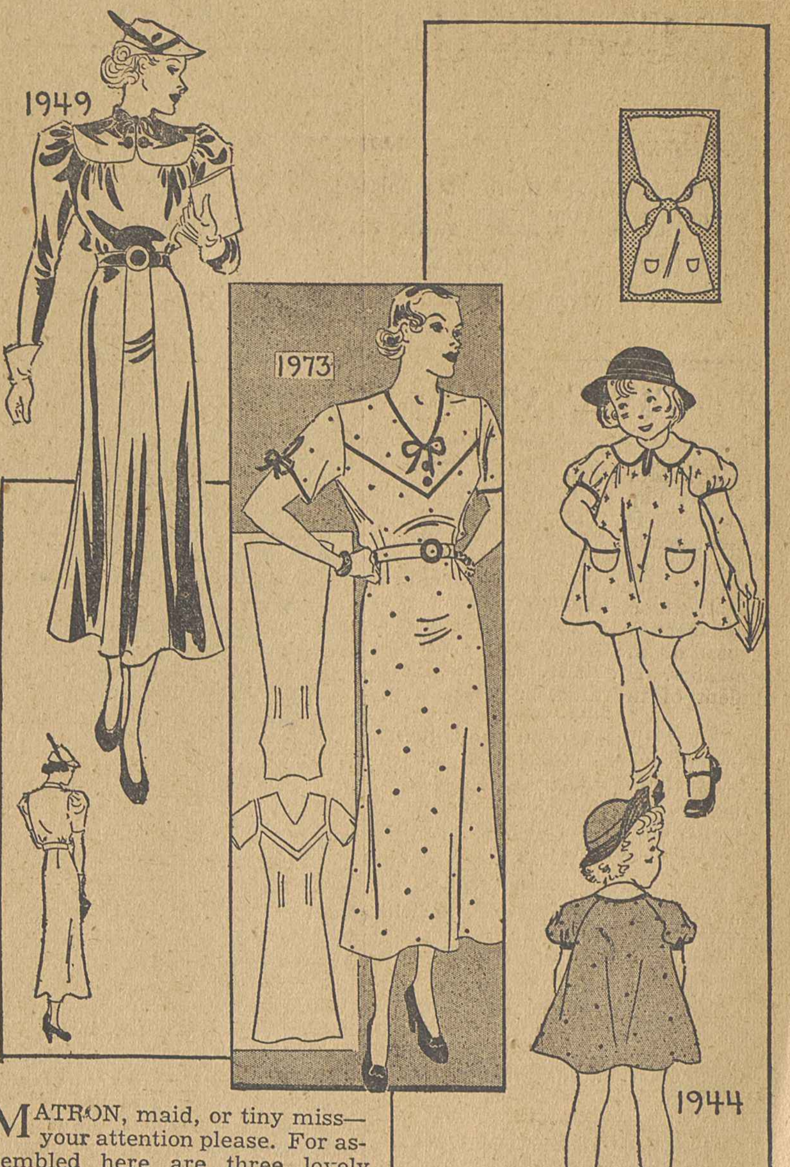
Gloves Worn by Ancients

Gloves were worn by the ancients, though their use was not common. In a hot climate to wear gloves implied a considerable degree of effeminacy. The early use of gloves can more clearly be traced in northern than in southern nations. When the ancient severity of manners declined gloves were generally worn by the Romans. Mussonius, a philosopher who lived at the close of the First century A. D., among other invectives against the corruptions of the age, said: "It is shameful that persons in perfect health should clothe their hands and feet with soft and hairy coverings."

Simple But Smart Models



MATRON, maid, or tiny miss—your attention please. For assembled here are three lovely frocks to brighten your wardrobes. All are designed to be made at home, quickly and inexpensively, and each is accompanied by a step-by-step instruction chart which makes sewing a real pleasure and recreation.

The lovely and graceful daytime or afternoon frock, Pattern 1949, features a novel yet simple yoke and collar treatment, a clever swing skirt, and youthful sleeves, long or short. Chic and stylish, yet as simple as can be, it will make up beautifully in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 (30 to 38 bust measure), and size 14, with short sleeves, requires just 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

The comely morning frock which steals the center, Pattern 1973, is available in a wide range of sizes and takes top honors for comfort and versatility. Requiring just five simple pieces including the belt, it goes together like a charm, to fit perfectly and make your morning chores so much lighter. The pointed yoke is slimming, the set-in sleeves are free and open, and the skirt is dart fitted at the waist. As easy to make as to wear, this pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Send for it today. Size 38 requires just 3⅝ yards of 35 inch fabric, dimity or percale or gingham or seersucker.

The tempting model for tiny tots, Pattern 1944, is likewise utterly simple to make, yet as cunning as can be. Good for party or for play, it is a pattern you can cut twice and save for future use in any of a wide range of fabrics. The tiny puff sleeves are cut in one with the shoulder with just two simple pieces for the front and back of the dress. The size range—six months, one, two and three years. The one year size requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material, and if you wish you can make the pockets, cuffs and facings in contrast.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Patterns 15 cents (in coins) each.

Uncle Phil Says:

That Is Perfection

Perfection does not consist in doing singular things; but it does consist in doing common things singularly well.

The sophisticated person finds little to enjoy. Everything is old to him.

A man who knows that his hardships made the best part of his character may not want his son to have hardships.

Everyone remembers what a great man says. So much the worse for his reputation for consistency.

Poise is something that keeps one from speaking too suddenly.

Those That Tried

Failures are facts that prove a man has at least actually tried to be successful.

Self-expression is seldom as beautiful as self-control.

If you want to make your friend happy instead of seeking to have him make you happy, that's the true gold.

We always feel great admiration for those clever people who can mend something when we break it.

Always be sure your friends can grant the fa[illegible] before you ask it; then there [illegible]n't be the pain and embarrassm[illegible] of refusal.

Admitti[illegible]r faults is half way to corre[illegible]hem; but the laziest half.

Appetizer

Take large mushrooms and remove stems. Wash and fill cups of mushrooms with sausage meat. Put under broiler and cook until meat is done, and serve hot on small pieces of toast.

These may be served as a luncheon dish on toast, with a rich cream sauce.

CIVIC CLUB

The Montevallo Civic Club met at the Baptist Church Wednesday at noon, for the annual entertainment accorded the football team of Montevallo High School. Thirty-three football team guests were present, which, together with the club members in attendance, made the total of the group above fifty in number. Dr. A. W. Vaughan, president of the Club, presided.

For the introduction of the guests, the president called upon Coach Leon Hicks, who presented each of the football team members individually, and telling the position each played on the team.

Before taking up the program of the football team, a number of items of business were transacted.

The committee previously appointed to provide for the program for Ladies Night, reported a tentative arrangement to hold the special meeting on Tuesday night, December 15th.

President Vaughan rehearsed the former interest displayed by the club in the possible formation of a county-wide organization for public welfare work, and stated that the Club recently had a request from the County Seat to send representatives to a mass meeting to be held for that purpose in Columbiana on Friday of this week. Upon motion to send representatives, the President appointed a committee to attend, headed by Z. S. Cowart, chairman.

The committee previously designated to make nominations for club officers for the first half of 1937, announced ready to report. The following recommendations were made as nominations, and accepted by the club:

President, Luther E. Shaw; vice president, Dr. A. F. Harman; secretary, Eugene May; treasurer, Z. S. Cowart; Board of Control: Stanley Mahan, Dr. J. Alex Moore, and Eddie Watson.

Coach Hicks spoke to the group about twenty minutes, going over the past football season in detail, and outlining prospects for the coming season. His presentation of the football picture was received with much interest by the club members. Mr. Hicks and the football boys were assured of a continuation of the interest of the men of the club in their future football endeavors.

Economic Highlights

Not even in the boom days was there such a surge of extra dividends, wage increases and employe bonuses as this season. Corporate indusctry is pouring out money to its stockholders and workers in unprecedented amounts.

A list of extra dividends and bonuses declared would take many pages to detail, but here are some outstanding items: Steel has announced a 10% advance in wages, which will up payrolls $70,000,000 in 1937. General Motors will pay its workers a Christmas bonus of $10,000,000, in addition to other benefits. Chrysler has voted an extra dividend of $5.50 per share. Eastman Kodak declared a 75-cent extra, and Jewel Tea Company $2.00. Standard Oil Company in New Jersey will pay a $4,500,000 bonus to workers, and Sears Roebuck one of $1,500,000.

Upshot of this is that dividends of various big industries will be as large as in pre-depression days—while wages, in some cases, will be higher. Steel's new wage rate is the highest in its history, General Motors is 10% above the 1929 average. Business Week says that next year industry's labor costs will possibly be the highest in all United States industrial history.

What caused this amazing change? Obvious answer is better times—and there is no question but what industry in general has pulled out of depression, has entered a period of recovery.

But that isn't the entire answer to why business is figuratively breaking its neck in an effort to get as many dollars as possible into the hands of stockholders and workers before 1937 dawns. Big and potent influence is the new tax bill on undistributed corporation profits, passed by the last Congress.

This tax bill levies taxes of unprecedented severity on such profits—taxes ranging up to 27 per cent. But when the profits are distributed in either wages, bonuses, or dividends, the tax is avoided. And that is the major reason why businesses is following its present lavish general course. According to The New York Journal of Commerce, distributions of stockholders ordered for the last three months of this year directly traceable to the tax law, total at least $500,000,000.

Economists are highly dubious of the ultimate results of the law, fear it will prevent industry from building up surpluses that are essential if future depressions are to be survived. In the meantime, however, the tax is helping cause a veritable dividend and wage boom.

At this writing, President Roosevelt is on his way to the inter-American peace conference at Buenos Aires, where he will make a speech the first day and then return. He was preceded south by an imposing American delegation headed by Secretary of State Hull—implacable fighter for better commercial and diplomatic relations between countries.

There has been considerable discussion concerning the value or the futility of the conference. Some point out, with truth, that there is no danger of a war arising in North or South America, that Europe and the East are the danger spots.

However, it is the President's belief—which is shared by many—that if the nations of the Western Hemisphere show Europe that a round-table discussion of issues can lead to amicable settlements and agreements, some progress toward world peace will be made. And it is likewise believed that if the presidnt takes a forthright and aggressive stand for peace and throws his vast prestige against armed conflict, heads of powers which are now close to war may think again before giving command to open hostilities.

The President's trip to Buenos Aires is thus in the nature of a gesture in a world which was never closer to armed chaos. As a matter of fact, in recent months there have been more occurences contributory to war than there was in 1912 and 1913.

Everyone hopes that gesture will be productive of good. In the meantime, it seems that every seasoned news commentator and every old-time war correspondent, is certain that war in Europe and Asia is Inevitable—one of the leading correspondents recently stated, on departing for Europe, that he was going to cover the next war.

The Italo-German recognition of the Spanish rebels has further widened the cleavage between these powers and France and Russia. The greatest force existing today in both Europe and Asia is the force of hatred.

That old bogey, "The cost of living," is again in the headlines. Some industries are considering plans whereby the cost of living index will be used as a basis for wage increases and decreases. An advance in the index is forecast for the near future.

Here's Magnificent Film Fare—"Come And Get It!"

SHOWING AT THE STRAND THEATRE THURSDAY AND FRIDAY

Samuel Goldwyn's magnificent film version of Edna Ferber's colorful novel of the lumber camps, "Come and Get It!" bows in at The Strand Theatre Thursday and Friday nights, and promises an audibly enthusiastic audience with a rousing evening's entertainment.

An inspired cast, headed by Edward Arnold in the role of Barney Glasgow, the chore boy who became a lumber matron, brings Miss Ferber's vivid characters to life with uncanny accuracy and the film catches all the color, the thrills, the danger and the fun of the story.

Arnold's Best Work

Arnold gives what is unquestionably his best performance as Barney. Joel McCrea is perfect as his son, Richard who wins the girl his father loves. Lovely blonde Frances Farmer gives a fine, understanding characterization in the difficult dual role of Lotta, the colorful cabaret singer whom the powermad young Barney loves but leaves to marry the boss, plain, tight-lipped daughter; and Lotta's beautiful daughter with whom he falls hopelessly in love years later but loses to his own son.

Walter Brennan, the "Old Atrocity" of "Barbary Coast," turns in another grand peformance as Swan, the Swede lumberman whom Lotta marries; Mady Christians, the lovelovely Vienesse actress, gets a real opportunity to show what she can do as the Swedish aunt, Karie, and Mary Nash, the brilliant stage star, is superb as Barney's wife.

Magnificent Entertainment

Others who shine in the perfect cast are Andrea Leeds, beautiful, dark-eyed Goldwyn discovery and Frank Shields, the handsome tennis star. Andrea proves she can act as well as look lovely in the role of Evvie, Barney's daughter, who, seeing her father's unhappiness in a loveless marriage, spurns her mother's proper choice and marries the poor, but promising Tony Schwerke, splendidly played by Shields, who looks to his reviewer like an important new heart throb for the feminine fans.

Our hat is off to Samuel Goldwyn for the lavish production, to Howard Hawks and William Wyler for their spirited direction, to Jules Furthman and Jane Murfin for a brilliant script, to Omar Kiam for his costumes, to Richard Day for his sets, and of c[illegible] to every last member of the [illegible] cast.

Here is the magnif[illegible]ntertainment for anybody's m[illegible]—"Come And Get It." The pr[illegible] is released through Unite[illegible]

BOY SCOUTS

Anniston, Ala.—Every Legion post in the state sponsoring at least one Scout Troop is the objective of the Boy Scout program of the Alabama Department of the American Legion for the current year, it was announced here following a conference of Department Commander, W. Taylor Boyd of Sylacauga, and Horace Wright of Anniston, Department Boy Scout Chairman, with Boy Scout officials.

Boy Scout officials meeting with the Legion representatives included Harold W. Lewman of Memphis, Regional Executive; General Robert E. Noble of Anniston, president of the Choccolocco Council, and L. E. Hood of Anniston, Executive of the Choccolocco Council.

Another project planned for the year, in addition to the main goal of having all posts sponsor troops in an essay contest in Americanism, with medals to be awarded to the winners in each Boy Scout Council and in the final State-wide meet. All Boy Scouts in the state will be eligible to compete in the contest, which will be conducted on an elimination basis through the districts and councils, with a representative of each council entering the finals to compete for State honors. Each Scout in the contest will be required to write his own essay, which will be on some phase of Americanism, one of the important points in the American Legion program.

Organization of the Legion program on Boy Scout work will be along the lines of the Scout set-up, rather than in accordance with tha Legion districts, to make possible a closer cooperation between the council executives and the Legion representatives, it was stated.

The organization is not complete, but the following council chairmen have already been announced: C. D. Tommie, Gadsden, Choccolocco Council; E. A. Zelnicker, Mobile. Mobile Council; and R. S. Ward, Hartford, Southwest Alabama Council, with headquarters in Dothan.

Chairmen for the three other councils in the State, the Birmingham, Montgomery, and Tennessee Valley Councils, will be named later.

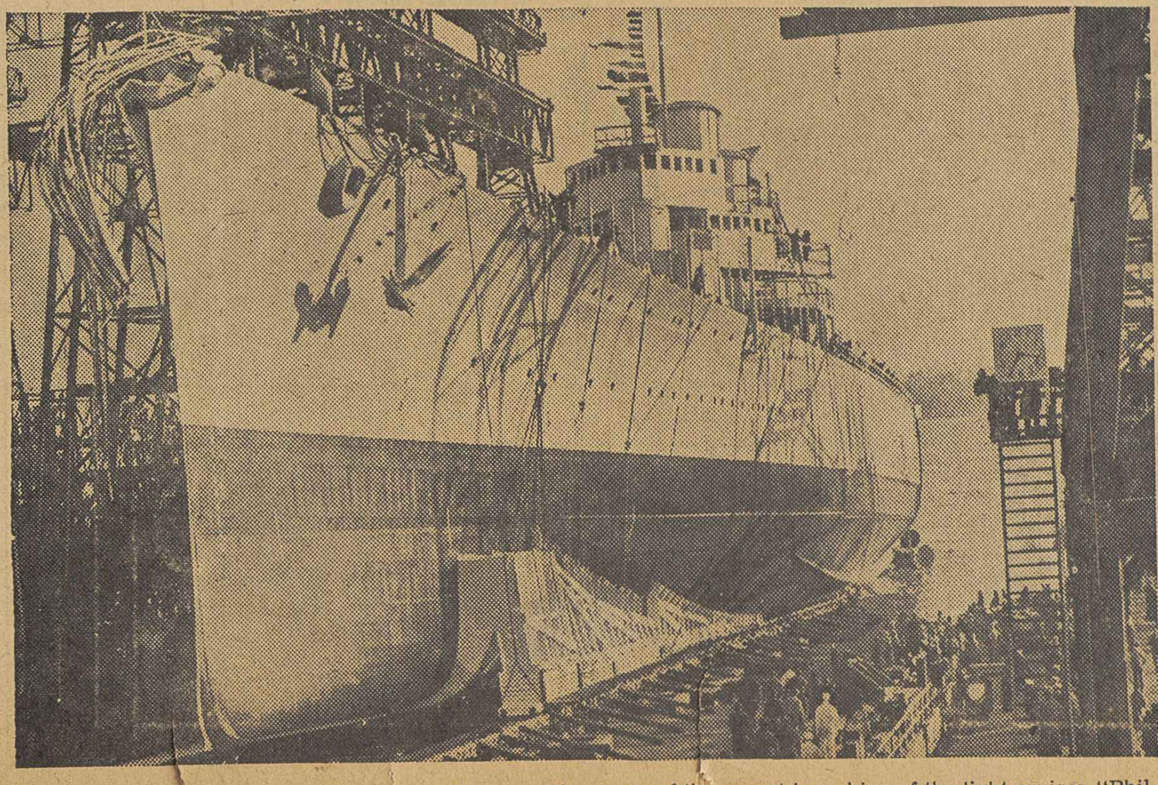
Fifth "Philadelphia" Is Launched for U. S. Navy



The Philadelphia navy yard, appropriately, was the scene of the recent launching of the light cruiser "Philadelphia"; fifth naval vessel to fly the U. S. flag under that name. Mrs. George H. Earle, III, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, sponsored the new craft, that is seen here sliding into the water for the first time.

American Workers Stage "Stay-In" Strike in Plant

Emulating the example of industrial strikers in France a few months ago, approximately 1,000 workers in an automobile parts plant in South Bend, Ind., held the fort during a recent strike. While the operations of the plant were halted, wives, sweethearts and friends passed food into the workers who chose to remain inside the plant.

Union Springs Field Trial Meet Dec. 14

Montgomery, Ala.—The third annual running of the Union Springs Field Trial Club will be held on December 14 and 15 on the Maytag Preserve, near Union Springs. A large entry is expected for the all-age and derby.

Most of the better known handlers are expected to attend and the country's best dogs will battle for honors in the all-age running which carries a guaranteed purse of $600. The derby purse will be 75 per cent of the nominating and starting fees.

The judging will be capably handled by R. W. Salisbury, N. C., and C. C. Stephenson, of Holly Springs, Mississippi. Both are good judges and well known among dog owners and handlers.

A great deal of interest has been shown in the past in the running of this trial on the historic Maytag Preserve and a large gallery should be on hand when the first brace goes down. In past trials on these grounds 30 to 45 coveys of birds a day have been found and if weather conditions are favorable the gal 'ery will see lots of bird work th year, as the crop of quail is r ported to be normal.

Lunch will be served on grounds each day by the ladi Union Springs and there plenty of good saddle horse per day for anybody wishing in the gallery and see for them high calibre dogs that make bir history on the famous Maytag P serve.

Mending New Baby

In the course of her duties the nurse was washing baby, and little Jackie, aged three, was a silent, but interested onlooker. He watched her pinning on baby's clothes, and at last his anxiety got the better of him.

"Nurse, are you sure this is a new baby?" he asked.

"Why, yes, dear," she replied.

"Well, nurse, if he's a new baby what are you mending him for?" was the surprising inquiry.

Safety First

Little Hinks presented himself at the office with a noticeable gap in his upper dentures.

"Hullo!" was the cry. "Had an accident?"

"No," he replied. "Only a row with the wife."

"What! You surely didn't come to blows?"

"Oh, no," said Hinks. "But next time I gnash my teeth I'll remember to take my pipe out of my mouth." —London Tit-Bits Magazine

Huddle Info Reveals $253 Is Necessary for Big Ten Player

IT COSTS $253 to get each Big Ten football player ready for a game. This includes such items as equipment, coaches' salaries and stadium upkeep, but fails to include the prep school draft price, intercollegiate waiver price and incidental rewards, emoluments and bonuses . . . Bill Osmanski, Holy Cross's great sophomore fullback, wants everybody to know that his kid brother, Joe, is even better. Joe right now is achieving numerous touchdowns for Central high of Providence . . . Is there any truth to the repeated gossip that the flu epidemic which disabled Army's squad a week or so ago really was ptomaine poisoning?

The Four Horsemen, most celebrated backfield of all time, got their chance because of a scandal occurring while the boys were still freshmen. A nearby town, anxious to win a local game, hired some Notre Dame regulars. Next year these players were ruled ineligible, and so the four sophs had immediate opportunity to ride down into history . . . Tip to Bill Terry and Joe McCarthy—Watch Bill Booth, Ohio State back. Unless Columbus critics are greatly mistaken he will be a major league infielder within a season or two.

Gil Dobie

Can it be that the commercial aspect of football finally has dried up all the human juices of the customers? A few years ago a cheer always was the first act on the program. Now such salutes for honored guests are almost as rare as the cheers teams used to exchange after games . . . Gil Dobie has real cause for smiling. The large and powerful Hank Woronicz, who enabled the Boston college frosh to beat Holy Cross yearlings, is as good as nine-tenths of the nation's varsity ends.

Minnesota's quarterback doesn't play favorites. Fourteen Gophers have shared in the scoring this season . . . Princeton players say that Danny Lewis of William. is the best center they have opposed in two years of facing such other greats as Robertshaw of Navy, Ray of Dartmouth and Hauze of Penn . . . Another center not properly noted by the experts is Moose Stewart, L. S. U. soph.

Navy's football program, which peddles for four bits, should be the best money maker of all such aids to the athletic association. It is filled with fat ads from armament manufacturers and similar disciples of peace and prosperity . . . Although they agree he is the best referee now doing business, Red Friesell worries the officials who work with him. He is so alert following the ball that he dives into pileups a split second after the whistle has sounded.

Kipke Is One of Game's Most Nervous Coaches

Aside from the way Penn walloped his Michigan team, Franklin field also provided another severe strain on Harry Kipke's nerves. While watching a game he wanders up and down the sidelines, nervously picking and chewing blades of grass. But even a team as lucky as Yale would be hard pressed to discover a blade of grass on Franklin field . . . Ashel Day, center for Georgia Tech, was the first All-America player selected by Walter Camp from a Southern college . . . Veteran observers claim that the roughest, toughest game played this year was between Colgate and Holy Cross.

Skip Stahley, Harvard assistant coach, sighs whenever he thinks of the high school team he saw perform in his Lebanon home town several seasons ago. The backfield was composed of Dick and Jack White, now of Princeton; Ditt, North Carolina fullback, and Pete Smith of Temple . . . Bob Stewart, sub end who hails from Rochester, is destined to become one of the best basketball players in Syracuse history . . . Members of Penn's very capable frosh team are almost as good in their studies as they are on the gridiron . . . The proper evaluation of Hunk Anderson, almost as much of a storm center at North Carolina State as he was at Notre Dame, is that he is a truly great line coach, but no great shucks as the head gee.

Fur Borders Flourish in the Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FOR stirring first page news in regard to important style trends, look to the borderlines of fashion—which is by way of calling attention to the spectacular role border treatments are playing throughout costume design this season.

Not only are sumptuous fur borders flourishing in the mode, but designers are performing all sorts of tricks with borderings and bindings of silks, velvets cut on bias, laces, ribbons, braids, embroidered bandings and glittering novelties of various sorts.

To get some idea of the glamor and glory of the situation let fancy run to this—a youthful and enchanting quaint full-skirted frock of black taffeta the hemline of which is bordered with wide Roman-striped ribbon in flamboyant red, yellow, blue and green. Somewhere on the bodice a bit of this bizarre bordering plays up to the gaiety of the skirt hemline, and the effect is all that you might suppose and then some.

However, it is not that just evening costumes are doing the honors with borders, for the demure street gown has subscribed to the border idea with an enthusiasm that knows no bounds. It is ultra chic for the very new and smart circular - cut daytime dresses of sheer black wool, or of the now-so-much-talked-of suede cloth, duvetyn or broadcloth to be outlined with a banding formed of braid or tiny grosgrain ribbon in the gay and lively Tyrolean colors or coronation reds, purples and blues.

So completely has the idea of borders and bindings captured the fancy of designers, they do not stop at mere hemline borderings for not infrequently they allow applied bands or inserts of lace, ribbon or what-not to run around and around the skirt and the bodice, one row spaced above another. Indeed this use of unique and versatile border band and binding treatments is well worth watching, for fashion's spotlight is cast direct upon them.

As to the smart fur borders that are giving high distinction to autumn and winter fashions they are staging just one thrill after another.

The three modes pictured typify newest gestures in border treatments. Handsome gray wolf collars and borders the coat of black novelty-weave woolen shown to the left. This brings up the importance of gray fur trimmings on black. The hue and cry for gray furs gains momentum as the season advances.

A fashion which is taking well is the fur-bordered tunic coat. To the right in the picture you see an interesting version of the general favorite.

The coat centered in the group is new among the newest. In the first place it is all gray and throughout the world of fashion the praises of gray are being sung. In this instance the material is a stunning gray basket wool weave with a wide bordering of gray caracul up-and-down the front. This method of bordering with fur is the "last word."

BLACK WITH JEWELS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Black with a splash of high color is the call - supreme in fashion's realm for this fall and winter. The right kind of an all-black gown, coat ensemble or suit with the right kind of colorful costume jewelry works out the idea to a nicety as the picture herewith assures. Solid black high-lighted by bracelets and finger ring of crystal and rhinestones, creates the dramatic costumes nere shown. Circular plaques of prystal studded with simulated sapphire stone set in prystal. The rhinestone links, form two of the bracelets. The third bracelet consists of two one-and-a-half-inch wide plaques each going half way round the arm, joined by prystal and rhinestone links. The cabochon back and front is set with a myriad of rhinestones. The ring is a rectangular sapphire stone set in prystal. The modish high crowned hat is of black matelasse jersey.

VIONNET CHANGES SILHOUETTE STYLES

Henna brown and burnt orange are the two new shades stressed by Vionnet in her new winter collection. These soft autumn shades are well adapted to tweed sports clothes and are shown in two and three piece tailored suits, simple woolen street dresses and even in afternoon clothes combined with brown or black.

The Vionnet silhouette has been slightly changed in that skirts are fuller and a bit longer—coming to well below the mid-calf line. Broadened and padded sleeves are used throughout to emphasize the shoulder line and many of the sleeves are fashioned loose and open at the wrist.

Street and afternoon dresses are made with severely high necks in front which are often caught down with clips of brilliants.

Combine Wool and Fur in Smartest New Costumes

Wool and fur are combined to provide some of the most striking costumes for fall days in town, on the campus and even in the country. The luxurious ones, of course, star silver fox, sable and mink are destined to be worn only by the chosen few. Equally smart but less expensive types make use of semi-precious and casual furs. These include suave woolen dresses with fur jackets or coats that are warm enough for now. The dresses can go under heavier coats when the weather gets colder and back under the little fur jackets in early spring.

Kidskin is the favorite right now.

Buttons Go Sporty

Inspired by the eleventh Olympiad, American manufacturers of buttons are turning out a variety of sports designs. There are tiny binoculars, tops in two tones, chessmen, boxing gloves (only an inch and a quarter long, but complete in detail), and baseball mits.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

One Big Catch
War Comes Closer
More Houses Needed
Would Not Eat Ladies

President Roosevelt, interrupting his journey to attend to official business, did a little fishing from a whale boat off Port-of-Spain. It was poor fishing, but the President did not complain; he caught something worth while on election day—to catch forty-six out of a possible forty-eight fish is good fishing.

Arthur Brisbane

Europe and Asia seem to be getting a little closer to war, although many wise ones think it still far off.

Germany admits willingness to side with Japan in a fight against bolshevism. Practical Stalin, man of few words, tells Japan what he thinks of her pact with Germany by refusing to renew a treaty that permits Japan to fish in Russian water off the coast of eastern Siberia.

That fishing privilege is vitally important to the feeding of Japan's surplus millions, increasing at the rate of one million new Japanese every year.

Langdon Post, New York's commissioner of housing, tells the American Federation of Labor that a great national shortage of houses exists, because there has been no building. New York City, especially, is in a bad way, according to Mr. Post; there the shortage in housing "may have tragic consequences."

That is good news for the building trades, and temporarily good news for landlords; they will not overbuild. As usual, politicians will seize the opportunity to raise taxes, and presently money lenders will be once more selling real estate under foreclosures.

Life is a brief game of seesaw —now up, that is prosperity; then down, that is depression. The budget is not the only thing that needs balancing.

Our neighbor, Nicaragua, well advanced in modern intelligence, establishes a military flying school, orders fighting planes from the United States, hires a first-class instructor. There is progress everywhere, and you realize it when you read in chapter 26 of Westermarck's "The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas":

In ancient Nicaragua women were held unworthy to perform any duty in connection with the temples, and were immolated outside the temple ground of the large sanctuaries, and even their flesh was unclean food for the high priest, who accordingly ate only the flesh of males.

What a jump from a civilization in which the high priest would not eat ladies that had been slaughtered to a modern air school in which young Nicaraguan women, once excluded from the temples, will be allowed to fly planes and learn how to release bombs!

Schumann - Heink, artist of the operatic stage, and a fine example to all women, is dead at seventy-five.

Young ladies who say "I can't have children because I must have a career," and sometimes have neither, please observe that Mme. Schumann - Heink had a magnificent artistic career and many children also, including two boys killed in the big war, and one on a submarine, who survived.

Winston Churchill, able Englishman, thinks Great Britain, France and the United States should remain "one in support of democracy," and calls the United States "a child of our blood and ideals." This country is the child of many different kinds of blood and ideals. Greater New York includes the biggest Italian city in the world, bigger than Rome or Milan; more than a million of Italian birth or descent. The same New York contains two million jews, many more than ever were in Palestine.

Colombia has written a new constitution, authorizing its government, among other things, to confiscate private property without paying the owners. Conservative citizens of Colombia call that "communistic," which seems hardly an exaggeration.

More pay increases, more bonuses, more distribution of accumulated surplus by big corporations.

Sixty - five thousand workers in textile and shoe industries learn that they are to have Christmas bonuses and better wages.

Two young female geniuses, Misses Fanny Hurst and Agnes Repplier, disagree about book writing. Agnes Repplier says it is "perilously easy"; Fanny Hurst says no, it is hard.

Publishers say all depends on the kind of books you write and the brain you have.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

★★★By VIRGINIA VALE★★★

IT'S said that Fred Astaire has been much upset over the fact that his radio programs haven't come up to expectations. In fact, it's reported that he wanted to drop the whole thing—but just try to get out of a contract to broadcast, once you're in it! He's continuing—and if they'll just give him the right scripts to work with there's no reason why he shouldn't be tremendously successful.

You may recall that Maurice Chevalier felt that same way about his broadcasts—but they were popularly considered flops right to the last, if the opinion of the great American public that stayed home and listened to them counts for anything. Al Jolson was pretty unhappy about his first programs, but he gritted his teeth and went right on.

Clark Gable abandoned his New York vacation after three days of being almost torn apart by autograph seekers and enthusiastic fans, and Carole Lombard didn't even start for the East after hearing what had happened to him.

Clark Gable

Incidentally, during his brief stay in New York a girl who's part of the movie business there noticed a man on the street who looked very much like the famous Clark — face, figure, even clothes bore a strong resemblance. The only difficulty was that he was blacked up—she insists that the man was a white man who'd used burnt cork.

There's a new radio program on a coast-to-coast hookup that ought to interest everybody who has ideas for such programs. It was originated by Octavus Roy Cohen, the famous story writer, and it's called "Agony Column." It is based on letters from people who write in giving problems they want solved.

For instance, here's an example. A boy wrote in, saying that for years he had been searching for the perfect girl. He met [illegible] on a cruise. They didn't even tell their names—just used silly nicknames. But—the ship was the Morro Castle, which caught fire at sea two years ago, causing the loss of so many lives. He doesn't know whether she was saved or not. They were to tell their real names when they landed. So he doesn't even know her name. And he wants to find her.

If you hadn't realized how rapidly Robert Taylor has climbed the rungs of the ladder leading to movie popularity, just consider the fact that he has signed a new seven-year contract which will bring him $2,000 a week at first, and during the last two years will add $5,000 to his bank account each week. All this as the result of a year's work—for until a year or so ago he was just a minor player.

Ruth Chatterton's buying a new plane; she just can't get enough of flying when she pilots her own. Incidentally, doesn't she do a grand piece of work in "Dodsworth"? Never has she given a better performance. And of course it's an exceptionally good picture—the kind that makes audiences applaud when it turns out the way they want it to.

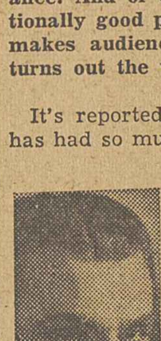
It's reported that James Cagney has had so much difficulty with his first picture made under his new affiliations that he'd be glad to bury the hatchet and go back to working for Warner Brothers.



James Cagney

Which brings up the fact that Bette Davis has shown that she can take it. After losing her legal fight with Warner Brothers and being forbidden to make pictures in England, she announced that she'd come home and go back to work as if there had never been any trouble.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Greta Garbo certainly has changed; she goes to parties occasionally nowadays . . . She may do a modern picture to follow "Camille," before she gets into costume for "Beloved," which is laid in the time of Napoleon . . . If you think Colonel Stoopnagle and Budd sound a bit breathless when they begin their broadcasts, remember that they've probably been practicing jig steps to Don Voorhees' music by way of warming up . . . Paramount plans to have Bing Crosby make pictures with plots, and sing just incidentally, from now on . . . At least one of the big motion picture companies has been signing up young actors and actresses on 30-day contracts—but paying them no money; just keeping them from signing with anyone else, while the company decides whether to use them or not.

"The Man Who-O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

DEMONSTRATIONS

CONVENTION "demonstrations" —those amazing exhibitions of hysterical enthusiasm, usually manufactured rather than spontaneous—had their origin in the Republican convention of 1860 in Chicago.

The two leading candidates were William H. Seward of New York and Abraham Lincoln of Illinois. The New York delegation brought along a prize fighter named Tom Hyer and a band which marched about the streets playing martial music.

To match these noise-makers, supporters of "Old Abe" hired a Chicagoan "whose shout could be heard above the most violent tempest on Lake Michigan" and a leather-lunged Dr. Ames, who, though a Democrat, also consented to whoop it up for Lincoln. But the real "blow-off" came when Lincoln was nominated on the fourth ballot. An eye-witness has described the scene as follows:

"The immense multitude rose, and gave round after round of applause; ten thousand voices swelled into a roar so deafening that, for several minutes, every attempt to restore order was hopelessly vain . . . A man appeared in the hall bringing a large painting of Mr. Lincoln. The cannon sent forth roar after roar in quick succession. Delegates tore up the sticks and boards bearing the names of several states, and waved them aloft over their heads, and the vast multitude before the platform were waving hats and handkerchiefs."

Another chapter in convention "demonstrations" was added in the Republican convention, also in Chicago, in 1880. Roscoe Conkling of New York led the forces that had determined to nominate Grant for a third term. At the first mention of Grant's name, a demonstration began which lasted nearly half an hour. Conkling, noted for his "aristocratic coldness," unbent enough to stimulate enthusiasm in the galleries and among the delegates by his handkerchief. Then Robert G. Ingersoll started wave after wave of frantic cheering when he grabbed a woman's red shawl and waved it aloft.

Men tore off their coats and used them for flags. Then the Grant delegates seized the standards of their states and started a parade around the hall—thus starting a custom which has been perpetuated to this day.

KEYNOTERS

HOW many of us recall the keynote speech of Senator Steiwer at the Republican national convention in Cleveland this year? Or that of Senator Barkley at the Philadelphia gathering of Democrats?

The answers to that one fortify the fact that keynote speeches fade rapidly, then die as completely as an ancient mackerel. The only one which persevered through a campaign was delivered at the Democratic convention of 1916 and later events made a farce out of it.

That keynote was delivered in favor of Woodrow Wilson; the man who voiced it was Martin H. Glynn of New York.

Like the "Three Long Years" which Republicans emphasized in 1936, Glynn's keynote beat the tom-toms for Wilson's achievements in avoiding war in 1914, 1915 and 1916, ending each recital with the assertion: "But we didn't go to war."

Seizing upon the then catchy phrase, which set convention delegates on their ears, the Democratic national committee made the race on the slogan of: "He kept us out of war." It barely lasted to re-elect Wilson, for two months after beginning his second term the United Staes was in the war.

Success of a keynote in this particular instance was made at least partially possible by the pussyfooting tactics of the rival party. They didn't want to discuss the war. But the American voters were talking about nothing else!

One other keynote has found a place in our permanent political history. It was delivered by imposing Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana at the Bull Moose convention of 1912 which brought Theodore Roosevelt back into the spotlight.

Said Beveridge: "The people's government has been usurped by the invisible government, and the people's government must be given back to the people again."

Even today, with history recording a Bull Moose defeat, there is something about this well-turned phrase which accounts for the perpetuity which has fallen to it.

Terminal of Gota Canal

Gothenburg is one of the terminals of the Gota canal, which winds over 240 miles through the heart of Sweden, sometimes following lakes, sometimes rivers, sometimes a canal so narrow that trees at the sides of the banks brush the small steamers on the water. All in all 56 miles of canal supplement the natural waterway. These various links were completed more than 300 years after the project was first conceived and undertaken.

On to Success—

◆ With It Comes Boldness in New Ideas; Our Sphere of Friends and Activities Expands

A POOR salesman may be a genius at gardening; an indifferent stenographer sometimes never suspects her own gift for cookery, for dress design, for ability to pick up foreign languages. By thinking candidly about yourself, by being as friendly to yourself as you would be to another, you can often draw up a picture of your tastes, abilities, desires and hopes which will astonish you.

Take an inventory of yourself, paying special attention to the things you like but which you have start putting them into it.

From Interest to a Specialty

Often we have to begin slowly —reading, or finding courses of instruction within our means, or working out a program for ourselves in solitude; but every day something can be done toward the new way of living. It can grow from an interest into a hobby, from a hobby into a side line, from a side line into a specialty. Then comes the day when the unsatisfactory work can be given up (to someone who will find it as satisfying and as absorbing as we find our own new field) and success is at last really and noticeably on its way to us—or we are on our way to it.

Vitalizes Character

Then living begins to be fun. We meet people with the same tastes, not just the chance acquaintances who come our way in an uncongenial profession. Having succeeded once, we begin to show a little daring; we try new ideas more boldly, and our world of friends and activities expands even more. Chances we couldn't even imagine until we got inside our real work turn up on every hand. Best of all, even a small success has a vitalizing effect on character.

That is the most interesting discovery that success brings in its train: those who are living successfully make the best friends. They are free from malice and spitefulness. They are not petty. They are full of good talk and humor.—Dorothea Brande in Cosmopolitan.

Star-Studded Cast Marks "Libeled Lady" at Strand

New Hit Has Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, and Spencer Tracy

Jean Harlow—William Powell—Myrna Loy—Spencer Tracy all in one picture! There is a collection of outstanding film names each of which is capable of ruling a motion picture cast in his and her own right. Only once in a movie moon is such a stellar aggregation of movie stars gathered together for one production. Metro-Goldwyn Mayer has assembled them for its extragavant production of "Libeled Lady," the new season "special" which comes to the Strand Theatre this week for a run of two days, Sunday and Monday.

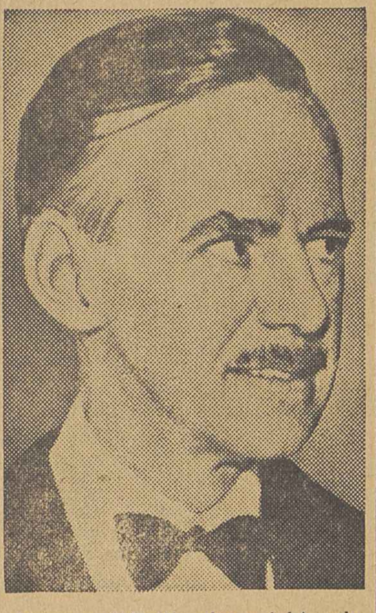
It is a well known fact that when a film company loads four of its greatest personalities into one picture, that picture has what it takes. "Grand Hotel" and "Dinner at Eight" are outstanding examples of star dubbed hits of the past. Now comes "Libeled Lady," engrossing story of an heiress slandered by a metropolitan newspaper and suing for libel to the tune of five million dollars! The movie involved four principals—the heiress, the newspaper's managing editor, the girl whom he is pledged to marry, and a very clever gentleman of the Lothario school who has achieved a unique reputation for his unrivaled ability to quash just such libel suits.

The story presents not only a cross-tangle of emotional conflicts upon the part of its four forceful protagonists but also reveals a new angle on dramas stemming from the newspaper angle. Its author is Wallace Sullivan one-time Chicago Star reporter,. Its screen play is the work of three prominent writers, Maurine Watkins, author of the successful stage play "Chicago"; Howard Emmett Rogers and Geo. Oppenheimer. Its director is Jack Conway, who proved his ability to handle all-star casts with his brilliant production of "A Tale of Two Cities."

Miss Harlow, fresh from her recent success in "Suzy," plays the role of Gladys, who is persuaded to enter into a marriage of convenience in order to help compromise Myrna Loy in the role of the libeled heriess, Connie. Powell is the man selected to "frame" Miss Loy in order to force her to drop her suit, and Tracy is the harassed managing editor of The Evening Star. Prominent in the supporting cast are Walter Connolly, Charley Grapewin, Cora Witherspoon, E. E. Clive, Lauri Beatty, Otto Yamaoka and Charles Trowbridge.

Of interest in connection with "Libeled Lady," is the fact that its stars, while having never before been assembled for one picture, have worked opposite each other as co-stars. Miss Loy and Powell first achieved co-starring success in "The Thin Man," and recently created a triumph in the sensational "Great Zeigfield." Miss Harlow and Tracy were the principals in "Riffraff."

NOBEL PRIZE WINNER



Eugene O'Neill, playwright, who has been awarded the 1936 Nobel prize in literature. O'Neill's most famous plays are: "The Emperor Jones," "Anna Christie," and "Strange Interlude." Mr. O'Neill is a native New Yorker and noted for blunt realism with which he portrays the lives of his characters.

State Capitol News

Success of the administration's revenue program designed to raise approximately $6,000,000 to keep the schools open seemed assured today, despite an elaborate demonstration by hundreds of merchants and their paid employes who descended upon the Capitol Wednesday to protest the administration's 1½ per cent gross receipts tax bill.

The "March on Goat Hill" proved a dismal failure to its chief sponsor—The Consumers Anti-Sales Tax Association—when the bill-drilled demonstrators revealed their disinterest by deserting the House chamber, where the Ways and Means committee was in session. The throng sought more colorful diversion from their enforced holiday, choosing a round of sight-seeing in leiu of the dull arguments of lawmakers and lobbyists.

Despite claims of the opponents of the Governor's financial program that Tuesday's House vote of 47 to 45 against the Senate joint resolution to re-assemble the lawmakers Wednesday instead of Friday was a test vote against the administration, many impartial observers pointed out that but for the absence of eight staunch loyalists the administration forces might have polled a comfortable majority. Moreover, they added, the vote was not cast on a clearly defined issue, but merely a controversial plan of procedure.

Answering charges by Representative Kelly of Clay, Tuesday that the Senate resolution to adjourn until Wednesday "denies the people the right of petition," Representative L. H. Ellis of Shelby, pointed out that the adjournment proposal would not prevent the scheduled public hearing on the privilege tax measure before the Ways and Means committee during the interim.

"These gentlemen are over-suspicious," Ellis declared. "The pending resolution does not endanger their opportunity to be heard fully. The committee will be in readiness to hear them tomorrow, and, therefore, I can see no reason for complaints by any group or faction. However, let me say that while you are listening to the merchants I am listening to the school children of the State who cannot be present, and to the thousands of inarticulate men and women who desperately need the services of the departments of Health and Public Welfare.

"Fifty of my Shelby County merchants conferred with me yesterday," Ellis said. "Those men expressed their views as gentlemen, intensely interested in the welfare of the State and particularly the children who again face the certainty of closed school terms by midterm."

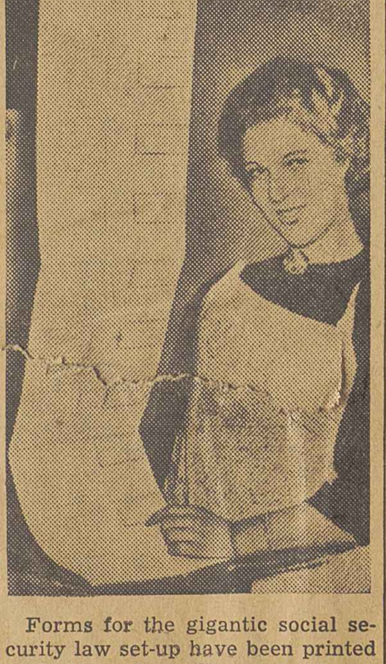
Two measures introduced Tuesday—the first to repeal the State Milk Control act by Representative Eugene Conner, of Jefferson, and a jointly sponsored Senate bill by Senators Thomas of Chilton and Simpson of Jefferson to abolish the costly $135,000 a year "sheriff's feed fee act" of the 1935 Legislature—are sure to raise a storm of controversy when they are aired in committe meeting this week.

Senator Simpson waged a vigorous fight against the "sheriff's feed fee" system during the first special session, but the powerful sheriffs' lobby thwarted him. Representative Conner, close personal and political friend of Senator Simpson, charges that the milk control act has caused the retail price of milk to soar, which, he declares, "is nothing but a tax on children so that milk prices can be controlled."

Senator Simpson was also author of another "parity" bill introduced Tuesday, providing that all tax receipts, except that derived from the unemployed compensation insurance act, shall go into the general fund of the State to be appropriated by the Legislature. This measure, if enacted into law, would literally abolish all special "ear-marked" funds now collected through regular channels and deposited to the credit of the schools, State Highway Patrol, agricultural Department and many other State bureaus and agencies.

A bill by Senator Miller Bonner of Wilcox to make the violation of campaign promises and pledges by political candidates a felony subject to impeachment, caused considerable amusement and consternation.

FOR WORKERS' SECURITY



Forms for the gigantic social security law set-up have been printed at the rate of a million a day by an eastern printing concern. Thelma Mae Myers is shown holding up a strip of the blanks as they came from the presses. It is estimated that 26,000,000 forms will be needed to keep the records of the workers.

HOME DEMONSTRATION WOMEN OF SHELBY CO. MEET

On Saturday, November 28th, the Home Demonstration Club Women of Shelby County held their Achievement Day at the courthouse in Columbiana, with 68 women present. The theme of the program was Christmas, and the program consisted of Christmas poems, songs, stories and readings, and one interesting feature of the day was the exhibit of Christmas suggestions. Each club was asked to bring in any suggestion which might be made at home, wrapped and prepared for a Christmas gift. These included pecans in pine needle baskets, narcissus bulbs, in home made honeysuckle baskets with the Christmas ribbon on the handle, a fruit cake, in which everything was made at home except sugar, flour and raisins, vase of flowers made from native matter sprayed with silver paint and a number of aprons, pillows etc. To this exhibit was added a collection made by Mrs. Dana King Catchell, Professor of Home Economics at Auburn.

At the lunch hour, the plates were served, food having been brought by the women and hot coffe was furnished by the County Council.

Another interesting feature was the talk by Mrs. M. L. Batson, of Birmingham, the ex-State Chairman of the Spread of Farm Bureau Information. Those taking part on program were as follows:

Welcome, Mrs. J. C. Brumbaugh, Harpersville, Alabama.

Devotional, Mrs. W. H. Brymer, Shelby, Alabama.

Prayer, Mrs. Frank Bates, Vincent, Alabama.

Reading, Mary Evelyn Ellis, Columbiana, Alabama.

Talk, Mrs. Earl Swinford, Montevallo, Alabama, Route 1.

Talk, Mrs. M. L. Batson, Birmingham, Alabama.

Poem, Mary Elizabeth Nolen, Columbiana, Alabama.

Story, Mrs. Walter Chancellor, Vincent, Alabama, Route 1.

The day was a very pleasant one despite the bitter coldness outside.

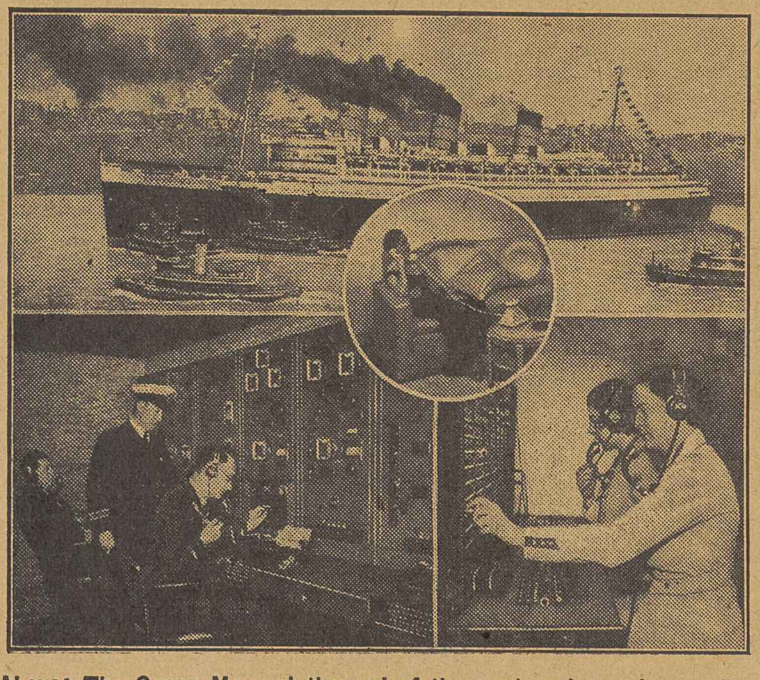
New Liner Queen Mary Has Double Ship-to-Shore Telephone Circuits



Above: The Queen Mary at the end of the westward crossing on her maiden voyage to New York. In circle: All of the first class staterooms are equipped with telephones. Lower left: Technical operators and Chief Wireless Officer J. N. Cragg at the control panels of the ship-to-shore telephone circuits. Lower right: Operators at the ship's switchboard on A Deck.

The S. S. Queen Mary, pride of England's shipping industry and largest man-made thing afloat, is, of course, the last word in maritime equipment. Included among the numerous arrangements for the convenience and comfort of her passengers is the most extensive telephone layout aboard any vessel.

This super-liner is equipped with apparatus providing not one but two independent ship-to-shore telephone circuits, making it possible for passengers to carry on simultaneous conversations while at sea, with friends in America and in Europe. During the Queen Mary's maiden voyage westward, ending in New York City on June 1, a total of 284 telephone calls were completed from and to the ship, and it is estimated that about half that many more were not completed because of the difficulty of locating passengers who were not in their cabins.

The liner was in contact with New York's "Long Distance" at frequent intervals from the time she left Southampton until after she had dropped anchor at Quarantine. Conversations with the ship linked passengers with telephone subscribers on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, in the Middle West, and in Canada. In addition to the telephone conversations, numerous radio broadcasts from the vessel were transmitted over the ship-to-shore telephone circuits to the broadcasting chains on land.

All of the 700 first class passengers have telephones in their staterooms, and the 1,400 passengers in the other classes are served through telephone booths in all parts of the ship. In addition, the entire personnel of the ship is provided with telephone service. Calls are handled through a three-position switchboard, similar to that in a large hotel, located on A Deck. Four young women operators and a male night operator are required to care for the telephone business of the ship, which on the maiden voyage averaged 2,000 "local" calls a day.

The Queen Mary brings the total of ocean liners having telephone connection with the Bell System up to nineteen. This comprises practically all of the large transatlantic liners.

Ship-to-shore service in the Atlantic is handled on the American side by two stations on the New Jersey coast. These stations maintain contact with ships on four different frequencies, the frequency used in any given case depending upon the distance of the ship from the coast and the time of day or night. In general, the greater the distance, the higher the frequency.

Five Colleges In State On Probation

TWO OTHERS PLACED ON CONDITIONED LIST BY SOUTHERN GROUP

Five Alabama colleges have been placed on probation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools because of inadequate salaries for faculty members and financially impaired facilities, The Age-Herald learned Tuesday.

Two other colleges in the state have been placed on the conditioned list, which means that they have been warned they, too, will be placed on probation unless conditions are remedied. This action leaves only three colleges in the state with clear records.

The schools placed on probation are:

Alabama Polytechnic Institute, at Auburn.

Huntingdon College at Montgomery.

Florence State Teachers College, at Florence.

Jacksonville State Teachers College, at Jacksonville.

Troy State Teachers College, at Troy.

The schools placed on the conditioned, or warned list, are:

Howard College, at Birmingham.

Spring Hill College, at Mobile.

Action Called Deplorable

Educators, who declined to be quoted, termed the situation created by the association's action "deplorable." The three colleges in the state with clear records are the University of Alabama, Birmingham Southern College, at Birmingham, and Alabama College at Montevallo.

The action against the schools was taken last week by the association in its forty-first annual meeting at Richmond, Virginia, following study of annual reports of 62 institutions of higher learning.

The Age-Herald was reliably informed that only intercession of Alabama's members of the association's Commission on Institutions of Higher Learning, which submitted the report to the general body, prevented outright suspension of the Alabama Colleges.

Suspension Possible

Under the association's regulations, institutions on probation are subject to suspension at any time.

Except for a temporary probationary period of Huntingdon College several years ago, no Alabama College has been on probation or suspended list in several years, an authoritative source stated.

Suspension from the Association, according to its regulations, would mean that credits from the suspended institutions would not be accepted by members of the association or by colleges and universities in other sections of the country.

Once suspended, an institution to be reinstated, has to apply for membership and meet requirements as if it were a college seeking admission for the first time.

Dr. Guy E. Snavey, president of Birmingham-Southern College, has been secretary-treasurer of the asciation for 11 years, Alabama members of the Commission on Institutions of Higher Learning are: Dr. Charles A. Brown, associate superintendent of Birmingham schools; Dean H. C. Barnwell, University of Alabama, and Dean T. H. Napier, Alabama College.

Dr. Duncan Blames 'Financial Starvation'

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 8.—Dr. L. N. Duncan, president, said Tuesday night that Auburn has been placed on probation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools "because of financial starvation and nothing else."

The Auburn president said that "unless adequate funds are provided Auburn cannot retain her high rank among educational institutions, notwithstanding all statements to the contrary made to bias the Legislature which is the only body that can save Auburn from financial chaos."

Dr. Duncan said that the institution was placed on probation at the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, in Richmond, Virginia last week.

Small Cyclone Hits Shelby County

A cyclone is certainly bad enough when it comes in season. But to have one of the things here in December, altogether the wrong time of the year, when nobody is expecting it, no time to get in the storm pit—well, that is just simply one of the weather man's unpardonable quirks.

But there is nothing we can do about it but tell the story, if we are lucky enough to be left in a telling condition.

We had a twister in these parts last Sunday afternoon. It struck in the Enon, Newala and Spring Creek communities, between Montevallo and Calera.

Near Enon the home of Mr. Henry Blankenship was destroyed. Nine people were at the house when it was demolished. Mrs. Jean Lucas sustained a broken wrist, and two other persons injured.

Mr. J. W. Reid, of the same community, reports that much damage was done at his place. Two poultry houses were torn up, and considerable damage done to his dwelling house.

"I was at the barn feeding my stock when the storm came," Mr. Reid relates. "Suddenly I saw trees and buildings coming apart and things flying everywhere. Then I made a dash for the house, when everything became black as night. I was in the midst of it, covered and blinded by dust and dirt, and pelted on all sides by flying splinters. My boy was feeding the chickens at the same time, and he, likewise, was caught in the storm before he could reach the house. He was hit on the side of the head by something that brought blood."

At the Shep Scott place it is reported that some houses were destroyed, but no injury to persons.

Again the twister descended to earth at Newala, where some four or five houses were completely de- [illegible] leaving the occupants [illegible] to call home. Mrs. Jesse Sellers, who lives in the old Hendrick home between Montevallo and Wilton was carried to Norwood Infirmary Monday evening. She was suffering from an attack of appendicitis.

Mr. T. H. Dudley, of Atlanta, Georgia, visited Mr. Clyde Davis last Friday.

Mrs. Sudie Martin and Miss Florence Fancher, of Piper, were all-day guests here Monday.

Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Riddle spent the week end in Birmingham as guests of Mrs. Gibson. While there, Dr. Riddle lectured to the Young Peoples Department at the Avondale Baptist Church.

Weldon Starts 90 Day Sentence

Adrian B. Weldon, 45-year-old former Chelsea postmaster yesterday begun a 90-day jail sentence for a crime he committed more than 20 years ago.

Indicted for obtaining $1,500 through fraudulent use of money orders early in 1916, Weldon disappeared from Chelsea on June 7, 1916.

Several months later he was arrested by postal inspectors in Nebraska, but escaped on the night of his capture.

In August, 1936, he was discovered living near Boulder, Colorado, under the name of Thomas R. Bice. He had been married. He had served in the World War and received an honorable discharge as Thomas R. Bice. At the time of his apprehension, he was mining for gold.

When arraigned in Denver and later in Birmingham, Weldon entered pleas of guilty and asked for mercy on the grounds that he had suffered indescribable mental torture as a fugitive from justice and had been a good citizen for 20 years.

He was sentenced to 90 days about two months ago by Judge David J. Davis in U. S. Court here. Judge Davis gave Weldon until today to get his affairs in order for the jail term.

Accompanied by his wife, Weldon was cheerful as he begun serving his sentence.

As the federal detention camp at Maxwell Field is crowded just now, Weldon will likely serve his 90 days in the Jefferson County jail, Court [illegible]

The Problem Of Public Welfare In Shelby County

(EDITORIAL)

The present problem of public welfare in Shelby County is a challenge to the thought and action of every person who is in comfortable circumstances. The hungry, sick, and underprivileged of our population are crying for the bare necessities of life. And there is no organized and functioning agency capable of meeting these needs. The public welfare department is able to operate only upon a very limited scale with the comparatively small amount of funds made available from the state welfare department. No local funds are provided for participation in the welfare program.

Last Friday a meeting of citizens was held in Columbiana, called for the purpose of organizing to develop a community chest—money, food, clothing—to be used to extend relief to suffering people in the county by participation in the state's welfare program, or otherwise.

Candidly, it must be said that the meeting accomplished nothing more than to bring to public attention some most significant facts about the problem of public welfare in Shelby County. We think it not out of place here to mention a few of the more striking revelations of the discussions last Friday.

First in importance is the fact—not disputed—that there are many people in Shelby County who are now suffering and will continue to suffer during the winter months for the lack of food, clothing and comfortable shelter. Shelby County and Shelby County people are doing nothing to provide for alleviation of the sufferings and privations of these people. In this respect it is revealed that Shelby is one of the two counties in Alabama guilty of such negligence by reason of the fact that we have no participation locally in the public welfare program.

Significant indeed, and commendable, is the evident interest that is widely manifest on this our welfare problem, among those people who feel it the responsibility of Shelby County and Shelby County citizens to do whatever is necessary to meet the needs.

We believe the people of Shelby County want to see provided and are willing to help provide means whereby the county can fully discharge its responsibility to care for the suffering. But the question has been raised, "Why does not the county, out of public funds, make an appropriation for participation in the functioning of the public welfare department?"

Hundreds of people are willing to give to a community chest fund, but it appears that they want first to know why Shelby County can not and does not help. It was upon that question that the meeting in Columbiana stalled last Friday. It is evident that some funds can be raised for a community chest, even if the county does not participate. But much more can be raised if the county can and will find a way to particiate.

Another meeting is called for Friday of this week, which has for its express purpose the hope of an answer to the question of county participation. Members of the County Board of Revenue are expected to participate in the meeting Friday.

It appears further that the existing and urgent needs, and the interest of the people in meeting those needs presents a suitable opportunity for all concerned—citizens and officials—to use the meeting Friday to come together, place all the cards on the table, shuffle the deck squarely, and deal immediately the proper course of action necessary to put Shelby County into participation in the public welfare program, and provide the relief that is so much needed.

It is time to face all facts relative to this important obligation that can be discharged only by proper and effective action. And in our consideration this one big fact should be kept uppermost—that there is dire need and acute suffering among our people, and it is our duty to take our part in extending the fullest measure of relief of which we are capable.

Joan Crawford With Gable In Dashing Story

Romance Runs Rampant in MGM's Engaging Comedy, "Love On The Run"

Romance runs rampant, adventure has its fling and love conquers all in the delightful new M-G-M comedy melodrama, "Love on the Run," which comes to the Strand Sunday and Monday. Teaming these two exhilarating and colorful personalities, Joan Crawford and Clark Gable, in a dashing tale of modern doings by ultra-modern people the new picture provides excitment and laughter in an entertainment melange of an heiress, a fortune-hunting nobleman, two American correspondents and a brace of European crooks.

As a contrast to her recent historical role of "The Gorgeous Hussy" the versatile Miss Crawford this time appears as a streamlined-model girl dressed in those dazzling creations that only she can wear so well. She is supposed to be Sally Parker, daughter of an American millionaire besieged by the nobility of the foreign capitals, and she looks every inch the part.

When Sally, practically at the altar, learned that her titled husband-to-be is just another fortune hunter she walks out on the wedding, whereupon Gable and love come in on the run. By stealing a plane about the mechanics of which he knows only enough to switch on and open the throttle, Gable gets Sally in the air and they fly away.

The theft involves an ingenous mixup with a notorious spy ring, and for a while things look pretty black for Sally and her savior. But in the end everything is cleared up, not without a generous share of hilarious situations, and Gable is not able only to gather a headlining cable dispatch for his newspaper, but also to win the girl.

As may be expected, Miss Crawford and Gable make a superb romantic team, while excellent support is given the stars by Franchot Tone, Reginald Owen, Mona Barrie and others. No little of the distinctive touches of "Love on the Run" were contributed by its hit-making director, W. S. Van Dyke. He is the man who made "San Francisco" and "Rose Marie." Enough said!

Pageant By Third, Fourth, And Fifth Grade Children

The Third, Fourth, and Fifth grade children of the Elementary School will participate in a Christmas pageant Friday morning, December 18, at 9:00 o'clock. Dicken's Christmas Carol Story will be the theme, with the Nativity Story pantomimed. The music and physical education departments are sponsoring the program. The children and teachers join in an invitation to all parents to come to the Elementary school auditorium for this pageant.

Miss Mary Peterson is recovering from pneumonia. Her many friend will be glad to see her up again.

House Votes Gross Receipts Tax

UNPRECEDENTED TRADING CHARGES HURLED IN FLOOR DEBATE

Concluding a three-hour debate in which charges were hurled on the floor that "unprecedented trading" had brought about an administration victory, the House of Representatives late Tuesday afternoon, by a vote of 58 to 42, passed the gross receipts tax of 1½ per cent.

With the galleries crowded and the lobbies jammed, the tax battle came to an end at 5:45 p. m. Tuesday when the final roll call was taken after Representative Sparks, Barbour, leader of opposing forces said in his brief closing address he already knew the outcome, and that his speech was like a fellow going to his own funeral.

Bill Sent To Senate

The bill, sponsored by Representative L. H. Ellis, was ordered sent to the Senate without engrossment, but since the upper house had recessed for the day, it will not reach that legislative branch for a first reading until Wednesday.

The Senate, which has been considered closer to the administration than the House during former sessions, was expected to send the bill to the finance and taxation committee, with the measure likely to come up in one form or another for final passage next week.

Although the Ellis receipts tax bill was the major issue before the Legislature throughout the day Tuesday, it was actually before the House for consideration from 2 p. m. until the vote was taken on passage, nearly three hours later.

During the morning session of the House, opponents of the tax made their major fight, attempting to set aside an administration sponsored resolution which made the receipts bill the first measure to be considered by the House.

Under the resolution, while the Ellis bill was given precedence over the Boswell liquor bill, the latter measure was made the next special order to be considered by the House, with the House pledging itself to dispose of both bills before it adjourns Wednesday.

Floor Fight Ex

The Boswell bill as a consequence, will come up before the House Wednesday, with another all-day floor fight expected before the House finally passes a liquor bill, probably the Staples state store measure, as a substitute.

During the afternoon Tuesday, with House opponents of the gross receipts tax bill realizing they did not have the votes to defeat the gross receipts tax, most of the House consideration of the Ellis bill consisted of discussion of a series of amendments, but with the exception of one, all were rejected.

Throughout the afternoon the administration majority voted down the amendments upon signal from their new floor leader, Rep. Ellis, but one charge, offered by Representative Miller, of Sumter, was accepted.

That amendment expressly exempted newspapers from provisions of the receipts tax bill, Representative Miller, asserting that while it appeared the bill already exempted newspapers, he was offering the amendment to clear up any possible doubt about the measure's phraseology on the point.

COLONEL AYERS VISITS HERE

Dr. Minnie L. Steckel Speaks To Business and Professional Women In Tuscaloosa

Last Tuesday evening Dr. Minnie L. Steckel, of Alabama College, motored to Tuscaloosa as guest speaker of the Business and Professional Women of that city. Dr. Steckel, research chairman of the State organization, reported progress of the survey she has conducted seeking to ascertain the voting strength of the women in Alabama. The research committee of the local club sponsored the dinner. Other members of the Montevallo organization who attended this dinner were: Mrs. Stanley Mahan, Mrs. Denson Elliott, local president, and Mrs. Roy Hicks.

We are very sorry to report that Dr. F. B. Pearson and daughter, Mary, are on the sick list this week.

Miss Catherine Fancher attended a fiddler's convention at the Rocky Institute School, in Bibb County, st Saturday night, serving as one the judges. The school was the t of her teaching career.

King Edward Defies Cabinet, Clinging to Mrs. Simpson —Garner Mixes in House Leadership Battle —President's Buenos Aires Address.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

Edward VIII

CONFRONTED with the opposition of his cabinet, the high clergy, the leaders of both the Conservative and the Labor parties and goodness knows how many of the ordinary people of his empire, King Edward VIII insists on continuing his intimacy with Mrs. Wally Simpson, presumably with the intention of marrying her. And he does not intend to abdicate in order to cling to the American divorcee. Defying the disapproval of his advisers, the bachelor monarch proposes to test his constitutional right to wed the woman of his choice—provided she consents.

Such, at this writing, is the status of what has become a genuine crisis for the British empire, highly interesting to all the world. The cabinet discussed the affair at length and sent Prime Minister Baldwin to remonstrate with the king, but the statesman got nowhere with the self-willed ruler, and next day told the house of commons he was not yet ready to make a statement. Edward called together his close friends, including his brother the duke of York who would succeed him if he abdicated, and considered the next move in the serious situation. This might be the resignation of the cabinet and the refusal of party leaders to form another government. Some of the English statesmen, like Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, or David Lloyd George or Winston Churchill, might undertake the task at the request of the king, but probably none of them could command the necessary majority in the house. It is suggested that Edward might attempt to follow the example of Charles I, who set up a government without a parliament.

The British press at last has abandoned the self-imposed silence concerning the king's course but most of them declared their opposition or their regret. Public opinion will probably have a great deal to do with solving the problem.

The Church of England will not have Mrs. Simpson as King Edward's wife at any price, the Church Times, its organ, declared; lining up militantly behind Baldwin and the cabinet. Mrs. Simpson and her two previous husbands have been divorced and upon that the church takes its stand, was the Church Times' position.

It is reported on good authority that King Edward is negotiating the sale of his Canadian "EP" ranch to Lincoln Ellsworth, the American explorer.

BRITAIN'S house of lords killed Lord Ponsonby's "mercy death" bill by a vote of 35 to 14. It would have allowed a doctor to end the life of a patient suffering from an incurable and painful disease. The measure fell before the attack of churchmen, who opposed it on religious and moral grounds, and of doctors, who felt that the responsibility was too great to be assumed by their profession.

The archbishop of Canterbury made no objection to the bill on religious grounds, but said: "It is better to leave this difficult and delicate matter in the hands of the medical profession rather than drag it into the open and regulate it by legal procedure."

Vice President Garner

CALLED back to Washington because he is acting President during the absence of Mr. Roosevelt, Vice President Garner promptly involved himself in the battle for the house leadership that is being waged by the supporters of John J. O'Connor of New York, chairman of the rules committee, and Sam Rayburn of Texas, chairman of the interstate commerce committee. Mr. Garner put himself behind his fellow Texan, declaring: "I am for Rayburn 200 per cent. He is the best equipped man for the job and I will do all I can to further his candidacy."

O'Connor's friends and other representatives who had been neutral were astounded and angered by what they considered an unwarranted intrusion by the vice president into a house contest. John D. Dingell of Michigan voiced this sentiment when he said: "The distinguished vice president has a big enough job on his hands as presiding officer of the senate without interfering with the organization of the house with which he has no connection whatsoever.

"The Democratic members of the house in the last congress were compelled to go through a campaign under the untrue accusations from the Republican enemy that they were mere 'rubber stamps' of the President. That accusation hurt the members' feelings sufficiently without rubbing it in by having the country get the notion that the duly elected Democratic members of the house are going to become the 'rubber stamps' of the vice president, so that the Lone Star state may run both ends of the capitol to the exclusion of any participation by any of the other 47 states."

ACCORDING to the New York Daily News, Former President Herbert Hoover may become an expatriate. The newspaper quoted Mr. Hoover "intimates here and in Washington" that he had virtually decided to take up indefinite residence in England as did Col. Charles Lindbergh more than a year ago.

Recalling that Mr. Hoover had seldom lived in the United States after his graduation from Stanford university until the war years, the Daily News said that some of the happiest years of his life had been spent in London, which was headquarters for his mining enterprises in all parts of the world.

President Roosevelt

AS THE cruiser Indianapolis and its convoy, the Chester, entered the harbor of Buenos Aires, a salute to President Roosevelt boomed from the guns of eleven warships, ten squadrons of airplanes wheeled overhead, and thousands of cheering citizens crowded the water front. Argentinians generally approve of Mr. Roosevelt's policies and he was welcomed to their capital as "a great benevolent dictator." They had planned to give him an elaborate reception, but it was toned down somewhat at his request. President Justo, who already had greeted the distinguished guest by wireless, met him at the dock and accompanied him to the American embassy. Then Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and members of the American delegation to the peace conference made a formal call at the government house.

Next day, after a ride about the city, President Roosevelt attended the extraordinary session in the legislative palace to open the Pan-American peace conference which he initiated. A formal dinner for him at the government house and a reception for all conference delegates followed. The event of the third day was a luncheon at the American embassy in honor of President and Mrs. Justo. Then Mr. Roosevelt embarked and started on the return trip, with a brief stop at Montevideo, capital of Uruguay.

In his eloquent address before the peace conference Mr. Roosevelt set forth his program for banishing war from the Americas and erecting economic barriers against war elsewhere in the world. The first task in achieving this, he said, is "making war in our midst impossible," and the second step is to insure the continuance of democracy in the western hemisphere as the best guarantee of peace. He warned the "war mad" nations bent on conquest that the American republics "stand shoulder to shoulder" in readiness to "consult together for our mutual safety and our mutual good."

GERMANY'S cabinet, with Hitler presiding, promulgated a number of startling edicts for the furtherance of the Goering four-year plan of rehabilitation of the reich. Most important of these is the "economic sabotage" law, decreeing death for Germans who "unscrupulously" hoard wealth abroad and "damage the German economy."

This is directed against violators of recent injunctions which put within reach of the government between 1,500,000,000 and 2,000,000,000 marks ($600,000,000 to $800,000,000) which could be converted into foreign currencies should the necessity arise.

Another law orders the incorporation of every German boy and girl, without exception, in the Hitler youth movement, for physical, spiritual and moral training.

The "youth leader of the German reich," Baldur von Schirach, was made responsible directly to Hitler and given the rank of a supreme Nazi authority.

REPORTS to the senate campaign funds committee show that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., gave $70,000 to Republican campaign funds, while Democratic organizations received $50,000 from Mrs. James R. H. Cromwell, formerly Doris Duke, the tobacco heiress.

The committee said it hoped to trace the source of most of the $13,000,000 spent by scores of political organizations in the last campaign, as a basis for legislativ[illegible]mendations to the Presid[illegible]

SPAIN'S government appealed to the council of the League of Nations to deal with the menace to "peace and good will among nations" allegedly created by Italo-German recognition of the fascist rebel junta. Secretary J. A. C. Avenol thereupon convoked the council, though at this writing the date for the meeting is unsettled. It was believed Italy would refuse to attend the session; Germany is no longer a member of the league. French statesmen didn't approve the Spanish action, feeling that it complicated an already serious situation and could do no good.

There were no decisive developments in the long siege of Madrid, but the loyalist defenders seemed to have gained renewed strength and made fierce counterattacks on the Fascists in the University city area. The rebel airplanes repeatedly bombed the city and hundreds of men, women and children were reported killed by their projectiles.

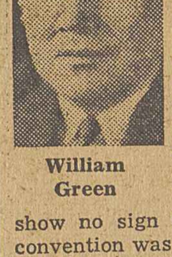
Senator Borah

SENATOR BORAH of Idaho returned to Washington, and one of the few topics he was willing to talk about was the proposition of some French deputies that France settle her war debt to the United States by a payment of 10 cents on the dollar, in order to clear the way for further borrowing of American money. Mr. Borah was quick to declare his opposition to such a scheme, calling it downright insolence on the part of the French, and as he is the ranking Republican on the foreign relations committee his words mean something. Said the senator:

"We settled once at 51 cents on the dollar and that was just about what they owed us at the close of the war. We have no reason to believe that they will keep their word this time any more than they did before. This is no cash proposition. It is another installment scheme. Remember this money belongs to the American taxpayers. If we continue to loan this money and then take it back at 10 cents on the dollar we cannot do any more to promote armaments."

In the French chamber Jean Mistler, chairman of the foreign affairs committee, requested the deputies to drop discussion of the debts question in order that the government "may have a free hand in its present negotiations with the United States." Details of the "negotiations" were not disclosed.

Some Paris observers thought there was an attempt to fix up an Anglo - French - American security pact and that France was ready to reconsider the debt question in order to facilitate the execution of that project.



William Green

WILLIAM GREEN was reelected president of the American Federation of Labor before the closing of the convention in Tampa. Secretary Frank Morrison and the 14 vice presidents also were chosen for another term. In his speech of acceptance Mr. Green made a renewed plea to John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. associates to "come back to our home and fight the common foe." This the insurgents show no sign of doing. The 1937 convention was awarded to Denver.

The convention refused to concur in four resolutions attacking the Supreme court. It instructed the executive council to have a bill for the six hour day and five day week introduced in congress and declared the 30 hour week to be the "paramount objective" of the A. F. of L.

THE cause of world peace should be the gainer by the death of Sir Basil Zaharoff in Monte Carlo. Known as the "mystery man of Europe," he was for many years the master salesman of armaments and amassed an immense fortune in that and other business enterprises. Born in Odessa, Russia, of Greek parents, Zaharoff had all of Europe for his field of operations. He was knighted in England, became a citizen of France and married a Spanish duchess. He gave valuable aid to the Allies during the World war, founding chairs of aviation at Paris and Petrograd and presenting 25,000 pounds sterling to the British government for a similar purpose.

LABOR department statistics reported a jump of 14 per cent in wholesale prices in the approximately three years in which the Roosevelt administration has sought to raise the general price level. The widest gain was registered for farm products, which rose from an index figure of 58.7 three years ago to 85.5. Foods increased from 65.4 to 83.5. All commodities other than farm products and food increased from 77.5 to 80.8.

As figured into living costs, the department's statistics covering purchases by wage earners and lower salaried workers showed an increase for all items, from 77.2 at the close of 1933 to 82.4 in September, this year. The increases were: Food, 69.4 to 84.3; clothing, 76.2 to 78.6; rent, 63.9 to 64.6; house furnishing goods, [illegible]3.5 to 78.2. Fuel and light costs [illegible] from 90.3 to 87.4.

Wilson Policies Fail

Washington. — In proposing a peace pact for the western hemisphere, President Roosevelt in his speech at Buenos Aires has directed attention to two important positions that the United States has taken in its foreign relations. Whether Mr. Roosevelt so intended or whether it is by the very nature of the circumstance, he nevertheless has set up before the American people the necessity for re-examination of the age-old Monroe doctrine and has brought up for fresh scrutiny the policies of President Woodrow Wilson that were designed to establish eventually world peace by collectivist action.

I think that it must be admitted that the Wilson policies for international peace have not worked. Anyone who examines them squarely and frankly must recognize one outstanding inescapable fact: they have proved to be the illusions of an idealist.

They constitute a landmark, however, and in so doing it seems to me they should serve as a guide on what not to do. Candidly, the Wilson policies, beautiful in theory that they were, have been shown to be futile because they did not consider the perfidy nor the chicanery of European statesmen. They were predicated upon a belief that the world leaders were sincere in their desire for peace—and it is sad but true that such is not the case. In other words, the Wilson theories that were builded up into a supergovernment to be called the League of Nations overlooked the element of human fallibility.

It requires only a brief review of the history of the League of Nations to reveal the definite conclusion that there is an absolute lack of sincerity on the part of the European statesmen. Each one has been concerned only with gains and advantages accruing to his own nation. His actions have been permeated to the core with selfishness, sometimes aggravated with desires for personal distinction. The league [redacted] with Russia's Stalin and Germany's Hitler. It took a mighty flop in the movement to check Italy's Mussolini in Ethiopia. Having flattened out, none of the three above mentioned has any respect for the league authority. When you add to this the absolute dismissal of the league as a world influence as was done by Japan, you have less than nothing left.

Wilsonian Illusions

Mussolini said the other day that in order to straighten out the European tangle it would be necessary to wipe out all of the "Wilsonian illusions." He could have referred only to the Wilsonian slogan upon which we entered the World war, namely, the "war to make the world safer for democracy." Later, it will be remembered, the World war was "the war to end war." Neither of these slogans bore fruit. Each was an illusion, a dream of world peace held by a great man whose only weakness in assuming world leadership was that he trusted other statesmen as he trusted the American people, to arrive at a sound conclusion and stick to it.

I am not prepared to say that the Wilson policies led us in a wrong direction. The fact remains, however, that the war that was to make the world safe for democracy led directly into destruction of democracy and the establishment of fascism and communism in various parts of the world as an important factor in the government of peoples.

All of this, of course, was not visible nor predictable at the time the policies were initiated. It is all too plain now, however, and that is why President Roosevelt can very well be governed in his new move with the Pan-Americas. He can proceed upon a Pan-American basis with at least a hope of success because it is quite apparent that the Americas, North and South, can protect themselves if arrangements for prevention of war relate only to the western hemisphere. International affairs will have to be considered, obviously. But among those authorities with whom I have talked about this problem, there seems to be little doubt that if the idea of collectivist action, first enunciated in the Wilson policies—is to avail anything, it must be applied not to the world but to a section of the world.

No Boss Wanted

I noted in the official agenda, the program outline of the Buenos Aires conference, that no reference at all was made to the Monroe doctrine. Apparently, that course had to be followed. The Monroe doctrine is a ticklish matter among our neighbors to the South. Frankly, they do not like it.

Considering all of the factors involved in the Monroe doctrine, there seems no conclusion ahead but eventual abandonment of that pronouncement. When I say that, I do not mean that the principles of the Monroe doctrine need be thrown into the ocean. Yet, the name has been the focal point around which much antagonism has been built up and the romantic Latin blood of South America can hardly be expected ever again to subscribe to the Monroe doctrine by that name.

What, then, is the course?

The Monroe doctrine, whether it was ever so intended, has placed the United States in a position where it is made to appear as a boss. No nation of people enjoys being bossed. So, if the Buenos Aires conference is to result in a definite understanding by which the peoples of the western hemisphere are welded together in an effective group, some understanding must be evolved which will replace the ill will engendered by the Monroe doctrine. Possibly, that understanding lies in the direction being followed by President Roosevelt. Apparently, he is willing to subordinate the Monroe doctrine and concede to those other peoples on behalf of the United States the end of our overlordship.

Undoubtedly, it will be a slow process. Present generations throughout the South American nations will be suspicious for a time and will move with caution but there are many who believe in eventual agreement among the western nations on a general policy that will keep us all out of European and Far Eastern entanglements to a greater extent than ever before.

The thing that may break down the apparent Roosevelt plan is the circumstance of drawn swords and cocked rifles in Europe at the moment. It is entirely possible that before concrete adhesion among the North and South American peoples can be accomplished, explosions in Europe may take place. If they do, propaganda agents of the conflicting powers will be abroad instanter. Attempts will be made to alienate various nations in the western hemisphere, to align them with one side or the other in the European controversy. It may well be that this condition will ruin the Roosevelt program before it gets under way but a start has been made and succeeding generations will profit if the peoples of North and South America can come to regard themselves as an individual group that is willing to make sacrifices necessary to cut off European connections when the European statesmen insist on fighting.

There is yet one more thought concerning the South American sessions. There are students of international affairs who already are saying that history has repeated itself and that the United States has lost, as usual, in its diplomatic dealings. They are saying that the revision of the Monroe doctrine and the rebirth of that policy under a new name represents a gift by the United States. It may well be that such has occurred. But among saner minds, I believe the conviction is that the Monroe doctrine already has undergone so many alterations and revisions that a major operation on its structure will clarify the picture. The Monroe doctrine was designed originally, of course, to prevent European nations from gaining a foothold in either of the Americas. That danger is definitely past. Why, then, is it necessary to perpetuate an antiquated policy that has no purpose any longer? Thus, it seems to me that if a revision, even a casting out of the Monroe doctrine can eliminate suspicion of our government's purposes among those peoples inhabiting the same hemisphere, it is not too much to pay.

Birthday Observed

There was a great banquet held at one of the hotels in Washington a few days ago. It is not unusual for great banquets to be held in the capital city but most of them are just banquets. The one to which I refer, however, had a significance that is quite unusual. It commemorated the establishment of the United States patent office and celebrated its one hundredth birthday.

Something like eleven hundred inventors, research scientists, representatives of industry and patent office officials entered the great dining room by candlelight. Then, the toastmaster waved a wand over one of the greatest inventions of modern times and the room was bathed in an electric brilliance the like of which has never been seen. The action typified, told the story of scientific development in the United States and throughout the world.

To Store Food in Mines
President's Good Idea
No Criticism for Germany
Japan's Many Babies

Arthur Brisbane

While the President talks peace for all the Americas, England, locked in her small island, separated by narrow water from European hatred, realizes that it would be hard to keep out of a big war. She might, some day, move her imperial headquarters from London to Montreal or Quebec, as the French government once moved from Paris to Bordeaux, and the Spanish government recently from Madrid to Valencia.

England wonders what her people would eat if war should be forced upon her, with enemy submarines and airplanes sinking her food ships. She is not self-supporting, and her newly organized "food plans department" will try to store away enough food to last at least a year. As a "cache" for the food, England is using worked-out coal mines, of which many, going down thousands of feet, should be safe from bombardment.

The President's trip to South America proves to have been a most useful idea. Great crowds welcomed him in his brief stop at Rio de Janeiro, as he drove through the streets with the Brazilian President Getulio Vargas, bands playing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The President will talk peace and business, at least as much business as peace, and he will make friends for us all in South America.

You may count that day rare on which Chancellor Hitler's government does nothing new and queer. Dramatic criticism and literary criticisms are now forbidden in Germany. Constructive criticism is of greatest value to actors and writers; the intelligent among them are grateful for it.

The Ruler of the universe was his own critic, "and God saw everything that He had made, and, behold, it was very good." All need criticism, the powerful need it more than others, and Hitler will have it when history is written. His minister of propaganda cannot control that.

Tokyo reports for Japan the world's highest birth rate; 2,180,703 new Japanese babies arrived in 1935, more than in 1934 by 148,931.

Japanese marriages are increasing, divorces decreasing; the latter down to less than one in 1,000 marriages. Japanese husbands and wives get along better than Americans do.

The great contract bridge competition ends and the Harold Vanderbilt cup goes to four players called the Kaplan team: Phil Abramsohn, Fred Kaplan, Harry Fishbein and Irving Epstein. Mr. Vanderbilt, on hand to present his cup, might telephone Chancellor Hitler that you do not have to be an "Aryan" to understand bridge.

Business is picking up and that includes marriage, most important. Chicago university says 750,000 fewer weddings have taken place during the six depression years than would have occurred in normal times. Hence the loss of about one million new American babies that would have been born. Seven hundred and fifty thousand young couples have missed, among them, more than three million years of marriage bliss.

The tide turned in 1935 with 1,327,000 marriages, highest total in our history.

Mr. Green's and Mr. Lewis' union labor organizations indicate that their differences may be settled, which is good news. Organized labor should present a united front against too-short pay and long hours.

The prosperity of the nation depends on how much the workers have to spend.

China says she will risk war with Japan rather than let Japan take more of her territory. If that war comes it will illustrate the difference between a country prepared, Japan, and one unprepared and disorganized, China.

Japan's unspoken answer to China's war threat is her birth rate. Those millions of new babies must go somewhere.

Sir Basil Zaharoff, called "mystery man" and "richest on earth," dead of heart disease at eighty-six, had for his motto, "Every man has his price." He dealt in munitions, and he may have bought, as well as helping to kill, many. Beginning poor, in Constantinople, Zaharoff climbed to the top in money and intrigue. It matters little where you start, what matters is inside the head.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle aged surgeon, is possessed of seemingly supernatural powers. He is able to anticipate what people say before they utter a word; occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, however, is in love with Dan Carlisle, a professor at the University who has little means. They discuss marriage, but decide to delay talking to her father about it. Nancy, who has been playing tennis with Dan that afternoon, tells her father she had been playing with a girl friend. Greeding knows this is untrue and is secretly enraged. Stepping into his wife's room, his eye falls on a marble statuette which he dislikes. He picks it up, wishing he could smash it to bits. Suddenly it is snatched from his grasp as by an invisible force and burst asunder. Mrs. Greeding is greatly disturbed over the mysterious destruction of the statuette. The doctor makes light of it.

She stared at him shrewdly. "Ned, you've been drinking!" she cried. "I can always tell. Your eyes are red. Whatever has happened to upset you? It isn't like you to come home and get drunk and—"

He cried in a deep exasperation: "Stop it, Myra!"

She was, suddenly, pale. "Why, of course, Ned," she said placatingly. "I didn't mean—" She seemed puzzled, incredulous. She came to him, kissed him. "I'm sorry, Ned. I didn't mean to bother you. Had a hard day?"

"No," he barked.

"Then you're worrying about one of your patients."

He shook his head, patted her shoulder roughly. "Not at all," he insisted. "I'm a little tired, nothing more." He released her, and she turned back to the dressing-table. "We must dress now," she said. "We're dining at the Jordans', you know."

"Ruth told me," he assented.

She began to undress. "You'd better hurry, or you'll be late," she said.

He hesitated, but the time was in fact short; and in such matters he was punctilious. He went to his own room, to the shower. But presently, fitting his studs, he came to the door between their rooms again, and saw that she was brushing her hair; he asked in a tone carefully casual:

"Nancy going with us?"

"No," Mrs. Greeding told him. "She's going somewhere with Judith."

His collar pinched his neck as he fumbled with the button; he made a wry face. "Not alone, surely," he protested. His tone was light, amused. "I don't suppose two girls as pretty as Nancy and Judith are likely to go anywhere alone."

"I don't know," she admitted. "I didn't ask! Ford Minick, maybe, or Ethan, or Pete Master, or some of that crowd."

"Nancy doesn't seem particularly interested in any special young man," he remarked. "Or at least, if she is, she conceals the fact from the paternal eye."

"Probably there will be, by and by," his wife agreed. "Nancy'll tell us when she's ready."

The Doctor was conscious of a reservation in her words.

"How about Dan Carlisle?" he asked bluntly.

"Oh, Dan hasn't the money to—play with their crowd," she said, after a moment. "Of course, Nancy knows him."

"I've seen him here once or twice," he assented scornfully. "He seems a pleasant youngster; but I can't imagine any man worth his salt deliberately taking to teaching as a profession."

"I've heard Professor Carlisle lecture," she commented. "He's a charming old man!"

"No doubt," the Doctor agreed in a dry tone; but he said then roughly, impatient of indirection: "Yet the Professor's charm does not justify Nancy's imagining herself in love with Dan!"

He saw her eyes widen, and recognized that she had known about Dan, and had wished him not to know; and his face congested with anger at the thought. She saw his countenance in the mirror, and turned pale; but she said nothing.

"You knew she was?" he said in a low voice, accusingly.

"Nancy's never spoken to me about it, Ned," she urged defensively. "I've only—guessed. I've seen no more than you. It's only that I'm perhaps a little closer to Nancy—understand her better—"

"Closer?" he ejaculated, in a [illegible] of you, I think, [illegible]ssed. "You do act, [illegible] though you owned

"Afraid of me?" His cheek was purple. "Why should my daughter be afraid of me? I'm no ogre?"

"No, you're not," she assented honestly. "You've been generous with Nancy, given her everything; and you're always calm, and kind. But—you've always had your own way. I've worried, sometimes, about what you might be like if—things didn't go to suit you."

There were twisting snakes of fury in the man. He tried to laugh. "Is this some sudden discovery on your part, Myra? This sinister side of my character!"

She rose and came toward him. "Ned dear, please," she said. "I'm sorry! You're upset today, different." She smiled. "I suppose all fathers are furious when they discover that their daughters are beginning to love some one else. Some other man. But you'll have to get used to it, Ned. Nancy's a woman now, you know."

She would have put her arms around him, but he rebuffed her. "Never mind that," he said sharply. "I came home this afternoon and— found that Nancy had been playing tennis with this young Carlisle. I asked her about it, and she said she had played with Judith—didn't mention him. She lied to me!"

She looked at him thoughtfully. "You're so sure of things, sometimes, Ned. Was Dan here when you came? How can you be sure?"

"What difference does that make?" he exclaimed, twitching at his tie.

She returned to her dressing-table. "None, of course," she agreed soothingly. "But for that matter, Ned, what difference does it make if Dan did play tennis with Nancy?"

"I don't object to that," he retorted. "I object to her lying to me!"

She said wisely: "That is—significant, of course. A girl's instinct to conceal, to be secretive, is one of the first—symptoms." He saw her smile wistfully, tenderly, at her own thoughts. "I've realized for some time that Nancy was thinking a good deal about Dan," she admitted.

He said flatly: "It is not going any farther. It is going to stop right here."

"But why?" she protested. "Dan's a nice boy."

"He's a pauper, always will be. Or the next thing to it."

"Do you think that makes so much difference, Ned?" she urged gently. "And—after all, isn't that Nancy's business?"

"I won't have it," he insisted. "I shall make it my business."

"It's possible, you know," she reminded him gravely, "that you—can't do anything about it. Nancy has a will of her own, and—an income of her own, later, apart from you. From my father."

He said tensely: "Myra, what's got into you? You've always stood shoulder to shoulder with me."

"You've always done things I could agree with, and support," she replied. "But I think you would be wrong to oppose Nancy, if she loves Dan, without a better reason than the fact that he has no money. After all, his family is fine."

And she urged: "Finish dressing, Ned. We must go."

He started to speak, then held his tongue. He returned to his own room for vest and coat; and when he came back, she was ready.

"Twenty minutes past seven," she said. "We're supposed to be there at a quarter of, and it's half an hour's drive."

He said: "The others will be late. Wait." He had decided to speak. "I want to tell you something. Ira Jerrell asked me to lunch with him today. He wants to marry Nancy."

Her eye widened. "But Ned, he's as old as you are!" she protested.

"Two or three years younger," he corrected. "And I'm not old!" He was fighting to control the fury in him.

"Oh, Ned," she protested. "In twenty years he will be an old man; and she—"

"He won't live twenty years," Doctor Greeding said explicitly. "I operated on him, you remember. He comes of a short-lived family, and he himself has a heart weakness, latent now, but bound to develop. He won't live twenty years; and when he dies, he will leave Nancy still a young woman, and wealthy enough to—"

Her cheek was pale. "Oh, Ned, that's horrible!"

"It's sensible!" he insisted.

She stared at him in amazement. "Ned, sometimes I can't understand you," she confessed. "There's a hard, ru[illegible]ss streak in you. Most of the time you're gentle and loyal and fine; [illegible] — I'm afraid of you [illegible]times."

His lips were tight with rage. "I'm finding out a lot of things about myself," he exclaimed, and he laughed unpleasantly. "It's queer you never noticed them before."

"You've changed lately," she admitted.

He cried: "I—" But she touched his arm.

"Hush," she protested. Some one knocked at the door, and she opened it. Ruth was there.

"Thomas wants to know will you want him to drive," she said in a resentful tone.

Doctor Greeding shook his head. "No, I'll take Mrs. Greeding's car," he answered shortly.

And Mrs. Greeding, before Ruth could turn away, keeping the servant near as a shield between them, touched his arm. "Come, Ned," she said. "We'll have to hurry."

So they went downstairs together . . .

He drove headlong, some of the fury in him communicating itself to the car. The Jordan home was in Winchester; and Doctor Greeding came to the Fellsway and turned into it to escape the slower traffic on the avenue.

Mrs. Greeding protested uncertainly: "Ned, you're driving awfully fast."

"You don't want to be late," he retorted harshly; and she shrank away from him.

A traffic-light halted them; and when it changed to green, the car beside them leaped ahead and cut in front of Doctor Greeding. His brakes ground to avoid a collision; and the offending car darted away. He said through clenched teeth:

"The rat! I hope he breaks his neck!"

The other car was no more than a hundred yards ahead of them. Doctor Greeding heard like an echo of his words a loud explosion, and saw the other automobile lurch drunkenly to the right against the curb. It tilted up and over, and came down crashing. They were so close behind it that he had to jam his brakes hard down to stop in time.

Other machines penned them in, and instantly there was a small jam of traffic, and a motorcycle officer swept to the scene.

Mrs. Greeding cried: "Ned, he must be hurt! Go see!"

Doctor Greeding got out of his car. His legs were stiff, yet shaking. His shoulders jerked convulsively. His brow was wet and cold. There was in him an incredible certainty hideous and horrifying, and yet in some dark fashion intoxicating and full of promise too.

"He's a Pauper, Always Will Be."

He went forward to where the policeman had dragged the driver out of the wrecked machine. The man lay limp, motionless.

"I'm a physician," said Doctor Greeding briefly, and the policeman gave way to him. Doctor Greeding made a swift examination.

Then he stood up and brushed his hands; he spoke in a voice scarcely recognizable as his own.

"Nothing to be done. His neck is broken, Officer."

The man was dead. He was a middle-aged man, a little shabby. His was an inexpensive car. It was crushed and battered, now, fit only to be junked. The man, fortunately, had been alone. Doctor Greeding, looking down at him, felt terror and contrition— and a dizzying sense of power!

The policeman asked at large: "Anyone see what happened?"

Doctor Greeding cleared his throat, steadied his voice. There was no more anger in him; but rather a quick caution.

"He was driving very rapidly," he explained to the officer. "He passed us at the last traffic-light, and cut in on me pretty sharply. Drunk, do you think?"

"No smell of booze on him," the policeman replied. "His front tire blew out when he hit the turn. I guess that's the answer." He produced his notebook and took Doctor Greeding's name and address, then turned to the others who had pressed around.

Doctor Greeding, at the first opportunity, returned to his car, took the wheel and moved away. He said nothing; but Mrs. Greeding watched him, saw his deep distress.

"Was he killed?" she as[illegible]

The Doctor nodd[illegible]

was moist, hi[illegible]

"That makes me feel—curiously guilty, almost responsible!"

She touched his hand reassuringly. "Ned, dear, don't be absurd!"

"I feel as though I'd wished it on him," he admitted.

"You're perfectly ridiculous," she urged loyally. "He was driving like an idiot. It just happened to—happen right before our eyes."

"Poor devil!" Doctor Greeding muttered; and she looked at him in a secret astonishment. It was not like her husband to be thus senselessly disturbed; and she sought to turn his thoughts into another channel.

"You'd better hurry, Ned," she reminded him. "We're late already!"

So he drove on in silence; but he could not so easily dismiss this tragedy from his mind. Common sense told him that this was no more than one of those incredibly apt coincidences which occur in the life of every man; yet something deeper than common sense, something rooted in the very base and foundation of his soul, cried out against accepting such a simple explanation. He was trembling and shaken with a vast and perilous excitement, like one who stands before a closed door, long locked, in which now the key is fixed, waiting only for him to turn it, and open the door, and enter in.

Suddenly his hands wavered on the wheel, so that Mrs. Greeding caught and steadied it; and she cried sharply:

"Ned!"

"It's all right," he said huskily. "I'm upset, that's all." And he added: "I've a mind to turn around and go home. I don't feel like seeing people."

"Nonsense!" she insisted. "It's what you need."

"Oh, I suppose so," he assented.

But she watched him thereafter with an alert attention, till they came to their destination, where other cars were already parked, and alighted and went in. On the way up the walk to the door, she held his arm, her eyes full of solicitude, till he smiled at her reassuringly.

"I need a cocktail," he said. "That will pick me up."

And in fact, once in the house, greeting a dozen people in succession, he was swept out of his own distracting thoughts. He gulped a cocktail and another, and felt new strength flow into him. In the drawing-room he recognized, standing with Mrs. Jordan and two or three others by the hearth, Professor Carlisle, who was young Dan's father. The professor was a small, lean, gray old man with clear blue eyes; and Doctor Gre[illegible] pulse to cultivate the other as a possible ally against Dan and Nancy, crossed to speak to him.

As he did so, a young woman by the professor's elbow turned to watch him approach; and Doctor Greeding unconsciously paused as he saw her countenance. She was tall, her glance serene and steady. As though she marked his hesitation, there was a faint amusement in her eyes; but after that momentary pause, Doctor Greeding went on, and Mrs. Jordan welcomed him into the group and made introductions.

"You know Professor Carlisle, Doctor Greeding? And Mary Ann? I've put Miss Carlisle beside you at dinner, Doctor, so you can talk shop as much as you please!"

He shook hands with Professor Carlisle and with the girl. Mary Ann's hand in his had a strength which pleased him. He found her deeply, stirringly beautiful. At Mrs. Jordan's word, she smiled again; and Doctor Greeding echoed: "Talk shop?"

But before Mary Ann could reply, Mrs. Jordan swept her away. Doctor Greeding and Professor Carlisle were left together. Doctor Greeding said casually:

"I've met your son, of course, Professor; but I didn't know you had a daughter too."

Professor Carlisle smiled fondly. "She doesn't—circulate as much as Dan does," he assented. "She's a registered nurse—takes her profession rather seriously."

"That is apt to be a—sporadic occupation," Doctor Greeding suggested.

"She was Doctor Homans' surgical nurse until he died," Professor Carlisle explained. "But since then —"

The exodus toward the dining-room began. Doctor Greeding found himself placed at Mrs. Jordan's right, Mary Ann on his other side. Mrs. Greeding was at the other end of the table, beside Professor Carlisle.

The effect of the cocktails the Doctor had taken began to pass, and memory of the tragedy he had witnessed so short a time ago returned to disturb him. By and by he heard Professor Carlisle at the other end of the table utter a word at once strange and vaguely familiar. The word was poltergeist. It touched some chord of memory in him, and he tried to hear what the other was saying; but Mary Ann just then released herself from the man beyond her, and smiled and suggested:

"We don't actually have to talk shop, I suppose, Doctor Greeding; but we ought to say something to each other!"

"The Man Who-O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HOW'RE YOU BETTING?

THOSE loose old days, before betting was considered illegal, brought considerable wagering on the results of presidential campaigns—the amounts at stake frequently totalling millions.

It was back in that era, 1908 to be specific, that brokers making book on the election actually recorded 60,000 to 1 against the chances of one of the candidates. The long shot entry was Eugene V. Debs, perennial Socialist candidate.

That same campaign demonstrated that the professional odds-layers knew considerable about their business. In September, 1908, Taft was the 2 go 1 favorite over Bryan; by October the odds lengthened to 3 to 1 and on election day Taft's chances were rated at 8 to 1, with few takers.

Anyone who believes the professional wagerers are infallible should thumb back the record to 1916 when it is estimated from five to ten million dollars changed hands on the result.

Wilson and Hughes were the leading contenders, with Wilson on the inside track because he was up for re-election. In September, 1916, the financial district in New York was betting 2 to 1 on Hughes. In October the odds were 10 to 7 and even money was placed the day of election.

Closeness of the contest, in doubt for days until California returns moved into the Wilson column perhaps was excuse for the error in judgment by the financiers.

They may be wrong again in 1936 but perhaps it would be well for readers to confine themselves to freak bets, if any at all are made. Perhaps the most ingenious of these occurred in that same 1916 election.

A man, apparently three sheets in the wind, strolled into a commissioner's office, bet $5 he could name 20 states Wilson would carry. He then bet $10 he could name ten additional states. Then he offered $20 he could name still another 10 states.

"And now," he announced, "here's $50 says I can name eight more states for Wilson."

When the rush to take him subsided, the bettor, miraculously sobered, named his states. The "pitch" of his game was that he reserved eight states of the solid South as the block on which the $50 wager was laid. He could not fail to win at least $15!

ALLISON OF IOWA

FIRST honors for "coming close" to the presidency, although he is minus even the standing of an "also-ran," must be awarded William B. Allison of Iowa.

Allison's doubtful honor came to him at the Republican convention of 1888, which ended finally with the nomination of Benjamin Harrison, later elected President.

Delegates to the convention had balloted ineffectually for several candidates when a four-hour recess was taken to permit a counting of noses. Delegates from New York, Illinois, California, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Iowa and Missouri, went into conference.

Representatives from each of these states were practically empowered to act for the entire state delegation. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts spoke in favor of Allison of Iowa after several of the candidates had been discussed. It was finally agreed that Allison's fitness for the high job was apparent and that he should get the support of the conferring states.

New York state had been represented, however, by only three of its four delegates-at-large. The three who agreed on Allison failed to reckon with their absent colleague, Chauncey Depew, the rapier-worded banqueteer.

Depew was president of a railroad at the time. He had been supported as a candidate but was forced to withdraw because of farm belt opposition to the railroads. Much of the opposition to him had come from Iowa and so he turned thumbs-down on Allison.

Subsequent events proved that if Depew had not balked, the conferring states would have nominated Allison and he would have been elected President in place of Harrison.

The ironical part of this personal catastrophe is that Allison's stature measured fully as high as the job demanded. He had moved out to Iowa as a young lawyer, served eight years in the lower house of congress and, beginning in 1872, was a United States senator from the Tall Corn state for an unbroken period of 35 years.

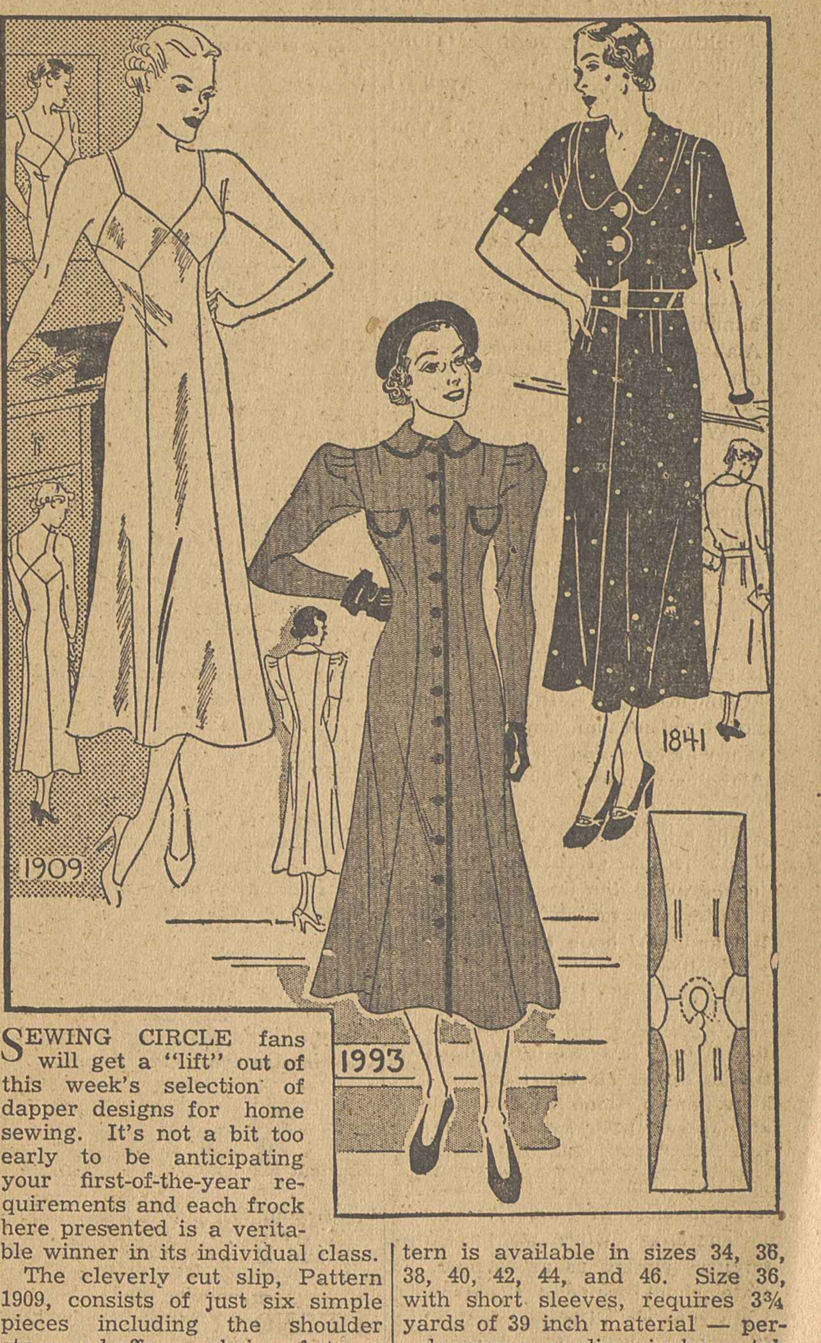
Several Standby Designs



SEWING CIRCLE fans will get a "lift" out of this week's selection of dapper designs for home sewing. It's not a bit too early to be anticipating your first-of-the-year requirements and each frock here presented is a veritable winner in its individual class.

The cleverly cut slip, Pattern 1909, consists of just six simple pieces including the shoulder strap and offers a choice of straps or a built up shoulder. With a combination of bust ease and a fitted waist, this number will prove a popular favorite in silk crepe, crepe de chine, pongee, or taffeta. An excellent gift for an intimate friend, by the way, the pattern is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 39 inch material.

The slick princess frock, Pattern 1993, has everything it takes for success and—you'll hardly believe it, but it's so—requires just seven pieces for the pattern. Princess frocks are always tops for home sewing, and whether for campus, business, or general gadabout wear this clever number, with a choice of long or short sleeves, simply compels admiration and demands immediate attention. The sleeves are gay and youthful, the pockets trig and tricky. Your selection of fabrics is almost as long as the counter! —wool crepe, flannel, broadcloth, velveteen, silk crepe, satin, taffeta, linen, rough weaves, or cotton. Send today for Pattern 1993 designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42. Size 16 requires 3¼ yds. of 54 inch or 5⅛ yds. of 39 inch fabric.

The charming morning frock for matrons, Pattern 1841, speaks for itself. A one-piece model, five pieces to the pattern, it too offers a choice of long or short sleeves and slides through your machine in a jiffy. A perfect number for comfort combined with a pleasing appearance, this delightful pattern is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46. Size 36, with short sleeves, requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material — percale, rayon, poplin, gingham, tub silk, or seersucker.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Where Columbus Landed

For many years there has been a controversy in Cuba as to the exact place on the island where Christopher Columbus first touched land. The date has long been acknowledged to be October 28, 1492, and quite recently research engineers have proved to the satisfaction of the Cuban authorities that the actual place of landing was the present location of the village of Gibara, in Oriente province.

THERE IS REJOICING IN ALABAMA

Representative Ellis, of Shelby, administration floor leader in the Alabama House of Representatives, closed debate on his gross receipts tax bill Tuesday with these words:

"When we pass this bill, there will be rejoicing in Alabama."

We agree—and we commend our representative for his stout leadership which has done much to bring new heart to those near-martyrs in our tottering educational institutions. And we would not forget the statement of Mr. Ellis, made last week, that while listening to arguments against the bill, he also heard the pleading voices of thousands of boys and girls throughout Alabama who were asking the state for opportunities of school training.

There is rejoicing already in Alabama because of the House action in approving the tax bill—rejoicing because this action presages new life and new hope for our schools and colleges.

We quote the following words of Representative Ellis in his arguments for the tax bill on the floor of the House Tuesday:

"When we look at our schools, elementary, high schools, and colleges, we are confronted with the certainty that most of them will have to close in January.

"Therefore, while we have differences among us as to how the state should remedy the trouble, I am sure we all hope to solve the financial problems before us today so that our schools and welfare institutions may continue to serve the people.

"The legislature has a program which will have a far-reaching effect and will most certainly solve the problem. Therefore, it remains up to us now whether or not we have the guts, if you please, to do the thing that confronts us.

"Naturally, we do not want to work a hardship on our merchants, but as time goes on, the little opposition we have here today will be forgotten after we have met the exigencies of the hour.

"When we pass this bill, there will be rejoicing in Alabama."

The arguments and the leadership of Representative Ellis were invincible. They were invincible because they were right. And today Alabama rejoices that there were enough men in the House who had the guts to dare to do that which was necessary to save our schools and colleges from collapse.

Handy Ellis was "at the quilting."

ALABAMA LEADS U. S. IN THE NUMBER OF STILLS SEIZED

Bone-dry Alabama led all states of the Union in the number of stills seized in the year ending June 30, 1936, according to a report received by Joe Rollins, state head of the federal alcohol tax unit.

One-thousand three-hundred and Seventy-one of the 15,465 still seizures in the nation were in Alabama, the report said. Alabama has led the United States in the proportion of stills seized for each 100,000 population.

An average of 48 stills for each 100,000 persons was calculated for Alabama, compared with an average of 12 for each 100,000 persons throughout the country.

State Capitol News

Montgomery — Governor Bibb Graves and school leaders throughout the State were highly elated this week when informed that organized labor had adopted a resolution "not to oppose" the pending tax program now before the Legislature. The action taken on the eve of a favorable vote on the 1½ per cent gross receipts levy by the House of Representatives, was taken in Birmingham by the executive committee of the Alabama Federation of Labor.

The resolution formally announced by William Mitch, president of the Labor Federation, emphatically stated that organized labor would not oppose the gross receipts levy by which the Governor hopes to raise sufficient revenue to assure full school terms and guarantee full payment of appropriations for social security and public health.

The resolution added, however, that the federation would oppose "a general sales tax" should such a measure be contemplated in the future. Another resolution condemned the proposal contained in the pending liquor bill to use convict labor in the manufacture, sale or distribution of liquor, wine or beer, Mitch said.

As the lawmakers squared off for definite action in the House on both the gross receipts bill and the liquor bill, a count of noses revealed that administration forces hold a comfortable majority, though about a dozen solons declined to commit themselves. From that group, observers declare, the Governor may add easily to his plurality.

The Boswell liquor bill was the first measure on the calendar Tuesday, and unless normal legislative procedure is changed by the House rules committee, it will be taken up as a first order about noon Tuesday. However, Representative A. L. Staples, of wet Mobile, is expected to offer a substitute bill aimed at composing the many divergent views which thus far has caused so much dissension in the ranks of the wets.

Six bills sponsored by the so-called "economy bloc" and penned by Representative Chauncey Sparks of Barbour, are expected to be stort-lived when they are called up this week. The measures are designed according to their author, "to solve the State's financial plight without enacting any new taxes except that which may be derived from the legalization of alcoholic beverages."

However, leading administration spokesmen pointed out that Spark's bills would merely juggle or divert certain State funds. They scout the contention that any real economies may be thus effected. Somewhat similar bills were put forward by the "bloc" during the last special session but were not seriously considered.

Though his repealing the tax on snuff and chewing tobacco was adversed by the House Ways and Means committee last week, Representative Eugene (Bull) Conner, of Jefferson, threatens to make an effort to force the House to report it out. The snuff tax bill was enacted during the 1935 regular session with the tax proceeds earmarked for the purchase of free textbooks in the common schools. It has worked splendidly, school officials say, and any effort to repeal the law will meet with bitter opposition.

Another hard fight is expected when the Senate takes up the Thomas-Simpson bill repealing an act of 1935 giving approximately $135,000 a year to the 67 county sheriffs from the State as compensation for feeding prisoners. An unconfirmen report is heard that the Sheriff's Association might "trade" with the legislature, not to fight the abolishment of their "feed fees" in return for a constitutional amendment to allow sheriffs to succeed themselves.

And again for the four consecutive sitting of the lawmakers, a bill to outlaw absentee voting has been introduced, this time by Senator O. D. Carlton, of Marengo.

Parity, which educational leaders favored during the early days of the last session, but turned violently against when it came up for final passage, is again in the legislative hoppers, bearing the name of Senator James A. Simpson, of Jefferson. Inquiry reveals that it will receive a very cold reception from all quarters.

Thus far only one bill has been passed by either House. It was the Rogers bill passed in the Senate Friday seeking to regulate the activities of the Mobile County Sheriff.

Several hundred "long term" State convicts will receive Christmas paroles ranging from two to four weeks, Governor Graves announced Monday.

The Governor said that he authorized the Convict Department to select the candidates for executive clemency and that about five per cent of the prison population will be affected ,in this state.

Economic Highlights

With politics temporarily out of the headlines, and with the convening of the next Congress more than a month away, business news is again getting the biggest "play" so far as domestic questions are concerned. And—aside from labor troubles, which is a big fly in the ointment—the news is good.

For a number of weeks now, principal business development has been the unparalleled distribution of financial largesse by corporations, large and small. Wage rates have been raised—in some cases to the highest levels on record. Bonuses have been announced. Extra dividends have been declared. And a number of corporations whose stockholders have gone dividendless for years are welcoming the renewal of regular payments. Each day sees news of this kind, and more is expected for the next few weeks.

The acid test for business recovery, however, is not dividends and wages—artificial stimulants such as the surplus tax are greatly responsible for these recent boosts—but lies in the answer of this question: What is industry's earning record? In a recent issue, Business Week supplies the answer.

This magazine has taken earning's records for the first nine months of 1936 and compared them with the same period last year—which, it should be remembered, was a good period in the light of the experience of 1932, 1933 and 1934. On this basis, nine leading aircraft makers made profits of $2,835,000 as against $504,000—a gain of 462 per cent. Three apparel manufacturers earned $1,855,000 as against $1,048,000—up 77 per cent. Automobile profits rose 74 per cent—$227,676,000 as compared with $131,183,000. Chemicals showed a 41 per cent increase in earning, and railway equipment 462 per cent—[illegible] against $2,777,000. Fourteen merchandising concerns did better to the tune of 159 per cent, and 97 per cent improvement was felt by 23 machinery makers. Twenty-nine food companies went ahead 21 per cent, and had earnings of more than $91,000,000 for the 1936 period. Steel and iron showed a gain of 264 per cent—$85,145,000 against $23,424,000. So it went all through the industrial field, with the smallest margin for betterment being four per cent—liquor and perfectionery industries—and the largest 462 per cent—aircraft and railway equipment. There were no losses. Two classifications—shipping and miscellaneous services—supplanted deficits with profits.

Total industrial earnings for 381 companies were $978,274,000 as against $612,296,000 in the same period last year—a jump of 60 per cent.

In service industries there was also betterment, though in no case did it reach extraordinary percentages. One hundred forty-four Class I railroads earned $42,000,000 where they had sustained a deficit of $66,300,000 in three-quarters of 1936. Fifteen traction companis earned $10,031,000 as against $7,585,000—a gain of 32 per cent. Thirty-one power and light utilities went ahead 8 per cent—$147,944,000 as compared with $136,441,000.

Grand total for all the businesses, 571 in number—showed earnings of $1,178,249,000 in the first nine months of this year as against $689,995,000 in the same period a year ago. Grand total percentage betterment was thus 71 per cent.

As Business Week also points out, "Consistency has been the jewel of recovery"—that is, it is highly significant that all major industries have improved, none have lost ground. In previous periods since recovery started, the pisture was always mixed—with a few industries, at least, showing declines to offset the increases in output and earnings of other industries. As we come to the end of 1936, it is undeniable that every branch of American industry has made great strides.

Vitally important was the Supreme Court's decision on the New York unemployment insurance law case—because of its bearing on the similar laws of 16 other states, and in the Federal social security program. The main legal point brought forward by attorneys opposing the law was that it taxes employers to benefit employes, that it therefore was in violation of the basic law of the land. Defenders of the law said that it was industry's duty to provide for workers it might have to discharge, that there was no constitutional barrier in the way.

The Supreme Court said the last word—in a highly unusual decision. The court was divided four to four on the question, and when that happens the judgment of the lower court is automatically confirmed, and no decision is read. The New York law has, therefore, passed the ultimate test and is secure—as the lower court decision approved it.

Absent Justice was Mr. Stone, kept from the bench by illness. Justice Stone has favored unemployment insurance laws in the past. It is therefore generally believed that Justice Roberts joined the "liberal" branch of the court—consisting of Justices Brandies, Stone, Cardozo and Chief Justice Hughes—thus putting the "conservative" wing—Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Butler and Pierce in the minority so far as the case was concerned.

J. B. Adams Died of Heart Attack

Engineer J. E. Adams was fatally stricken with a heart attack early Friday evening, in the engine room of his train at the railroad yard here. Mr Adams who was 61 years of age, had spent the greater part of his life in actine service for the L. & N. Railway Co., and for the past 21 years had spent several nights of each week in this town. The body was shipped to his home in Anniston, Saturday morning. Funeral services were held at the residence at 11:00 a.m. on Monday, with the Rev. Phillips officiating. Surviving are his widow, who will be remembered here as Susie Campbell, sister of Mrs. W. H. Martin and daughter of the late Judge J. A. Campbell; two sons, Frank Adams of Anniston and Charles Adams of Gadsden. One brother, Walter Adams, of Marshall, Texas; one sister, Mrs. Trexler, of Jacksonville, Florida. Those from here attending the services were: Mrs. W. H. Martin, Miss Charlotte Martin, Mr. Campbell Martin, Mrs. D. G. Wallace and Miss Elizabeth Wallace.

Mrs. E. K. Conway, of Clanton, spent Monday here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Lake and son, of Bormongham, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Tomlin on Sunday.

Mrs. Vesta Glass returned to her home in Birmingham Monday after a visit with Misses Viola and Camilla Howell.

Mr. James Parker, of Birmingham, and Mr. Henry Keith of ,Sylacauga, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Parker Friday.

Mrs. Pratt Houston spent Wednesday and Thursday in Columbiana on business.

Mr. Johnnie Martin, who is employed in Tuskegee, spent the week end here with relatives.

Mr . and Mrs. J. W. Burgess and children visited Mrs. Jeanie Crim at South Calera Sunday.

Mrs. Dallas Weaver, of Montevallo, is spending this week here with her sister, Mrs. P. A. Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Wallace and Miss Elizabeth Wallace motored to Birmingham Friday.

Mr. J. T. Parker, of Montgomery, spent the week end here with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt Houston visited Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Frost at Montevallo Sunday afternoon.

Some of those from here attending the matinee at the Strand Theatre Wednesday were: Mrs. W. B. Ozley, Mrs. Essie B. Cochran, Miss Elizabeth Wallace, Miss Freda Camp, Mr. George Holcombe, Miss Zemma Holcombe,Mrs . A. E. Norwood and Mrs. R. L. Holcombe.

"Craig's Wife" Offers Key To Marital Bliss

STRONG EMOTIONAL DRAMA AT THE STRAND THIS WEEK

"People who live to themselves are generally left to themselves!"

This legend, which appears on the screen after the final scenes in Columbia's "Craig's Wife," now showing at the Strand Theatre, Thursday and Friday this week, is the keynote of the stirring emotional drama which as a play by George Kelly won the coveted Pulitzer Prize.

Rosalind Russell appears in the title role as the implacable, calculating wife who segregated her home and husband from everything worth while in order to insure her financial independence.

Miss Russell has never been married, but her portrayal of the tragic Harriet Craig has taught her more about the problem than real life could. "Mrs. Craig failed so miserably," she declares, "because her only interests were in herself. She did not return her husband,s love because she was afraid that the romantic feeling in a wife left her at the mercy of her husband,s whims. Her formula for independence gave her security, but closed her home to all, even her husband."

Sports Spotlight

By Donald Vaughan

Last Tuesday the Montevallo High School football team elected its Captains for the 1937 season. The captain and alternate captain were chosen from the class that will be Sr. III the next year, and that were letter men that year. There were four men that came up to these qualifications. From these Douglas Findley was chosen Captain and Ned Carey alternate Captain,

Douglas Findley moved from Piper to Boothton this year. He had been a letter man for several years in Piper, and made his letter at M. H. S. this year. "Doug" plays end, and will make a good captain.

The fullback position is again filled by the alternate captain. Last season Jack Harrison was alternate captain and played fullback. This year Ned Carey is alternate captain and plays fulllback.

The football team also voted to give its two managers, Jimmie Wyatt and Wiley Fancher, football letters for their fine work during the season.

Short speeches were made by: Coach Hicks, Captain Findley and alternate captain Carey, and one of the managers. In his speech Coach Hicks summed up the qualities the captains should have. The others thanked the boys for what they had done for them.

Basketball Season Opened

Coach Collins opened basketball practice this week, and found a very promising crew of about fifteen boys reporting. They practice in Calera in the indoor gymnasium and should have a very good season.

Globe Trotter Buck Comes Home With Lots of Chit-Chat

WHAT you get for chit-chatting with that celebrated boxing writer and recently returned globe trotter, Axford Cleaveland Buck:

Andy Niederriter and Lou Burston now in Europe, are attempting to interest Jeff Dickson in promoting boxing next summer at Ebbets Field. . . Dickson, rumor to the contrary, still hangs on at the Palais des Sports, Paris, where his next big fistic attraction will be the Marcel Thil-Lou Brouillard battle in January for the European version of the world's middleweight championship. . . Cleto Locatelli, the Italian welterweight, is now in Paris.

Andre Routis, former featherweight champion, has a cafe in Paris, not unlike Mickey Walker's, on a corner opposite the Palais des Sports. . . Georges Carpentier, the old Orchid Man, owns and operates a cocktail bar in the French capital. . . Boxing in Paris, as elsewhere, is suffering from a lack of talent.

According to Dickson, his old love, Sonja Henie will skate back to him in January. . . The two hockey teams, representing the Palais des Sports, have been transferred to London. . . Dickson was paying for the Canadian players in American dollars and the devaluation of the franc made it too expensive. . . . Still they call it amateur hockey. . . His next venture will be in dog racing, a sport popular at both Wembley and Earl's Court, London.

Dickson quit promoting boxing in Albert Hall, London, because of the 1,800 free seat holders, who though earls and dukes, frequently let their tickets get in the hands of speculators. . . The specs, picking the free ducats up for a song, then undersell the box office. Born in Mississippi, Dickson remains the most colorful promoter on the other side of the Atlantic. . . At the moment, Arthur J. Elvin of Wembly Pool is the most successful. . . Elvin is now negotiating for a world's flyweight championship battle between Benny Lynch, the English claimant, and Small Montana, the Filipino.

You can dine while watching the International Hockey League teams play at Wembley. . . The same is true when the dogs run, or when boxing is the attraction. . . Wrestling is popular now, both in London and Paris.

Schmeling to Visit U. S. After Christmas Holidays

Max Schmeling

According to Fred Kirsch boxing will boom in Germany. . . . Max Schmeling leaves after the Christmas holidays for the United States. . Arthur Rothenburg, promoter of the Schmeling - Steve Hamas bout at Hamburg, now controls Deutschland Hall in Berlin. . . . It has a seating capacity of 18,000. Arthur Buelow, Schmeling's former manager, has another heavyweight in Leo Marohn and still another in Heinz Sendel, an eighteen-year-old youth. . . Runge, the Olympic heavyweight champion, will soon turn professional. . . Another likely looking heavyweight prospect in the Fatherland is Josht, winner of his first two professional starts by knockouts.

Gustav Eder may make a second invasion of the United States in the near future. . . Hans Katter, a welterweight, is regarded as the most promising fighter in Germany. . . Now that the Olympic games are over Herr Hitler is permitting German amateurs to turn professional.

London has the coronation next summer and Paris is building for the World Fair, to be held in '37. . .

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

Jimmy Johnston, the Garden boxing promoter who returned from abroad, brought along an English bulldog for Jimmy Walker . . . Maybe it's because he has the most time, but John Sloan seems the most enthusiastic of all racing commissioners. He's giving Bowie his very best personal attention right now. . . Gossip persists that Buck O'Neill, the very wealthy insurance man, will again take over Syracuse's football troubles with Jack McBride, the pro star, doing the heavy coaching. . . Vic Hanson, the rumor-mongers say, will succeed Wilder Taskar at Rutgers . . . Claire Shillington and Eddie O'Keefe, members of last year's hockey Rovers, were left on the dock when the English team they had planned to join canceled transportation because of faulty amateur registration.

Chick Meehan has done such a grand football coaching job that Manhattan, with a small student body and only 1,600 living alumni, now draws crowds of 20,000 on Saturdays. . . Jockey Sammy Renick is an accomplished singer. The reason you do not hear him more often is that when band leaders try to hook him up as a guest star he counters with the suggestion that they lay some velvet on the line.

Sidat Singh, New York-reared Hindu now a soph at Syracuse, will be one of the stars of the great basketball team which will perform at the university this season. . . . Cappy Wells, who made West Point one of the nation's most popular football teams, is assisting the Sixteenth Infantry and the First Engineers in letting the public know about the game they will play at Ebbets Field on November 29. This means the game will be a high class one and deserves to be a sellout.

McLarnin Gave Ambers a Lesson in Boxing

Jimmy McLarnin

Lou Ambers, the current king of the 135-pounders, went the way of most of his class recently. Overmatched and conceding McLarnin eight pounds in weight as well as years of experience and a tremendous punching advantage the game little fighter from Herkimer, N. Y., took as decisive a beating in the Madison Square Garden ring as the former lightweight champion, Tony Canzoneri, did a few months ago. Boxing Commissioner Brown is quoted as boasting that he engineered that fine-feathered bit of Hitlerism which forced the well-beaten Jannazzo into a bout with Barney Ross. He also quoted as demanding "and so, what about it?" One answer is that Mr. Brown should consider his own case and then fire himself on the grounds of incompetence.

One reason why Boston College is returning to the high football estate of the days of Major Cavanaugh is that Gil Dobie is one of the nation's five best coaches. Another reason is that 25 B. C. alumni are coaching New England prep and high schools. . . . Brooklyn apparently does better with the ponies than with its baseball palookas. In proof look at the eminent trainers, Hirsch Jacobs and Fred Kraft, and then recall Walter Miller, who still holds the record for the most winners booted home in a season. . . Joe Taylor, who once trained Jack Dempsey, now has taken up with another winner, having joined the circulation department of a New York paper. . . Emile Diot, who should be one of the best lap stealers in the six-day bike races, probably distresses his male parent every time he nabs one. The elder Diot is Paris Chief of Detectives.

National Hockey League directors, for the most part, were willing to be patient with Bill Dwyer. But he wanted the league to put another pot of money into his Americans and thus caused the big blowoff. Or, at least, that is what the N. H. L. directors are saying now that their untidy tempest has subsided. . . It is estimated that a cool two million skins (Francis Albertanti, the A. B. C. publicist, probably means dollars) will be spent during the American Bowling Congress to be held in New York from March 11 to April 19. . . Preston and Selby Burch, the Washington horsemen who wind up winning half of the races at Bowie each year, are the most famous of the turf's brother acts. Both of them, incidentally, are international figures, having trained abroad during the dark, reform-wave years when New York outlawed racing and the sport was dead in Maryland and Kentucky.

Treasurer Jack Mackie of the Professional Golfers association has no worries about funds with which to send the 1937 Ryder cup team to England next June, since $9,123 has been allocated for this purpose. . . . The P. G. A. has $130,000 in banks in various funds. . . Pitcher Charles Gale Wolfe, purchased by the White Sox from Omaha, is a nephew of Clarence Mitchell, former National league spitballer. . . Wolfe, whose home is in Cowles, Neb., has had only one seas... professional experience. . . Co... ...ge of Cedar Rapids, Ia., has ... five coaches in forty-five years ...ootball. . . Dr. George W. Warm Jacket-Coats for Winter

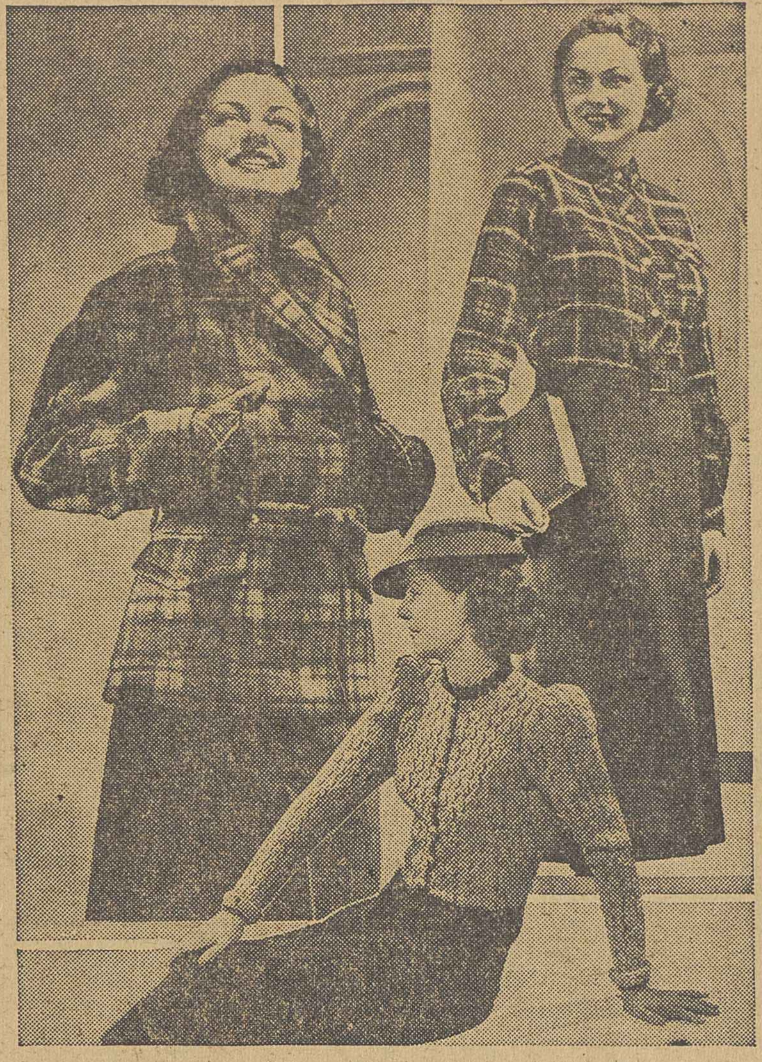
By CHERIE NICHOLAS



AND now it is the "winter girl" that leads the grand march in the style parade. In her giddily gay wool plaids, her Tyrolean-inspired knitted togs and her sturdy Norwegian worsteds and knits what a picture she makes midst scenes of snow and ice and gray burdened skys!

What with gorgeously colorful Scotch wool plaids almost stampeding the vogue and what with the Tyrolean influence going that strong all's needed is a range or so of snow-clad Alps in the distance to make the scene complete.

Important news in regard to clothes designed to fortify against the rigors of winter is the enthusiasm shown for fancy, sometimes quite fantastic, short jackets and hiplength coats also wool shirts (call 'em shortwaists if you insist) that contrast monotone skirts, culottes or plus four trousers—the latter a favorite type with the ski and skate devotee.

Let winds howl and icicles form in endless chain, it's immune you will be to their devastating chill if clad in a sturdy coat for all outdoors as shown to the left in the picture. Here is a coat in the newer short length that performs a three-act-in-one of being gay, being "comfy" and high-style on every count. It is made of a rough-and-ready old-town wool plaid in warm deep color tones—just the sort of plaid weaves everybody's calling for this season.

Have you heard of the new plaid wool shirts that are showing up so vaingloriously in college-girl wardrobes? Not only are these plaid shirts rating ace-high in classroom and campus environs but for office and general everyday practical wear the shirt of enchanting plaid wool is everything it should be. See the perfectly tailored specimen of a modish plaid shirt in the illustration. As here shown it is worn with dark green beautifully fitted men's wear flannel culottes.

The intriguing thing about the newer handknit fashions is that they are stylized to the nth degree and many interesting new and fanciful stitches are being introduced. A perfectly charming innovation is the employment of embroidery done in vivid Tyrolean color schemes in connection with not only knitted cardigans and sweaters but pert boxy hiplength jackets made of felt or cloth trimmed with gay applique felt flowers and colorful bindings and amusing buttons.

That the newest style trends are being incorporated in hand-knitted fashions is a fact evidenced in the cunning waist-length jacket pictured on the figure seated. See the full-at-top sleeves that give the very important wide shoulder lines. If you are wanting to know, it requires about ten balls of featherdown yarn to knit this jacket which is done in a simple lacy pattern. One ball of Limerick green shetland floss trims it. Make this jacket Tyrolean, if you will, by embroidering gay little yarn flowers here and there. Bright colored buttons add yet another note of interest.

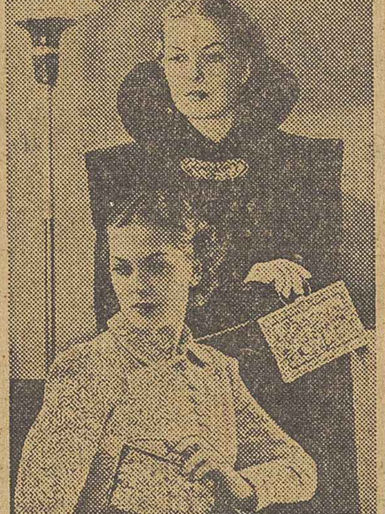
PETIT POINT BAGS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



With the winter season of grandiose social functions coming on, visions of lovely evening bags begin to stir the imagination. To women of discriminating taste a bag of exquisite petit point speaks most eloquently when it comes to giving the desired dramatization to the costume. The very lovely and distinctive bags here pictured are creations by Madame Jolles of Vienna. The sophisticated cape of regal black Lyon velvet shown at the top makes a perfect setting for the charming petit point bag done in brilliant colors and marvelously intricate design. Below in the picture the subtle Edwardian mood of the patrician quilted satin coat is enhanced with a glamorous petit point bag of unusual shape and vivid floral design, distinguished by a new handle, recalling a graceful arc. This winsome bag is as youthful as is the simply cut wrap that so unmistakably bears the stamp of aristocracy.

VELVET HAS PROVED SMARTEST MATERIAL

Velvet has proved to be the smartest material of the year. It is shown in numerous varieties — velveteen, panne, lame, shaved to a flat, stubby surface or printed into a striped or plaid design. Black, as is always the case in Paris, is the favorite, although various shades of green, red and brown are almost as popular.

The new velvets are used for severely tailored suits to be worn under fur capes as well as for dressy cocktail suits worn with rich lame blouses. Velveteen is used for street dresses worn under fur-trimmed cloth coats as well as jacket suits worn with plaid woolen blouses.

Right-Sized Heel Factor of Importance in Dress

To the woman who regards good dressing as an art, the right heel is as important as the right jewels or gloves.

If she aims to look tall and queenly in her evening gown, towering heels are an indispensable part of the picture. If her mood is coquettish and her gown inspired by an ancient Greek robe, heel-less or flat-heeled sandals provide the proper foot note.

Heels covered with vivid fabrics or encrusted with jewels add a sparkling touch to her formal evening ensembles. Many of her most striking costumes owe their success to the harmony between her heels and her hair ornament, handkerchief, or corsage. As costume accessories heels are becoming more and more significant.

Tulle Instead of Satin

A wedding dress made entirely of tulle, like the ballet dress portrayed by Degas, the French painter, was worn recently in New York by an internatinally known bride. The full skirt swept the floor and stood out in true ballet fashion. The veil worn was very short, like a conf[illegible] veil.

But Once A Year

By HELEN WATERMAN

"THANK goodness," said Martha Goodwin, bustling about her kitchen, "Christmas comes but once a year." She wiped back a loose wisp of graying hair with a weary gesture. "But it will be fine seeing you again, Lad," she murmured, thinking of her distant son. "Now, let's see. Those star cookies you're so fond of—" She glanced at the hurrying clock.

Loud shrieks of laughter under her window interrupted her thoughts. Those new neighbor children again. If they were dirtying up her freshly swept walk! She strode grimly to the porch. There was a path in the snow from their yard, around hers, and back again to their own, where all four of them had apparently trudged, pushing a snow ball, across her walk in two places. A tussel started suddenly, and they were all tumbling about in the snow, shrieking at the top of their voices.

Martha scolded shrilly at them, and they stood up, an abashed little line of stair steps. "The idea! On Christmas, too!" Martha chided. "Whatever is the matter with your ma, that she lets you make such a racket?"

"She's sick," answered the oldest girl.

"Sick! Then all the more reason why you should keep still. Shame on you." The little group stood like statues.

Martha tucked in the wisp of hair. "You children come in here and sit still while I work, and I'll tell you a story," she invited. "Mind you wipe your feet."

"I suppose it should be a Christmas story," Martha began. "Do you know about the shepherds and the wise men?"

"Yes'm," they chorused. "We go to Sunday school," added the oldest girl.

"Then," Martha asked her, "shall I tell you about Santa Claus?"

Her face clouded a little. "Mother told us that," she answered soberly.

"Oh," said Martha. She dusted the flour from her hands and turned to baste the turkey. Four pairs of eager eyes watched her every move. The doorbell rang.

"Laddie! Good heavens," cried Martha, slipping off her apron, and rushed to the door.

But instead it was a telegram: "AWFULLY SORRY DARLING BUT I JUST CAN'T GET AWAY STOP DO TRY TO HAVE A MERRY CHRISTMAS STOP GO ON A SPREE AND I'LL FOOT THE BILL STOP EXPECT TO BE ABLE TO GET DOWN FOR NEW YEAR'S AND WILL EXPLAIN EVERYTHING THEN LOVE LADDIE."

Martha Goodwin read it twice. Then she smoothed the straying wisp of hair and went back to the kitchen.

"Well," the older girl was explaining, "it's sort of like a chicken, I guess, only ever so much bigger." The four children looked up as Martha entered. "Why, what's the matter, Mrs. Goodwin?"

"My son—I was expecting him—he isn't coming."

"Gee," came a sympathetic chorus. "And you'd fixed everything so nice and—and Christmassy."

"I'm not going to have it spoiled," Martha decided. "Here," she said and draped the holly wreath over the youngest's arm. "You," she said to the next one, "carry the potatoes, and you take the mince pie—careful, it's hot—and you," to the eldest, "take the vegetables. I think I can manage the turkey."

"But where are we going?"

"Over to your house. Weren't you about to miss out on Christmas dinner?"

"Dinner first, then presents," she suggested, and when, having eaten all they could hold, they gathered about the holly, she found a crudely wrapped present for herself. It was a picture scrapbook, somewhat smudged.

Were those tears in Martha Goodwin's eyes? Surely not, for she was smiling.

"Why, thank you," she exclaimed. "Such a lovely surprise: My," she added, "I do wish Christmas came more than once a year."

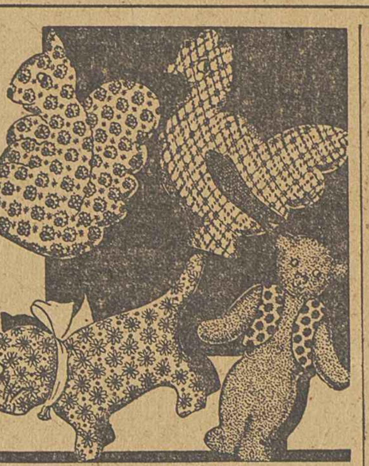
Cuddle Toys for Gifts



Pattern No. 5609

"Eenie, Meenie, Minie, Mo"—it's hard to decide which to make—but why make just one, why not all! Delightful cuddle toys, these, and just the soft, warm playthings for a baby's arms. There's nothing to the making of them, for each is composed of but two pieces, with the exception of the bear, whose jacket is extra, and the chick, whose flapping wings are separate. Your gayest cotton scraps can go into the making of these winning gifts. In pattern 5609 you will find a transfer pattern for the four animals; instructions for making them; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 West Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y.

Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

To cook a ham so that it will retain all its flavor, encase it with a paste made of common flour and water, taking care to see that the steam cannot escape. Bake in a hot oven, allowing a quarter of an hour for every pound. When cooked the paste can be easily removed and it takes all the rind with it. A ham cooked in this way is delicious.

Temptation

TO RESIST temptation once is not a sufficient proof of honesty. If a servant, indeed, were to resist the continued temptation of silver lying in a window when he is sure his master does not know how much there is of it, he would give strong proof of honesty. But this is a proof to which you have no right to put a man. There is a degree of temptation which will overcome any virtue. Now, in so far as you approach temptation to a man, you do him an injury; and, if he is overcome, you share his guilt.—Dr. Johnson.

Hobby to Restore Youth

An elderly Minneapolis man forgot old age and blood pressure, and went a long way toward recovering his youth by building a miniature tabernacle of Moses, according to biblical specifications.

His experience is not far different from that of all who have discovered the life-giving value of a hobby, who know that in a leisure time vocation, be it ever so nutty, there is relaxation, zest and profound satisfaction. —Minneapolis Star.

MEAT PERFECT AFTER 8 YEARS IN OPEN ROOM
Someone should tell Mr. "Believe-It-or-Not" Ripley this story that comes from John S. Hill, storekeeper in South Carolina. "I have now hanging on the back door of my store," he writes, "a strip of meat smoked with FIGARO Condensed Smoke EIGHT YEARS ago. This piece of meat is ribbed belly, about 18 inches long and 6 inches wide. It is firm, sweet and sound as a dollar — neither rancid nor spoiled in any manner, and has kept perfectly these eight years. FIGARO is the finest thing I have ever seen for smoking meat. I have been using it ever since it was first put on the market."
(Signed) John S. Hill.
Mr. Hill has to buy the meat he cures, so he cannot afford to lose any of it. Yet the average farm does lose 50 lbs. every year, because the meat is not thoroughly smoked. During cold weather, keeping meat is a simple matter. But when summer comes, or a warm spell during the winter, look out. Rancidness develops. You suddenly find the meat alive with "skippers," or worms. Green mold appears on it. Or it dries out and hardens.
Thorough smoking is the only known way to prevent all these troubles. But how? Everyone knows how uncertain the old smokehouse method is. Other so-called smoking methods, or substitutes for smoking, are likewise risky. How can you tell whether or not the meat is thoroughly smoked? But if you want to be SURE all your meat will keep perfectly right through the summer months, wash it thoroughly after it comes out of the cure and brush FIGARO Condensed Smoke over every square inch. FIGARO penetrates. It keeps meat from drying out. It positively PREVENTS skippers, green mold, or rancidness. Flavor? You'll say the meat is the finest you ever ate. And the cost is less than one-third cent per pound!
HAS SMOKED OVER TWO BILLION POUNDS OF MEAT
More than 30 years ago, S. Eugene Colgin, Texas farmer boy, discovered how to condense smoke to liquid form. With addition of a few ingredients to improve the flavor, etc., it is called FIGARO Condensed Smoke. Since then, FIGARO has been used to smoke more than two billion pounds of meat! Your dealer has it, or can get it; in 32-oz. size (enough for 500 lbs.), $1.50; or the 16-oz. size, (enough for 250 lbs.), $1.00. But DON'T TAKE CHANCES! Use FIGARO on every pound this year.—Adv.

Research Station At Auburn Makes Study Of Mourning Dove

Montgomery, Ala.—A study of the mourning dove by Harold S. Peters, project leader of the Alabama Cooperative Wildlife Research Station at Auburn, has revealed that a good percentage of doves still were nesting during the September open season in North Alabama.

The study of the dove has been the major project of the Auburn station, whose work is sponsored jointly by the State Conservation Department, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, U. S. biological survey and American Wildlife Institute, and Mr. Peter's report covers activities of the station for the period beginning October 28, 1935, and ending September 30, 1936.

The project was initiated by the distribution of 25,000 nesting record cards last February and March. About 600 of these were returned bearing information about dove nests in all parts of the State.

"During September a special effort was made to secure information concerning the late nesting of doves in the northern half of th State," said the report. "We found a very good percentage of doves still nesting during this season and indications were that they would continue until in October. Very little movement was noted up to the end of September of doves going State where peanut fields were beto the Southeastern part of the ing harvested."

Deductions from the cards showed the average height of dove nests to be 10.8 feet. Forty-three per cent of the nests were built on evergreen trees, 51 per cent on decidious trees and six per cent on the ground. These results were compard with those of intensive study of dove nests within a radius of five miles of Auburn during the nesting season which showed that 70 nests found, 86 per cent were built in pine trees. at an average height of 26.2 feet, with the lowest nest being 5½ feet and the highest being 66 feet. Only 28 or 40 per cent of these 70 nests had a successful conclusion.

Observations to determine the time spent in incubation disclosed that the female dove incubates the eggs during the night and until about 8:30 a.m., when the male relieves her and incubates until about 4:30 p.m. In case the male or female bird has been killed, the nest is left uncovered while the remaining bird obtains the necessary food and exercise. All nests in which one parent was missing were destroyed before reaching a successfu hatch. Partial evidence showed that flying squirrels and blue jays were the worst predators.

The period spent in the nest by the young birds after hatching was found to average 12.7 days, with extremes of 10 to 17 days. No definite data was obtained to determine the frequency with which certain pairs nested during the summer, but the observations indicated that five or six broods were raised during the breeding season in the vicinity of Auburn.

Two hundred and three doves were trapped and banded in fields and 52 were banded just before they were large enough to fly, in an effort to determine the movement of breeding birds and of those wintering in Alabama. A total of 185 doves were collected in various sections of the State to determine the food they were using, their size and weight, internal and external parasites, flyways from nests to feeding grounds and their roosts.

Music Festival To Open Friday Night

Eight prominent musicians representing Mobile, Tuscaloosa, Birmingham and Chicago will join the college glee club in presenting Alabama College's second annual Musical Festival December 11, 12, and 13.

The Festival will open Friday night with a concert by the Cadeck Ensemble of Birmingham, whose members are Ottokar Cadek, violin; Lillian Cadek Dame, viola; Harold Cadek, cello; and Lois Greene Seals, piano. Their program will consist of selections from Dvorak, Greig, and Brahms.

Handel's "Messiah," to be presented Saturday night, will be sung by the Glee Club Chorus of 97, and visiting soloists including Anna Roberts, Mobile, contralto; Arnold H. Edmonds, bass, Birmingham and Chicago; Virginia Crowder, soprano, Birmingham; and B. J. Laster, tenor, Tuscaloosa.

Sunday afternoon the Glee Club and the College Y. W. C. A. will present Horatio Parker's pageant, "The Dream of Mary."

The Alabama College Music Festival is directed by H. D. LeBaron, head of the department of music, and is presented as the sixth number on the 1936-37 concert and lecture course.

Christmas Dinner Given By Studiosis

An interesting event of Tuesday evening was the annual Christmas Dinner at which the Studiosis Club of Montevallo entertained members and their guests. The affair, which is a tradition of many years standing, took place in the assembly hall and parlors of Main Dormitory, Alabama College.

Receiving in the assembly hall were the Club officers: Mrs. Mary McCoy,, President; Miss Martha Allen, Vice president; Mrs. L. C. Parnell, Corresponding Secretary; Miss Agnes Tutwiler, Recording Secretary; Mrs A. J. Cox, Treasurer; Miss Lillian Barksdale, Parliamentarian.

The hall and parlor made a colorful picture decorated in the Christmas motif. In the center of the hall stood a lighted Christmas tree. Christmas greens and colored lights were placed throughout the room.

In the East and West parlors, the guests were seated at small tables, each carrying a centerpiece in the Christmas theme. Red and green candles burned on the tables and along the stair-way of the assembly hall.

In charge of the decorations were Miss Martin Allen, Miss Lorraine Pearson, Mrs. Mary Harris, Miss Lorraine Peter, Miss Hazel Coke, and Mrs. G, T, Towery.

A Christmas dinner was served by the members of the Advanced Foods course under the supervision of Miss Mary Blazek, Alabama College School of Home Economics.

During the dinner a Christmas program was presented, including readings of Christmas stories and poems by Miss Ruth Farrish and Miss Phyllis Poland. Group singing of favorite carols was also enjoyed, led by Mrs. H. D. LeBaron.

The committee in charge of the dinner included: Miss Eddy the Saylor, chairman, Mrs. O. .R Burns, Miss Lenice Vaughan and Mrs. E. P. Hood.

Ninety-two Studiosis members and guests enjoyed the occasion.

The Wide-Awake Farmer

CAN'T ESCAPE IT

IF YOU are a farmer, you may be inclined to say: "All this talk and activity about new industries in Alabama is fine, but I can't see where it will help me any."

But let us see! Let us assume that a new factory employing 500 people opens in a town near you. That means there will be 500 more people to feed in that community. It means that they'll need the "fat of the land"—milk and vegetables and meat and eggs—things you can grow and sell. That means you'll be able to begin to diversify to greater extent than before. It means that you'll have a steadier and larger cash income.

New Industries In Alabama Mean Much To The Alabama Farmer

For the past 14 years, Alabama Power Company, cooperating to develop a better balance between agriculture and industry, has been one of the leading agencies in presenting the advantages of Alabama to industrialists. Many of them have located factories here as a result.

Farmers, storekeepers, public institutions and many individual citizens have been benefitted.

Christmas Spirit In The Stores

The Times is happy to present the message of Christmas merchandising opportunities this week to its readers from a number of the stores in this vicinity. Your store is a modern and convenient agency, ready to serve your every want and need at the time you call for such service.

Your store-keeper realizes the extra needs you will have to meet at Christmas, and, in proportion, makes extra preparation for these needs. Indeed, your store bears a large responsibility for the happiness that you hope will come to your family at Christmas time.

We urge our subscribers to read the advertisements of the merchants in this issue. Take advantage of the preparations they have made to serve you at Christmas time, and all the time.

Particular attention is directed to the appeal of the local Clerks Union for you to trade at home with the home merchants, if we would expect them to do that which we regard as their part as supporters of community progress.

The Friendly Eight

Mr. J. A. Brown extends a greeting of the Christmas season from "The Friendly Eight," a group of businesses he conducts in this community. Mr. Brown is one of our most ardent advocates of home town progress and forward movements. In addition to atteending to the pressing duties of his own wide-spread business interests, Mr. Brown finds time to serve his town very effectively and ably as a member of the Town Council.

Klotzman Brothers

Klotzman's advertise their annual Christmas Sale this week. Santa Claus will be there in person, and will have candy for every kiddy who goes to see him. Joe and Sam Klotzman are among our most wide-awake merchants—and they are prepared to do their part in making a merrier Christmas for all their friends and customers.

B. B. Curry & Co., Wilton

A new name appears this week in our list of advertisers—B. B. Curry & Co., at Wilton. This concern is held in loyal friendship and confidence by a large circle of regular customers. They are making a special effort to contribute to the happiness of their customers for Christmas.

Montevallo Cash Store

Mr. Ted Hammett, manager of the Montevallo Cash Store, is one of the most extravagant users of printer's ink in Montevallo. He uses as much printer's ink as he eats of butter and syrup. He is going stronger than ever this year for the Christmas season. His store is gaily decorated in all the Christmas trimmings. The shelves are creaking with good things to make your Christmas most merry with that which adds most to the merriment—good things to eat.

Hoffman's New Store

Hoffman's, the new variety store, is all fixed up from cellar to attic, with more Christmas things than Carter had oats. Toys for the children and a vast number of wonderful gift values for the grown folks. This is a new store, recently opened in Montevallo, by Mr. Ellis Hoffman. It is proving to be one of the mast popular and serviceable among our business institutions. "We are glad we got to Montevallo in time to help make your Christmas more cheerful," said Mr. Hoffman.

The Old Landmark

New ones have come and made their places in the community's commercial activities, but there is one among us still who is a landmark of many years duration hereabouts. It is Jeter Merrantile Company. For years longer than many can remember this old reliable firm has stood ready to meet the needs of a great number of depending customers, not only at Christmas, but at all other times. This Christmas season is no exception, only Jeter's has made an extra effort to meet the requirements of a customer clientele which will be increased over recent years, owing to the fact that people are feeling the effects of a great measure of recovery from the depression.

"Good Things At Holcombe's"

"Good Things to Eat," is the slogan that originally belongs to Jap Holcombe's grocery store and market. And it is not unusual to hear a lady of the house give testimony to the experience that Holcombe's is the best place in Montevallo to buy groceries. Jap knows of the needs of his customers at all occasions. He does his best to please them. He succeeds well in the effort. He has everything all set for your Christmas needs.

Ford and Chevrolet

In our list of advertisements for Christmas specials this week you will find greetings from Ford and Chevrolet. The local dealers, Towery and Tatum, join their national connections in expressing their willingness and readiness to contribute to your Christmas happiness with a fine, new automobile, or depenbable service for the one you already have.

The Telephone and Christmas

Southern Bell says "If you can't be there, telephone." This is a suggestion that will make the connecting link in many a broken chain of the family circle at Christmas. Everyone wants to be at home Christmas. Most of us are; but some of us are not and cannot be there. You can be there with the use of Southern Bell's facilities.

Modern Beauty Shop

Heading the list of all things most desired at Christmas time is beauty—beauty in everything. Personal charm—beauty in physical appearance is one of the most desirable features of the beauty scheme for Christmas. To settle all questions about this phase of one's Christmas preparation, the Modern Beauty Shop offers the answer. This popular shop can bring you a guarantee of the utmost in yuletide happiness by satisfaction that your personal appearance is the best.

POST OFFICE TO REMAIN OPEN SATURDAY P. M.

For the convenience of the public, Postmaster, R. A. Reid announces that the Montevallo Postoffice will remain open next Saturday afternoon until the regular closing time, six o'clock.

Miss Patty Kroell, of Plantersville, spent the week end at home.

Mrs. Sudie Martin, of Piper, spent the week end as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Murray W. Fancher.

Club Women Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Business and Proffessional Women was held Monday evening at the Hotel parlor. There was a small attendance which was quite disappointing because of the very fine address made by Miss Laura Hadley, the Vocational Teacher Trainer of Alabama College. She spoke on Education in Alabama. Two outstanding features of strength in our satte's educational program were stressed; one the very far seeing plan of vocational training at the secondary level; and the other the five year plan for curriculum revision. Indication was made of some of the weaknesses in our plan as it operates at present. Questions followed the talk and a very profitable hour was spent in discussion.

The David Lindsey Chapter of the D. A. R. held its December meeting on Monday evening rather than Tuesday, the regular time, at the home of Mrs. T. H. Napier. The Napier home was beautifully decorated for the occasion and was very attractive, with lovely Christmas decorations and beautiful snap dragons and carnations in Christmas colors. [illegible] presided at the business meeting. Thirteen members were present, and one guest, Miss Sallie Beeler, sister of Mrs. Napier.

Alabama Day was observed on the program, which consisted of a discussion of social and home life in Alabama in the pioneer period around 1800. Mrs. Sharp acted as joint hostess with Mrs. Napier. They were assisted by Miss Beeler in serving a salad course to the members at which time a delightful social hour was enjoyed.

Circle No. 1 of the Methodist Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. T. H. Napier Monday afternoon, where Santa Claus was honor guest. A most beautiful Christmas tree, laden with gifts for all, was the center of attraction. Mrs. C. G. Sharp was co-hostess. About fifteen members were present to enjoy and capture the Christmas spirit.

Mrs. Mattie Farrington Fancher Dies

Final rites for Mrs. Mattie Farrington Fancher, age 75, wife of Mr. James Newton Fancher, were held last Friday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, at Carlton Hill Church in Bibb County. Rev. Hubbard, of Eoline conducted the services, with Rogan in charge of the burial.

Mrs. Fancher had been in ill health for some time. At the time of her death she was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Carlos Adkinson, of Montgomery.

She is survived by her husband, James Newton Fancher; one son, Bailey Fancher of Piper, Alabama; four daughters, Mrs. Carlos Adkinson of Montgomery, Mrs. Jimmie Lee Fancher of Marvel, Alabama, Mrs. Austin Reach of Ensley, and Mrs. Sam Trott of Piper, Alabama. Also sixteen grandchildren. Mrs. Fancher was the elder sister of Mrs. Laura Fancher of Montevallo, and Mrs. Mary Richards of Ashby, Alabama.

She was the daughter of Jasper and Catherine Bailey Farrington, pioneer settlers of Bibb County.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Gilbert and Mrs. J. I. Reid spent Sunday in Warrior.

Mr. Farland Phillips and son, Lavel, of Empire, Alabama, spent Sunday night and Monday as the guests of Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Reid.

Parent-Teacher Association Met

The Parent-Teacher Association met in the auditorium at the Elementary School Tuesday afternoon. The attendance was rather small due to the rain. Splendid reports were heard from the chairmen of the various committees, and plans for the January meeting were made. This will be Father's Night and will be conducted as a community sing, with Miss Katherine Farrah in charge.

The committees for the three communities are as follows: Aldrich—Mrs. Brill, Mrs. Carr, and Mrs. Moore. Wilton—Mrs. Chappelle, Mrs. Fancher and Mrs. Arant. Montevallo—Mrs. LeBaron, Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. R. A. Reid and Mrs. Appleton.

A First Aid kit was bought for the Elementary School. This was muchly needed for the cuts and bruises that come in each day.

Miss Dawn Kenneny, head of the Art Department was introduced by Miss Martha Allen. She spoke most interestingly on "The Relation of Art to Christmas." The points were illustrated by sketches that showed how color and designs can introduce a new Christmas in place of [illegible] accepted pictures.

Hot tea and cookies were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Fancher and Mrs. Kendrick.

W. F. Tidwell Slated For Chairman of Youth's Conference

W. F. Tidwell, Principal of Montevallo High School, has been slated for County Chairman for the Promotion Committee of the annual state-wide Youth's Conference, to be held at the University of Alabama, January 1st to 3rd. This annousement was made by Dean Agnes Ellen Harris of the University of Alabama. This is the second successive year of this conference, which is sponsored by the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Paul Rogan visited his aunt, Mrs. M. J. Warner of Selma, Sunday.

ASSOCIATION HONORS MONTEVALLO DEAN

High honors have come to Dr. T. H. Napier, dean of Alabama College, Montevallo. He has been elected first vice-president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and appointed a member of the Association's commission on highr institutions. In addition, the Southern Association of Colleges for Women has made Dean Napier chairman of the Commission on Curriculum Study and Revision.

As head of the Educational Department at Livingston State Normal School, 1916-24, and dean at Alabama College since 1926, Dr. Napier has long been recognized as a foremost educator in this state. He has been a member of the executive committee of the Alabama Education Association, 1931-34; president of the Southern Association of Colleges for Women, 1933-34.

EVENING SCHOOL HOMEMAKING CLASS MEETS IN WILTON

The Evening School Hmemaking class met at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon, December 9th, at the Baptist Church in Wilton. Mrs. Wybeck and Miss Thompson gave suggestions for Christmas gifts that could be made for different members of the family, and showed gifts that had been made.

The following members were present at the meeting: Mrs. Ada Pruett, Mrs. Marie Curry, Miss Alice Nolan, Mrs. Ward, and Mrs. Emma Hogan. Miss Alice Nolan was appointed secretary.

The next meeting will be held on December 17, at 3:30. "Planning the Christmas Dinner and Foods that can be made for Christmas Gifts," is to be the topic for discussion.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Your attention is called to a slight variation in the services of this church on Sunday, December 20th, which is the Sabbath before Christmas.

The Church School will meet as usual, with Prof. W. J. Kennerly, in the Church annex.

During the worship service which follows at 11 a.m., the pastor will speak on the theme, "The Practice of the Presence of God." Special [illegible] the occasion, will be rendered.

Due to the absence of the students from our community, the Christian Endeavor will not hold its meetings for the next three Sundays. Instead, but at 7:30 p.m., there will be special Christmas holiday union services in the various churches. On Sunday, the 20th, this union service will be held in the Presbyterian Church, with Dr. F. B. Pearson, pastor of the Baptist Church, bringing the message.

Everyone—and that means you—is invited to attend these services. We urge you to bring a friend.

Shelby County Medical Society Meeting Postponed

The regular meeting of the Shelby County Medical Society was postponed until some time in January. At this time, the meeting will be held at Johnson's Dining Room and dinner will be served to the members. Announcement cards will be sent out by the secretary, Dr. Hugh Nickson, at a later date.

Ladies Night Meeting Of Civic Club

Annual Fun Festival Held Tuesday Night at the Methodist Church

The annual Ladies Night meeting of the Montevallo Civic Club was held Tuesday night at the Methodist Church. The total attendance was about forty, composed of club members and their ladies as individual guests, together with a few honor guests from out of town.

Dr. A. W. Vaughan, president of the club presided as toastmaster.

A most delightful and elaborate turkey dinner was served by the ladies of the Baptist Church. Decorations suitable to the Christmas season added a lovely charm to the assembly room and the banquet tables.

In the course of the dinner the Alabama College Glee Club presented a most creditable sketch of entertainment introduced by Dr. Vaughan, which, he hoped, would be fully revealed. Evidently it was revealed. Surely it was interesting and a masterful presentation, even if the exotic atmosphere portrayed was much of a mystery.

Following the presentation of the musical drama (or maybe [illegible] tragedy). [illegible] ing a more than average understanding of the mystery, made a beautiful expression of appreciation to the Glee Club on behalf of the assembly.

Mr. Paul Luck, of Columbiana, was present as guest of the Civic Club. Mr. Luck, who is president of the Columbiana Exchange Club, brought greetings from that organization to the Civic Club of Montevallo.

Other honor guests were Probate Judge L. C. Walker, accompanied by Mrs. Walker. Although holding out faithfully to his tradition in refusing even to attempt to make a public speech, did very aptly express the pleasure of Mrs. Walker and himself at the opportunity to meet with the Montevallo Club.

Dr. Vaughan's introduction of the newly elected President of the Club, Mr. Luther Shaw, was the stroke that knocked the lid off the fun pot. Dr. Acker had already given notice, by uncorking a snappy story, that all seriousness would soon be discarded to give reign to a spell of fun.

Luther Shaw's reply to Dr. Vaughan's introduction was snappy, short and well expressed. It was sufficient to ignite that inexhaustible store of wit and good humor of Dr. Harman, vice president of the Club.

For several minutes the group was in a happy vein, with short skits, funny stories, and what have you from Dr. Harman, Z. S. Cowart, Dr. Acker, Rev. Burns, Dr. Napier, and Luther Shaw. President Vaughan exhibited his masterful tact and ability as a toastmaster able and capable of keeping the fun ball rolling freely as it was hastily tossed here and there from one happy jester to another.

Everybody enjoyed the program thoroughly with expressions of appreciation to the committee on arrangements, composed of R. A. Reid, Stanley Mahan and Dr. Riddle.

Finally, when Dr. Harman arose for what he said was the last joke he would tell for the evening, he allowed himself to drift into a vein of seriousness at the conclusion of his stand, whereupon the good toastmaster perceived a proper ending of the program, and so announced.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

King Edward Abdicates and Is Succeeded by Duke of York—Pope Stricken With Paralysis—Wallace Promises Better Farm Program.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

LOVE and the British constitution are the winners in the great contest that has stirred the vast empire to its furthest borders. Edward VIII, steadfast in his determination to make Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson his wife, abdicated as king of Great Britain and emperor of India, and his brother, the duke of York, reigns in his stead as George VI.

George VI

Edward's fateful decision was communicated to the house of commons by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. Haggard and deeply moved, the man who has born the brunt of the struggle on behalf of the cabinet and parliament handed the speaker the royal message and the speaker read it to the half stunned members. This is what Edward said:

"Realizing as I do the gravity of this step I can only hope that I shall have the understanding of my peoples in the decision I have taken and the reasons which have led me to take it.

"I conceive that I am not overlooking the duty that rests on me to place in the forefront the public interest when I declare that I am conscious that I can no longer discharge this heavy task with efficiency or with satisfaction to myself.

"I have accordingly this morning executed an instrument of abdication in the terms following:

" 'I, Edward VIII of Great Britain, Ireland, the British dominions beyond the seas, king, emperor of India, do hereby declare my irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for myself and my descendants. My desire is that effect should be given to this instrument of abdication immediately.

" 'In token thereof I have hereunto set my hand this 10th day of December, 1936, in the presence of the witnesses whose signatures are subscribed.' "

[illegible] that the [illegible] throne be expedited, and accordingly enabling legislation effecting the abdication and the accession of the new king was promptly introduced and put through the house of commons and the house of lords.

The new king was proclaimed with the traditional ceremony following an assembly of the accession council made up of privy councilors and other distinguished persons.

That evening the ex-king went on the air to broadcast a message of farewell to the half billion people who had been his subjects.

Edward left England for his self-imposed exile and probably never will return to his native land. Where he will make his home has not been announced. It was stated in Cannes, where Mrs. Simpson was with friends, that he would not go there now. "Wally" had publicly offered to renounce her association with the king if that would settle the controversy, but he chose otherwise. Her divorce would not become absolute until April 27, but steps were taken in London to speed up the date.

Edward VIII

Notwithstanding the widespread sympathy for Edward and his once enormous popularity, the general sentiment throughout the British empire is now that he let his country down, that he mainly was to blame for bringing on the crisis and, to quote one correspondent, that "the cabinet's victory was the only possible victory which could be allowed on the present issue." The great majority of the people did not think Mrs. Simpson, a commoner and twice divorced, was fit to be queen of England. The cabinet and the house of commons emphatically vetoed a morganatic marriage. If he would be true to his love, there was nothing left for the king to do but abdicate.

For a day after announcing his resignation of the throne, Edward remained king. But as soon as parliament passed the abdication measure it was carried to him, and the moment he signed the document Edward ceased to reign. It was presumed that, with the permission of the new king, Edward would retain the duchy of Cornwall and its revenues. With his other resources he goes into exile with an annual income of about $500,000.

In all the British dominions steps were taken to ratify the abdication of the king and the accession of the duke of York. There was considerable uneasiness concerning the course the legislature of the Irish Free State might pursue, for events seemed to give Ireland the chance to shake off the last vestiges of adherence to the British empire.

FROM Manila came belated dispatches telling of the worst disaster that ever befell the Philippines—a great flood which swept through the fertile and densely populated Cagayan valley in northern Luzon and destroying possibly thousands of the inhabitants. The full extent of the death toll may never be known. The waters of the Cagayan river, suddenly swollen by a typhoon and torrential rains, inundated many villages and towns in the 50 mile wide valley. So isolated was the stricken area that a former provincial military commander required four days to fight his way to an outlying point from which he informed the world of the disaster. Military airplanes were used to carry medical supplies and relief agents to the district.

STRICKEN with paralysis that affected both his legs, Pope Pius XI was believed to be in a serious condition because he already was afflicted with asthma, arterio sclerosis and high blood pressure. At first the holy father flatly refused to submit to a medical examination, saying "I am in the hands of God," and he even insisted on dictating and signing letters. But later he was persuaded to take complete repose, which his physicians said was vitally necessary. Father Agostino Gemelli of Milan, a medical expert, was summoned to Vatican City and gave out a statement indicating that rigid measures were being taken to stave off possible uremic poisoning.

Pope Pius

The pope's illness was discovered when he was unable to arise for a ceremonial concluding a week of spiritual exercises. He was barely able to stir the left leg and physicians found that the heaviness of limb had spread also to the right leg.

MEMBERS of the American Farm Bureau federation, assembled in Pasadena, Calif., were told by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that the government would provide a better farm program than the AAA; but he also said the farmer must be willing to accept "small increases in the imports of certain agricultural products."

"In the cause of peace," he said, "the farmers of the United States must learn to say 'yes' as often as possible to agricultural imports from Pan-America, while at the same time reserving the right to say 'no' when any vital branch of agriculture is likely to be menaced by too great imports."

Mr. Wallace declared the preservation of world peace is more fundamental than national agricultural conservation, and added, "there is an important relation between the two, however. Danger of the United States becoming involved in a serious war comes from the fact that we export goods to Europe and when war comes one side or the other interferes with trade.

"Last year 68 per cent of our agricultural exports went to five countries which are certain to be involved in any major difficulty in Europe and Asia. Only 10 per cent of our agricultural exports went to Pan-America. Both our hearts and our heads lead us increasingly to Pan-America but the facts are stubborn and of necessity can be brought in line with our desires only slowly."

The federation conferred upon Mr. Wallace its highest honor, the award for distinguished service to agriculture.

PLANS of John L. Lewis and his associates in the C. I. O. for organizing the automobile industry workers seemingly are greatly furthered by the formation of a joint council of the United Automobile Workers of America and the Federation of Flat Glass Workers. These two unions, controlling as they do virtually organized workers in the automotive industry, have agreed to unite in a common cause in any controversy with the industry. They are both members of the Lewis group and so are under suspension by the American Federation of Labor.

FOR the first time the government has taken a hand in the steel labor crisis. The national labor relations board has issued a complaint charging the United States Steel corporation and its subsidiary, the Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, with "interfering with the self-organization of employees" in Carnegie's 21 plants.

This action followed the board's investigation of charges filed by Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC and M. F. Tighe, veteran president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

WITH the launching of the Gneisenau, her second 26,000-ton battleship, Germany moved another step toward her goal of a navy large enough to bottle up the Russian fleet. Reichsfuehrer Hitler and many high officials attended the ceremony. The ship was christened by Frau Maerker, widow of the commander of the old Gneisenau, which went down in the battle of the Faulkland islands 22 years ago.

Berlin correspondents believe the new German fleet will have reached 420,000 tons by 1942. It will possess no less than five 35,000-ton battleships, to which can be added two 26,000-ton battleships, three existing 1,000-ton pocket battleships and fourteen light and heavy cruisers, including three more 10,000-ton boats. There will be 40 destroyers and torpedo boats, two airplane carriers and submarines up to the limit of the 1935 pact with Great Britain.

FRANCE and Great Britain united in an invitation to Germany, Italy, Russia and Portugal to join them in an effort to end the Spanish war by mediation. It was thought the time was ripe for this, since both the government forces and the rebels are exhausted by their fierce and inconclusive fighting.

The announcement of the plan came on the eve of the meeting of the League of Nations council, summoned to Geneva to consider the Madrid-Valencia government's appeal against Germany and Italy because of their recognition of the Fascist rebel junta. It is the hope of France and Britain that the Spanish people will be permitted to decide by ballot whether they shall have a Fascist or a Socialist government.

FOURTEEN persons perished when a big Dutch airliner crashed near Croyden airport in England soon after taking off in a dense fog. The plane struck trees and houses and was destroyed by flames. Among the victims were Juan de la Cierva, inventor of the autogyro, and Admiral Saloman Lindman, former prime minister of Sweden. There were only three survivors of the disaster.

HEADS of 21 delegations to the peace conference in Buenos Aires outlined national policies, and among them was Secretary of State Hull, who proposed a program containing what he termed "eight pillars of peace" upon which rest peace and prosperity. These were:

Secretary Hull

1. Internal quiet and education.
[illegible]uent international conferences.
3. Swift ratification of existing peace pacts.
4. Adoption of a common neutrality policy.
5. Fair and equal commercial policies.
6. Practical international cooperation.
7. Strengthening of international law.
8. Faithful observance of the sanctity of treaties.

Next day Mr. Hull offered a neutrality pact for all American republics. His plan would create a permanent inter-American consultative committee to co-ordinate existing peace instruments and bring agreement on a common neutrality policy, based on the United States' neutrality theory.

JOHN HAMILTON, chairman of the Republican national committee, called a meeting of that body to be held in Chicago December 17, and announced that at that time he would submit his resignation.

Mr. Hamilton desires that the committee shall be able to address itself to the plans for a party comeback with a clean slate and with new officers in command, if a change of personnel shall be deemed more conducive to success.

The management of the late campaign has been criticized by some leaders in the East, and also by a few of the most radical of the western leaders; but it may well be that the criticism represents only minority views of the committee and that Mr. Hamilton's resignation will not be accepted.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY HENRY MORGENTHAU announced the mid-December financing operations of the treasury, the main features being further borrowing and refunding that will put the national debt above 34 billion dollars, lowered interest rates on government bonds and elimination of preferential treatment for the small investor. The secretary said that the December 15 financing, which includes the borrowing of 700 millions to cover continuation of deficits incurred, would be the last until March, when heavy income tax collections will pour into the treasury. Refunding raises the overall amount of the financing to $1,486,631,900.

In announcing that the treasury would not permit the small investor to have his subscription up to $5,000 met in full as in the past, but would be forced to accept a prorata share just as is the big bond buyer, Morgenthau declared that the public had "abused" the privilege. The plan "to give the little fellow a break" was initiated by Secretary Ogden Mills during the Hoover regime.

Their Christmas GOOD DEED

by

Jocile Webb Pearson

BILLIE JONES adored his big brother. Jim had been a boy scout before going to college and to be a scout like Jim was Billie's one ambition.

"If we're goin' to be scouts," he confided to his chum Joe Perkins, we oughta begin practicin'."

"Yea, but [illegible] begin?" inquired Joe.

"Huh," snorted Billie, "anyone can do a good deed every day."

"We can help our mothers," said Joe. "Sure," Replied Billie, "but this must be somethin' special like helpin' old Miss Riley carry her basket when it was icy, or somethin'. An' bein' Chrismus, we oughta give somethin'; mebbe a present, too. Say, I got an idee, Joe. Why can't we give her somethin' for our first good deed? She don't have a daddy or nobody to help her."

"But we ain't got money," objected Joe, "an' I bet she needs a lot of things—coal an' kindlin' an' everthin'."

"Leave it to me, Joe. I got a nother idee, but it's to be a secret. 'Tain't a good deed if ya tell anybody. Now cross your heart an' say: 'I'll never tell till death us do part.' There, that's the bindinest words I know."

* * *

Anyone would know it was Christmas by the spicy fragrance in the air. Even before one saw the big lighted tree in the living room.

There were many whispered conversations and signs and giggles between the two boys that Jim's keen eyes found amusing. Coming home one evening he surprised them in the act of smuggling a basket of coal out the back gate.

"Hey, fellows! Where you going with that?" It was Joe who blurted: "Billie says it ain't no good if ya tell." Billie hung his head. "We're just practicin' to be scouts," he stammered, "an this is our good deed. We been doin' it for two weeks—I mean takin' coal to Miss Riley. She's poor an' deaf an' ain't got no daddy to get her coal—half the time we take it from Joe's house"—Billie looked appealingly at Jim.

"An' she only had a teeny little bit," put in Joe, staunchly. "An' you're s'posed to give to folks Chrismus, ain't you?"

"I salute two mighty fine scouts right now," said Jim. "But first we'll have to make clear the scout ideas of property rights. Deliver your coal, then come up to my room and we'll talk things over."

* * *

When old Mrs. Riley hobbled to her door in response to a loud knock Christmas eve, she did not see two little boys scamper behind the coal shed, but she did see a huge basket filled with a generous supply of food, and many bulgy packages piled high on the top, with a "Merry Christmas to you" tied to it.

The "Glorified Christmas Pudding"

By Alice B. Palmer

A SOFT carpet of fresh snow sparkled in the sun and the whole of Christmas was in the room as Lois opened her eyes, yawned contentedly and then suddenly remembered the great conquest of the day—"the Christmas [illegible]

"Oh Em," she shouted, radiant with joy and keen with excitement. "Wake up! Wake up! It's Christmas!"

"What's that?" murmured Em, sleepily. "Oh yes, hurrah for the fun! Is the pudding done?"

Every year, as far back as Lois and Em could remember, they had looked forward with youthful anticipation to the Glorified Christmas Pudding. 'Twas a Swedish rice delicacy, in which an almond had always been concealed. Tradition had proclaimed that the lucky person who came upon the holiday nut in his Christmas pudding was to be the first one married. What fun it had been through the year.

"Well, girls," spoke mother, beaming with the holiday spirit, "who is to get the almond in the Christmas pudding? This is leap year, you know."

Lois and Em giggled, knowingly, exchanging winks, as both were secretely engaged to be married.

Soon mother was busily engaged in the dishing up of this delicious pudding. It was being formed into cone-shaped mounds, resembling Christmas snow.

All eyes were now focused expectantly upon the rich creamy mountains of rice and they could scarcely wait until they dipped their spoons into its foamy depths. Lu was blinking at Em and carefully chewing each individual rice kernel, so as not to miss the almond. Em was slyly winking at mother and smiling confidently. Father was too pleased for words as he calmly viewed the whole situation with satisfied enthusiasm, secretly hoping that he would not come upon the almond.

Where on earth was the Christmas almond? All had quite finished with no sign of the coveted nut. A strange silence pervaded, coupled with a surprised sense of dismay and disappointment.

"Julia," called mother, to the girl in the kitchen, "have you eaten your rice pudding yet?"

"Yes, Mrs. Allen," promptly responded Julia.

"What is the matter, my dear, you look so upset?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Allen, but I almost broke my tooth on a strange nut I found in the pudding."

A louder roar of laughter than was ever heard before, permeated the holiday atmosphere as one by one they tried to explain the Christmas almond to Julia. As the laughter ended, the "Glorified Christmas Pudding" once more faded away into tradition.

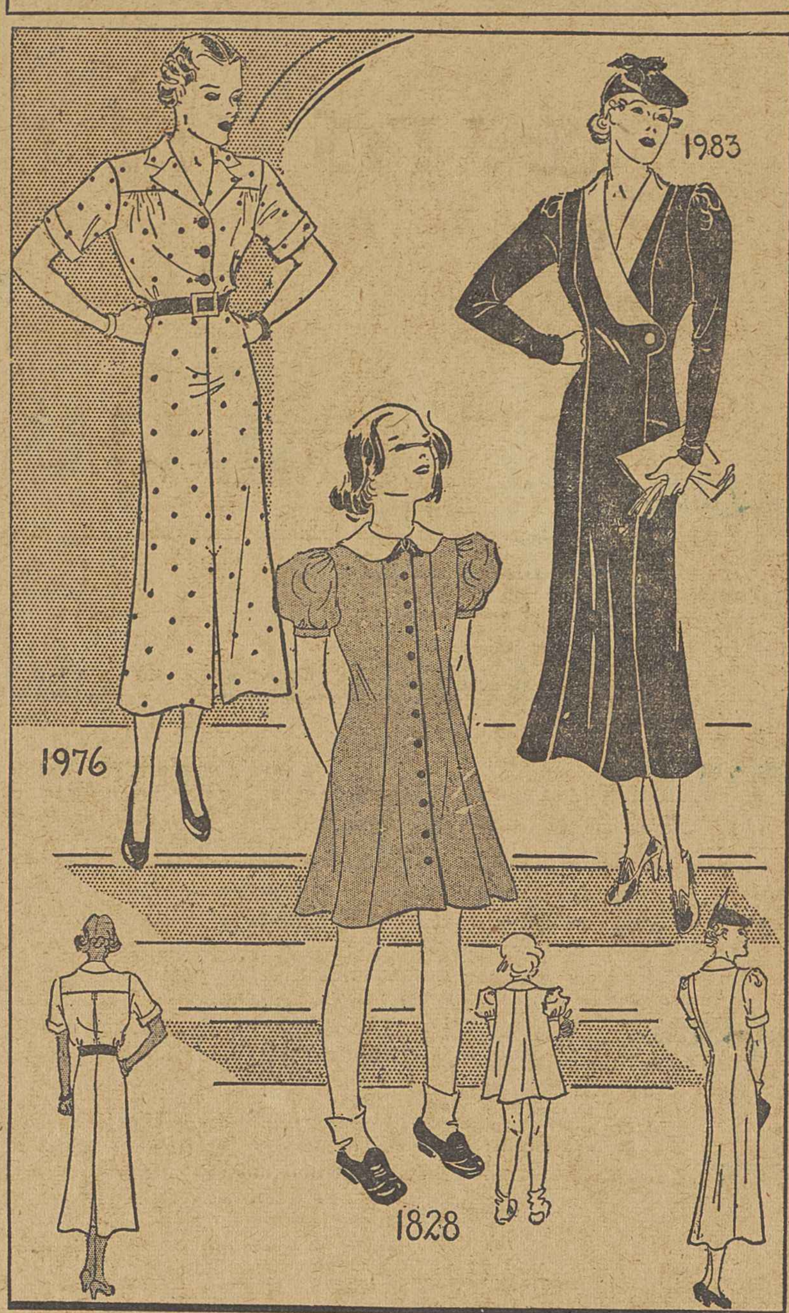
It's Princess Lines Again



AGAIN princess lines are riding the crest of the fashion wave. Good news for members of The Sewing Circle, for princess lines have always been favored by those who sew at home. And for morning wear, the timeless shirtmaker, a perennial choice for busy housewives. Check your wardrobe. It's time to start sewing again, and here are three topnotch selections.

The smart shirtwaister (Pattern 1976) is a utility frock distinguished for its trim lines and as easy to make as it is to wear. Suitable in any of a wide range of fabrics for a wide variety of needs from sun-up to sun-down, this extremely wearable number is available in a wide range of sizes. The notched collar is pert and youthful, there is fulness at the yoke, and the set-in sleeves fit well and wear forever. Send for Pattern 1976 in size 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50. Size 36 requires 4⅜ yards of 35 inch gingham or percale or shantung.

The slick little princess model (Pattern 1828) needs little comment for the picture tells the story. An utterly simple little affair which buttons all the way down the front, it will make an instant hit with your growing daughter and you can slide it through your machine with the greatest of ease. Just seven pieces to the pattern, including the collar and sleeve band, it is available in sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2⅛ yards of 35 inch fabric plus ¼ yard contrast.

The lovely daytime princess frock (Pattern 1983) is a model which can be made and worn successfully by 36's as well as 50's. There is a choice of long or short sleeves and there is just enough contrast in the graceful collar to give the frock a smart touch of distinction. Likewise simple — just eight pieces including the collar and cuff—this pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50. Make it in satin, silk, crepe, sheer wool, broadcloth, challis, or linen. Size 38 requires 5⅜ yards of 39 inch or 3¾ yards of 54 inch fabric. Less with short sleeves.

Don't miss these grand numbers. A detailed sewing chart accompanies each pattern to guide you every step of the way.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young [illegible]trons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Viewpoint on Wealth

"And never the twain shall meet" has been well said. A noted Western visitor, shown the treasuries of an Indian prince, millions of goldpieces, remarked that such great wealth would become even greater if put out to productive uses. "True enough," replied the prince, "but if all this gold were to be taken away, what should I have left to look at?"

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle aged surgeon, is possessed of seemingly supernatural powers. He is able to anticipate what people say before they utter a word; occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, however, is in love with Dan Carlisle, a professor at the University who has little means. They discuss marriage, but decide to delay talking to her father about it. Nancy, who has been playing tennis with Dan that afternoon, tells her father she had been playing with a girl friend. Greeding knows this is untrue and is secretly enraged. Stepping into his wife's room, his eye falls on a marble statuette which he dislikes. He picks it up, wishing he could smash it to bits. Suddenly it is snatched from his grasp as by an invisible force and burst asunder. Mrs. Greeding is greatly disturbed over the mysterious destruction of the statuette. The doctor makes light of it. He reveals that Ira Jerrell wants to marry Nancy. On the way to a dinner party a car cuts in front of Greeding's. He angrily expresses the wish that the driver would break his neck. An instant later an accident occurs in which this very thing happens. At the dinner the Greedings meet Prof. Carlisle, Dan's father, and his daughter Mary Ann.

He forgot his interest in Professor Carlisle. "Mrs. Jordan contrives these things so carefully," he assented in an amused undertone. "Gives us our cue. You worked with Doctor Homans, your father says?"

"For three years," she assented.

He chuckled, curiously stimulated, forgetting for the present that man with a broken neck limp on the turf beside the road.

"I know your brother Dan," he remarked. "See him around the house occasionally. I expect you know Nancy."

"Oh, yes," she agreed. "Of course, I'm older than she." She laughed softly. "And our orbits don't cross very often."

She continued to talk to him, in a pleasant and diverting fashion, of a variety of matters; and Doctor Greeding responded, stimulated by her beauty and her wit. Once at something she said, he threw back his head and laughed so heartily that for a moment everyone else at the table was silenced.

He enjoyed this talk with Mary Ann, but when they rose from the table, he lost her; and thereafter, abstraction descended on him like a cloak. Mrs. Freeding came at last to his rescue, and they made their farewells. He was not anxious to go, had hoped to find himself once more near Mary Ann; and in the car, he said almost resentfully:

"Leaving early, aren't we?"

"I saw how tired you were," she replied, and added with a curious sidelong glance: "Though you seemed to enjoy yourself at dinner."

"Miss Carlisle is attractive, interesting," he assented.

She seemed about to speak, hesitated, said then: "I suppose you're still worrying about that poor man who was killed. But that's just silly, Ned. Forget him." He nodded silently, and she sought some topic to distract him.

"Professor Carlisle was explaining to me about poltergeists," she volunteered in a sprightly tone. "I had told him of the statuette in my room being broken so mysteriously; and he said we probably had a poltergeist in the house!"

Doctor Greeding remembered. "I've heard the word, somewhere."

"It comes from the German," she explained quickly, grateful for his attention. "It means 'a racketing spirit'; and when there is one in a house, it throws stones, crockery, furniture — all sorts of things — all around everywhere."

And she went on hurriedly: "Professor Carlisle said usually these things happen where there is a young girl who is sick, or half crazy, or something." She laughed. "So I told him Nancy certainly wasn't either sick or crazy; and Ruth may not be so awfully well, but she's over forty and perfectly sane, and cook's fifty if she's a day!"

Doctor Greeding, in a sudden startled interest, asked in a careful tone: "Did Professor Carlisle offer any explanation of these phenomena?" His pulse, absurdly, pounded.

"Oh, he says there isn't any," she assured him. "He says such things probably don't really happen; that they're imagined, or faked, or something. Pictures can't just fall off walls, of course; and fires don't start by themselves."

He nodded vigorously. "Of course not," he agreed. "All nonsense!"

But he had a sudden, vivid memory of a sultry summer day, a day in haytime. Himself a small boy in the mow, stowing away the hay as it was tossed up to him, his nostrils full of choking dust, stifled, miserable. He hated the work, the barn, the hay; he wished furiously for any manner of rescue from this toil. And suddenly there was smoke in the air, and flames about his feet, and he leaped down out of the mow —and had need to work no more that day, but only to watch the barn burn merrily.

Mrs. Greeding's voice went on, an undercurrent to his thoughts: "Things don't just fly around for no reason."

And he said, surprisingly uneasy: "Of course not! All those yarns are pure fraud, or superstition, Myra! Old wives' tales! Or trickery! That sort of stunt is the stock-in-trade of professional mediums; but Houdini demonstrated that he could achieve, by natural physical means, every effect the mediums produce. He exploded the whole fake!"

"I know he did," Mrs. Greeding assented; but she added with inconsequent and maddeningly logical stubbornness: "And of course I don't believe in them—in mediums. But the fact that Houdini could do such things by trickery doesn't prove that others couldn't do them by spiritualism, does it, Ned? I mean, just because I can tip a chair over with my hands doesn't prove that you can't tip it over by just looking at it!"

He said harshly, feeling himself accused, a sudden clutch at his throat: "I, Myra? Nonsense! I don't pretend to any psychic powers!"

"Of course not!" she cried, "I didn't mean you. I meant—anyone." And she added: "Professor Carlisle says there are so many things which couldn't happen, and didn't happen—and yet they did happen!"

"Tosh!" he protested.

"Well, anyway," she declared, "I wish this poltergeist, or whatever it was, would put my statuette back together again."

Doctor G[illegible] conversation [illegible] too close home. He turned into their own drive with deep relief.

At the door of her dressing-room Mrs. Greeding kissed him goodnight. "Now, don't worry about that poor man who was killed, Ned," she insisted.

He smiled ruefully, and he said: "I know it's absurd, but—I do feel responsible. I think I'll check up, find out whether his family is left in straits."

She said fondly: "You'd carry all the world's burdens on your shoulders if you could. Good night, my dear."

Till she slept she could hear him moving about in his room next to her. He had, in fact, no inclination for sleep. In pajamas and dressing-gown, he sat for a while trying to read, but the book failed to hold him . . . It was of course absurd to suppose that his own wish could have caused that man's death; and yet Doctor Greeding was disturbed. There were emotions which poisoned a man's soul and his body too, could it be possible that hate and anger might sometimes be like deadly shafts projected into the world?

He himself was almost immune to these passions; he prided himself on this fact, and he thought regretfully of his anger of a while ago. So, seeing the cause of it, he remembered Nancy, and the problem she presented. There was a new kindliness in Doctor Greeding tonight. Of course, he decided, if Nancy truly loved Dan, he would not want her to marry Jerrell; yet she might be led to weigh the one man against the other, might make for herself the wise and sensible choice.

It occurred to him inconsequently that if Nancy married Dan, Mary Ann would become like a member of the family; and that prospect had attractions. But his thoughts in the end returned to the dead man, and to the broken statuette; and he remembered at last what Mrs. Greeding had said about this absurdity of poltergeists. It was an absurdity; and yet he wished suddenly to be informed on the subject, and with this purpose in mind he went downstairs to select as the only ready source of information a volume of the encyclopedia.

Nancy came home while he was there, met him in the lower hall. She exclaimed: "Why, Father! Still up?"

He put his arm around her, proudly kissed her. She was beautiful, straight, slender, young and strong.

"I wasn't sleepy, Nancy," he confessed. "Came down to get a book."

She looked at the volume under his arm. "The encyclopedia! That will put you to sleep, certainly."

"Theater tonight?" he asked.

"Yes," she agreed. "With Judith Plank."

He said quizzically: "That's not the same Judith Plank with whom you played tennis this afternoon."

"Judith?" she repeated in astonishment, forgetting her mendacity; and then suddenly she remembered, and her cheeks were crimson. She retreated from him, white and startled; turned and ran up the stairs. He had only meant to tease her; but by her flight his almost-forgotten anger was a little revived.

"Nancy!" he called. She stopped, half turning. "You mustn't ever lie to me, Nancy," he said sternly.

She hesitated, facing him doubtfully; but after a moment she descended to meet him ascending. On the step above him, she said appealingly:

"I'm sorry, Father, I—a girl—" She laughed in confused dismay. "Well, a girl instinctively wants to keep some things secret," she confessed happily.

And before he could speak, she added: "You're right. It wasn't Judith, this afternoon. It was Dan Carlisle. When you asked me who was here, we'd only just found out that we love each other! That was why I—fibbed to you!"

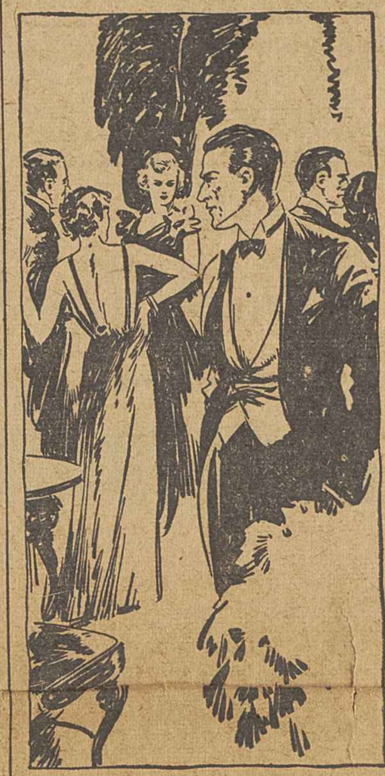
Doctor Greeding touched her shoulder affectionately, guarding his tones. "No reason why you shouldn't tell me and your mother, is there?" he asked quietly.

"I was afraid you wouldn't—"

"Never be afraid of me, Nancy," he urged. "You'll always find me on your side."

"Then you don't mind my—loving Dan!"

"I mind your being afraid of me." He kissed her again, and he added judicially: "As for Dan, I hardly know him, Nancy. Bring him around more often. Let your mother and me get acquainted with that young man." And he suggested:



Abstraction Descended on Him Like a Cloak.

"After all, there's no hurry. You and he will want to treasure this new happiness in secret for a while."

Then, before she could either assent or demur, he said: "Good night. It's late, my dear."

She hugged him warmly. "You're sweet!" she whispered. "Good night, Father!" And ran up the stairs.

He followed more slowly; and in his own room, the door closed behind him, he stood fixed and rigid, frowning. But in the end he dismissed Nancy for the present from his mind, and opened the volume he had brought upstairs.

CHAPTER III.

Next day Doctor Greeding was not his usual self while in the operating-room. Ordinarily he worked without conscious effort, smoothly and swiftly; but today each procedure required a conscious concentration.

Doctor Mayhew, his assistant, observed this; and Miss Rimes, the surgical nurse, likewise felt it, and reacted to Doctor Greeding's tension by a definite failure in her usual efficiency. Once when without looking toward her he reached for dissecting scissors, she offered him the knife instead, and the point punctured his glove, so that he had to change.

Such accidents had occurred before; but today Doctor Greeding was in no case to meet the incident equably and calmly. Fortunately the skin was not even pricked; yet many a surgeon had lost a finger, or a hand or an arm as easily as this; and he told Miss Rimes so, in dry, cutting tones.

Even while he spoke, he realized suddenly that he disliked Miss Rimes intensely. She was an efficient nurse; but he recognized now that she was a dark, unlovely woman. He had never before thought of her except as an automaton; and his physical distaste for her lent an unintended heat to his rebuke.

She made no defense; but afterward in the corridor he saw her talking with Doctor Mayhew; and there was a hint of tears, of hysteria, in her manner. So Doctor Greeding belatedly repented his heat; and back in his office, he summoned Doctor Mayhew and by way of amends bade him grant Miss Rimes a month's full-pay vacation.

Doctor Mayhew suggested doubtfully: "I'm afraid, after her mistake this morning, she may feel this is a reproof!"

"Not at all," Doctor Greeding insisted. "It is simply that I think she is overworked, tired."

But the other man persisted in his view; and Doctor Greeding reluctantly summoned Miss Rimes and in Doctor Mayhew's presence made amends.

"I owe you an apology, Miss Rimes," he confessed. "I was tired this morning, nervous; and I blew off steam at your expense. I'm sorry."

She assured him, eagerly: "I was clumsy!" But when he spoke of the vacation he proposed that she should take, she protested: "Oh, I can't just now! With Miss Johnson ill, there's no one to handle the work; and I'm not tired, really."

"Nonsense!" he said in fraternal kindliness. "We'll manage!"

After she had left the office, Dr. Mayhew asked: "Who will you use in her place? Miss Ryan?"

Doctor Greeding hesitated. He had not considered this problem. but now he smiled in swift appreciation of the fact that luck once more had played his game. But he only said guardedly:

"I have some one in mind. Let it rest for now."

But when Doctor Mayhew was gone, he rang for his secretary. "Will you phone Miss Mary Ann Carlisle," he directed, and gave Professor Carlisle's name and address. "Ask her to come in and see me, if she can; say I may have some work for her."

An hour later, Miss Carlisle was announced. "Our meeting last night may have been fortunate for us both, Miss Carlisle," he said to her. "I don't know if my secretary told you why I wished to see you?" She shook her head, and he explained: "My surgical nurse, Miss Rimes, has been working too hard. I've given her a vacation, and that leaves us short-handed. Naturally, I thought of you. I believe you said you've had some experience in assisting?"

"Yes," she agreed. "I worked with Doctor Homans."

"His specialty was the brain, of course," Doctor Greeding commented, in no hurry, content to watch her, to go slowly. "My work is more general." He added: "However, a few days will give you the routine, I'm sure." And he smiled. "I'm proposing, you understand, that you come in and work with me."

She said: "I've been doing special nursing; but—I should be glad of a more steady income." She smiled faintly. "As you may imagine, with two rather improvident professors in the family—"

He chuckled. "Naturally." They discussed finances. "Then suppose we try it," he suggested. "If we are both satisfied, there is no reason why you should not stay on indefinitely. Even after Miss Rimes returns. You can alternate with her, [illegible] side the operating-room which you can divide between you."

She asked calmly: "Shall I start now? Or report in the morning?"

And thus swiftly the matter was arranged. Doctor Greeding drove home that afternoon in his usual easy mind. The tragedy of the day before, he began to dismiss as the coincidence it had appeared to be; he could ignore the formless, terrifying shapes that floated in the background of his thoughts.

So soon as he came home, he asked for Nancy.

"She's gone into the country with Dan," Mrs. Greeding explained. "To some little inn for dinner." She watched her husband doubtfully; but he said, in a disarming tone:

"I saw her for a moment last night when she came home. We had a little talk, Myra. Probably I was wrong to be—dogmatic, yesterday, to play the angry parent. Dan's all right, I expect." He hesitated, conscious of a faint confusion. "As a matter of fact," he said, smiling at his own thoughts, "I think better of the Carlisles than I did yesterday. I even engaged Miss Carlisle to take Miss Rimes' place, this afternoon."

She stared at him, frank doubt in her eyes. "Ned, was that wise?" she wondered. "After all, while she may be a charming dinner partner—"

"Oh, I sha'n't keep her on unless she does her work," he said casually.

"She's entirely too attractive to be a nurse," Mrs. Greeding insisted. "Mary Ann is one of these independent young women, perfectly sure of herself and of everything else; resentful of—conventions."

"You make her sound dangerously fascinating," he said, amused, and touched her arm affectionately. "You've always had the notion some siren would carry me away, Myra. In spite of the fact that none has ever even tried!"

She smiled at him. "Nonsense, Ned. You know I never worry about you, my dear!"

"You never need to," he assured her gently.

Many Types of Iguanas

There are at least 400 types of Iguanas, scattered through the West Indies, Central and South America. The circus chameleon, which can turn green, brown or grey, is said to belong to this big family. Another odd type is a lizard which can run on water, using his hind feet only. The fellow raises his body and tail and folds his forelegs while performing his unique stunt. There are land, tree and water types of iguanas of multiple sizes and shapes. Practically all branches of the family are confined to southern portions of the New World.

Light-Footedness Is Cardinal Virtue of the Newfoundland Seal Hunters

Fleet Brings Back Milady's Shoes and Soap in the Raw.

"Milady, dressed in the height of fashion, rarely thinks of the storm-swept Arctic seas where sturdy ships have been crushed, burned, and blown up in the race to fill staunch hulls of the Newfoundland sealing fleet with seal skins and fat, from which her fine shoes, pinseal handbag, and costly toilet soap may be made," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"With the lengthening days of March, thousands of mother seals come up through 'bobbing holes' and bear their young on the shifting ice fields north of Newfoundland. Innumerable little furry, white puppies lie among the ice pinnacles, gaining weight at the phenomenal rate of two or three pounds a day.

"Daddy seal goes off with his cronies to boast about his youngster. Mother seal stays home and does the work. Hour after hour she scours the adjacent icy seas for fish. She does not feed fish to her young, but gobbles great quantities herself so that she may provide abundant rich milk for her offspring.

"When a baby seal is about two weeks old and resembles a fat roll of butter, it may notice its mother sniffing the air suspiciously. Not far away a huge black hulk drifts close through shattered ice pans. A clamor of strange noises fills the air and odd two-legged creatures run out over the fields of ice. The baby seal is too much interested to be disturbed, but, as several of the intruders draw near, its startled mother makes off with other grown-ups. Quickly they slip into the ocean through convenient breathing holes. The baby seal and its playmates wriggle toward the strangers.

"Early in March a small fleet of scarred, ice-breaking ships sail out of the bottleneck of St. John's harbor, bound for seal-peppered ice fields off Labrador. Steamers smash their way through grinding ice, guided by members of the crew in lookout 'barrels' high on the masts. Their cries of 'Seals ahead!' give the signal for frenzied preparations among the milling crews beneath.

"At the call, 'Over the sides!', nimble, raw-boned men jump out on spinning pans, armed with dogwood bats having iron hooks and spikes, razor - sharp knives and light drag-ropes. Acres of moon-eyed white pincushions await the 'fishermen,' curious and unafraid.

"The sealer attacks his quarry with his bat, expertly husks off the sculps (the skins and adherent fat), leaving the carcasses steaming on the ice. Three or four sculps are strung on a rope, by which the sealer hauls them to one of the colored marker flags where several men pile their catches. Later, the ship breaks through the icefields to these piles. The sculps are hoisted aboard and dumped into fat-soaked holds.

"Back in port, the fat-layers are cut off the pelts and rendered into a fine odorless, colorless oil. Rough skins are transformed into fine leather. The oil is a constituent of some soaps and also is used as a lubricant, as an illuminating oil, as an adulterant of cod liver oil and in treating leather. Seal skins are cut and sewn into boots, pocketbooks, and novelty leather goods."

His Name Is Kanani—and 58 More Letters

Believe it or not, but—

Here's a lad whose name is Kananinoheaokuuhomeopuukaimanaalohilohiohinokeaweaweulamakaokalani. Just to make it complete, the parents added Reginald Wilhelm.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond M. Judd of Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, were not trying for an all-American record when they named their baby. They were just following an old Hawaiian custom. The name is translated "The beautiful aroma of my home at sparkling Diamond Hill is carried to the eyes of heaven."

Oh, yes, they will call him "Joe" for short.

Thought Volt-Aire Some New Refrigerator Stock

Some years ago, relates David L. Salmon in "Confessions of a Former Customers' Man," one of the most important among the floor traders of the New York Stock Exchange, who was long on nerve but terribly short on education, was invited to a literary affair in Greenwich village. A lady villager, sitting opposite him, leaned over and in the confidential manner, said:

"Mr. Meadows, what do you think of Voltaire?"

After giving the subject a deep ten second analysis, our Wall Street Wotan said:

"I think it will go much lower."

Earlier King Edwards

Britain has had an Edward the Elder, son of Alfred the Great, King of the West Saxons, who began his reign in the year 901; an Edward the Martyr, his great-grandson, and an Edward the Confessor, who died in 1066 and who prepared the way for the Norman conquest.

TRACTION MEANS GROUND GRIP!

GROUND GRIP MEANS "FIRESTONE"!

TRACTION on unimproved roads in bad weather is a problem which has long baffled tire engineers. Sure footing on a muddy football field is also a problem. But during the wet, slippery football season of 1936, thousands of players depended upon the cleats of their shoes to bring them through for the winning play.

During 1937 thousands of car, truck and bus owners will depend upon the rugged rubber cleats of Firestone Ground Grip Tires to pull them through snow, mud, sand, or over any unimproved roads.

The scientific tread of the Ground Grip Tire is so distinctive in design and so unusual in performance that it has become known as "the tire that makes its own road." It is almost unbelievable how these super-traction tires dig in, grip, and pull you through. They are self-cleaning. Chains are not necessary. Equip the rear wheels of your car, truck or bus with a pair of Ground Grip Tires and save time, money and trouble.

If you have not already equipped your tractor and farm implements with Ground Grip Tires do it now — they will save you 25% in time and fuel costs, reduce vibration, and provide greater comfort.

Call on your nearby Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer, or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today. Start now to reap the many advantages of the Firestone Ground Grip Tire — the greatest traction tire ever built!

IT WILL BE A GOOD SHOW

Dr. J. Alex Moore is figuring on going into the show business. He has perceived a scheme that may make more money than the bank. It may even surpass Eddie Watson's jack pot.

The idea was picked up by Dr. Moore Tuesday night at the Civic Club banquet. A banker always looks ahead to see the money possibilities of a proposition or combination.

Dr. Moore's plan, roughly:

To inaugurate a show constructed along the lines of the old plantation minstrel—plan of construction only—features to be more modern. Dr. Vaughan is to be the "perfesser"; Dr. Acker and Dr. Harman are to be the end men, or chief crackers of jokes; Dr. Napier is to be conciliator, whose function is to settle all disputes such as who is crosseyed.

The retinue of go-betweens offers a wealth of opportunities, among whom, it is indicated, certain to be assigned places are: Luther Shaw, Omar Burns, Zollie Cowart, Bob Reid, and Eddie Watson (in competition with himself).

Yes, indeed, Mr. Moore, it will be a good show. We make application now for a season ticket, and await with breathless anticipation the announcement of the opening engagement.

Winners In Trade Day Drawing Saturday

Several of our citizens were lucky at the Trade Day Drawing last Saturday. At this particular time, just before Christmas, it must have been a pleasant surprise. Mrs. Carey Mahan drew the grand prize of 20. Mrs. T. W. Cox, who had been one of the lucky ones before, drew [illegible] George Kendrick, Miss Martha Mahan and Mr. Vance Barnes each drew $5.

NOTICE APPLICATION FOR CLEMENCY

Notice is hereby given that Charlie Brown, colored, convicted in Shelby County, of Grand Larceny, and sentenced to the penitentiary from two to three years, which sentence was begun on September 24, 1934, will make application to the Governor and Board of Pardons for permanent parole.—(signed) Charlie Brown.

THE DAY OF LITTLE BUSINES

It is often argued that the development of large businesses—especially in retail fields—has tended to destroy little businesses and to make it next to impossible for a man without vast capital to set up his own establishment.

This argument has a strong appeal—but apparent facts contradict it.

During the depression, thousands of little businesses sprung up in this country—largely because of the difficulty of individuals in finding employment. These little businesses offered specialized services, or lower prices, or were the outgrowth of a new idea of some kind. Many of them found a ready welcome, and have prospered. With the return of better times, they are going ahead—and in due course a percentage of them will become big businesses.

Some of these businesses have failed because they did not provide good service, or did not fill a definite need. But many a large business has failed for the same reasons.

One has only to look around any growing community today and see a legion of opportunities in retail lines for young men and women who are willing to work, and realize that riches cannot be earned overnight. Even as changing times made necessary big business combinations to serve the public, so the evolutionary process has created a hundred opportunities where one existed a generation ago.

The day of little business isn't done—it is just beginning.

BASKETBALL PROGRESSING

Backetball practice has been running along smoothly for two weeks. Coach Collins stated that he thought he had a fine squad to work with, and that they should have a very fine team this year.

Only a few games have been arranged for yet, but these include games with: Clanton, Jemison and Phillips.

CLASS FOOTBALL

Mr. Tidwell, Principal of the Montevallo High School, has arranged for the classes to play football against each other. No letter men are allowed to play, but all the other boys in each class are urged to play, with the exception of the Junior I's.

Already several of the classes are working out their plays, shifts, defenses, etc, under the coaching of the letter men from the varsity.

The first game to be played will be played between the Sr. I and the Jr. II classes.

Economic Highlights

"Only those who have followed the sad record of the relations between the United States and the governments of the countries south of us can really appreciate the epochal change that President Roosevelt has brought to the inter-American scene."

So wrote David Lawrence—one of the President's severest critics so far as domestic policy is concerned—in the United States News of November 30.

About all the average citizen knows about U. S. foreign policy as this western hemisphere is that it is related to the other countries in governed by something celebrated and vague called the Monroe doctrine. Probably not one citizen in fifty could accurately tell you what the Monroe Doctrine provides. And probably not one citizen in a hundred realizes that the doctrine has been virtually a dead letter for several years and, as well, has caused a vast amount of unfriendly feeling toward this country in the republics to the south.

Briefly and roughly described, the Monroe Doctrine meant that the United States would not permit any European nation to take over territory in Latin America—that the U. S. would act as "Big Brother" in protecting Latin American territorial rights as well as its own. This seemed fair enough—but the doctrine had not been in effect for long before discord arose. More than a century ago, Brazil requested that the Doctrine, in David Lawrence's words, "be made international, that it become a sort of offensive and defensive alliance in which all Latin countries should join with the United States in keeping European armies and natives out of this part of the world." That request was refused, as were similar repuests made periodically in later years.

Consequently, the Latin Republics came to feel, rightly or worthly, that the U. S. was taking advantage of the Doctrine to rule their countries. This feeling was strengthened by sending U. S. Marines south whenever trouble appeared in a Latin American nation.

There are no marines in Latin-America now—and it seems doubtful if any will be sent there again. It is a curious fact that both Hoover and Roosevelt took the initiative in withdrawing the last of these agents of what Latin America considered "U. S. Imperialism." No longer does Washington take the position that it will back up any foreign ventures of American citizens with armed force if necessary. Our citizens now travel in Latin America at their own risk, and are subject to the laws of the countries where they go. Diplomacy will be used to help them in difficulties—but not force. In other words, their status is the same as if travelling in England, France and other European nations.

What is the result of all this? In the eyes of many American observers, the result will be a genuine feeling of friendliness for us on the part of the republics to the south—and there are signs that such a feeling is now developing, though much suspicion remains. There is also the hope that dormant trade will be revived, and that by example the Western hemisphere will show the world how to live without war, settling differences by amicable conferences. Furthermore, it is hoped that treaties will be effected whereby European powers wishing war materials will find the raw material markets of North and South America—the greatest in the world—firmly closed to them.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech at the recent Pan-American conference is generally considered one of the best he has ever made—he handled a delicate task well. Credit for the groundwork is given to Secretary Hull, who has spent his public life working quietly for peace, and for better commercial and diplomatic relations between powers.

Business Week has published an interesting chart showing the business record state bystate—comparing the first nine months of 1936 to the same period last year.

Biggest improvement in passenger car sales—38 per cent—occurred in the Pacific Coast States, with the Mountain group running a close second with 35 per cent. In commercial car sales, however, the East South Central States were first, up 37 per cent, with second place chared by the East North Central and West North Central—which showed an advance of 31 per cent each.

The Middle Atlantic commonwealths led by far in heavy construction, with an improvement of 121 per cent. Second was the East South Central group, advancing 81 per cent.

Biggest gain in electric power output, 21 per cent, occurred in the [illegible] Mountain group second, up 19 per cent.

Farm income gained most in New England, 28 per cent, with the Mountain States, West North Central States, all showing a 16 per cent jump.

Value of checks drawn—one of the most accurate of business barometers—increased 19 per cent in the Pacific States, the largest gain. Second with 18 per cent were the East North Central States.

Yule Cheer Looms In South As Cotton Price Goes Higher

New Orleans, Dec. 15.—The best of all Christmas presents for the South, a high price for cotton, appeared assured tonight as the result of a market maneuver by New Orleans brokers.

In the past month the price of the staple has advanced $5 a bale to a price close to 13 cents a pound. With about 2,000,000 bales still to be sold from this season's crop, this means an added $10,000,000 for the cotton growers of the South.

It also appeared that the firm of Tulis, Craig and Company, which has been behind the advance, had successfully completed one of the first coups on the cotton market in several years.

While hedged in with several technical factors their operation followed the simple rule of buying when they thought cotton was cheap and selling it at a higher price.

The sharp upturn in the December position, in which most of the activity had centered drew rumors of a "squeeze" and widely circulated reports that the firm had realized from $200,000 to $2,000,000 on the deal.

This drew a prompt denial today from Garner M. Tullis, head of Tullis, Craig and Company.

Mr. Tullis said the company had no intention of "creating a so-called squeeze in the December contract and that the entire story of our operations has been greatly exaggerated."

He refused to comment on the amount of cotton his firm had acquired, but conservative opinion around the ring placed it at approximately 40,000 bales.

This cotton was bought at prices ranging from 11.50 cents a pound upward. Today middling spot cotton at New Orleans is 12.72 cents a pound.

The tremendous demand for spot cotton by mills both here and abroad at prices made at an opportune time to accept delivery against future contracts.

The upper movement for cotton was given added impetus when Tullis, Craig and Company took delivery on all December cotton sold to them in past weeks. Customarily, firms that are long on cotton sell it back to short interests when it comes time for delivery. By taking the cotton, Tullis, Craig and Company increased the tight spot situation and brought a sharp advance for both futures and spot cotton prices.

The trade has been following the operation closely for the past two weeks and opinions varied in whether prices would hold at levels that would make it profitable.

With tomorrow the last day of trading in the December position and no heavy selling expected, it appeared tonigth the coup had been successful.

WATER MILL

The Montevallo water mill is now in operation again, all repaired and in good shape. The same old miller, Mr. E. L. Cloninger is operating the mill. The farmers and merchants will do well to patronize this mill where the best of meal is made.

Y. W. A. CHRISTMAS PLAY

FORD

advances into 1937 with the

LOWEST PRICE IN YEARS

and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance. 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

The 60-horsepower V-8 engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine, available in five body types, is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase — to the same advanced design — with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." And it delivers V-8 smoothness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937.

FORD FEATURES FOR 1937

APPEARANCE—Distinctive design. Headlamps in fender aprons. Modern lid-type hood. Larger luggage space. New interiors. Slanting V-type windshield.

BRAKES—Easy-Action Safety Brakes with "the safety of steel from pedal to wheel." Cable and conduit control. About one-third less brake pedal pressure required.

BODY—All steel. Top, sides, floor and frame welded into a single steel unit. Safety Glass throughout at no extra charge.

COMFORT AND QUIET—A big, roomy car. Center-Poise comfort increased by smoother spring-action with new pressure lubrication. New methods of mounting body and engine make a quieter car.

State Capitol News

Montgomery, Ala.—For the first time in the history of the State, it is claimed, a Governor has secured the passage of two important major measures through the lower House in the first six days of a special session of the Legislature. On the fifth legislative day a bill was passed imposing a tax of 1½ per cent tax upon retail gross receipts, and on the sixth day a bill passed the House providing for the sale of alcoholic beverages through State-operated stores.

Both of the above bills were forced to withsetand vigorous attacks from the opposition and it appeared for the time that the bill legalizing the sale of intoxicants in the State would go down in defeat. The tax bill is expected to pass theSenate before the end of the eighth legislative day, and the beverage bill will be close on its heels, sponsors claim.

The beverage bill, sponsors claim, will not increase consumption of intoxicant beverages in Alabama, but will produce approximately $2,500,000 in revenue from a source not now taxed. "It is not bringing liquor back," they say, "but deriving revenue from the liquor that is already here."

The chief burden of the argument of opponents of the tax measure, which we call a "sales tax", centered around their contention that the Governor had promised no sales tax and no tax sales, pointing to that part in his printed platform in which he promised to balance the budget, pay the State's debts, run our schools, and operate an efficient government by economy without further taxation, but overlooking what he said if conditions could make this impossible.

Friends of the administration point out that the Governor said "I still promise to pay the debts, run the schools and provide an efficient government, and do so with the least possible burden on our people."

Political observers who remember things point out that in the campaign six years ago, Governor B. M. Miller promised "no taxes" and always added, "Alabama must pay her debts." Then when he took up his duties as Governor, he found that the promise that Alabama must pay her debts, could not be kept without additional taxes, therefore, he proceeded to impose additional taxes and paid the debts. Governor Graves is simply following in the footsteps of other Governors, in meeting conditions as they arise, regardless of what might have been his intentions during the campaign.

In this, his friends point out, he is following the example of President Roosevelt, who was elected on a platform of abolishing bureaus, then changed conditions forced him to add an army of employes to the already large force in order that the people might not suffer.

By a vote of 21 to 5, the State Senate last week adopted the following bill, offered by Senator Miller Bonner, of Wilcox.

Section 1. That the holder of any office in Alabama, either state, county, or municipal, who, while such officer, violates any written campaign promise or pledge hereafter made while a candidate for election to such office, shall be guilty of felony and subject to impeachment.

Section 2. Any person who violates this act shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary of this State for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

The liquor bill, ready for the Senate, contains a provision by which any County in the State can ban the sale of intoxicants. Only ten per cent of the registered voters can prevent the act from becoming operative in such county until an election can be held, then if a majority vote "dry" the county will remain dry, but share in the net revenue derived from the sale of alcoholic beverages in the "wet" counties.

THE ENVY OF ALL NATIONS

America leads the world in life insurance outstanding—both in total volume, and in per capita holdings—by a tremendous margin.

No other people have done so much to create financial buffers to care for the troubles that may come in the future.

This is one more example of the fact that, in spite of hard times, the American people are the envy of all other nations.

New Cars Show Improvement

Last month the automobile shows were held throughout the country. The new cars are more beautiful in design and finish than ever before. They offer much in the way of improvements and gadgets. Their power plants deliver staggering performance—you can push the throttle down and run up to eighty or ninety miles per hour without trouble—so far as the mechanics of your car are concerned.

However, the emphasis placed on speed has been productive of one of the gravest national "troubles" America has known—the growing accident toll. And the driver who thinks that seventy is safe because it seems as slow as thirty used to, should think again.

Silent engine performance won't help if we encounter a cement guard rail at high speed. Effortless steering won't make a head-on crash less destructive. Lack of vibration won't help the undertaker to patch us together after the wrecking crew gets the body out with blow torches.

But these modern cars are magnificient examples of saftey-engineering—blue-print safety. Brakes stop a hurtling machine in amazingly short distance, without sway or shock. All-steel bodies will take a lot of punishment without serious damage. Steering mechanisms are next to fool proof. And the tire manufacturers have done their bit by reducing the blow-out hazard to a minimum.

Yet each year's safety improvements have been followed by more accidents, not fewer accidents—and by more serious accidents, not less svere accidents. Why? Because we, the motoring public, have overestimated the safety factor of new cars, just as we have overestimated the safety factor of wider, better surfaced highways. The cars and the roads are improved—and so we take the chances that lead to disaster.

The new, super performing cars are out. Maybe you are lucky enough to be able to buy one. Have a good time with it—but treat it with respect and remember that 36,000 people die and many times more are injured and maimed on our streets and highways every year. Don't add to that list.

Mr. Grady Carter made a business trip to Birmingham last Saturday.

The Real Alice Boyd

CHARLOTTE PETERSON

Elementary Training School, Alabama College, Montevallo

(From Alabama School Jornal)

Thirteen years of intimate relationship gives to one an opportunity to weigh evidences which portray the finest and strongest in the daily lives of those with whom we live. To the most of us at Alabama College has come this privilege. We have truly lived with Alice Boyd these thirteen fruitful years in which she so willingly gave of her best to her state, to Alabama College and to her co-workers.

As principal of the elementary Training School she soon won the respect and admiration of her teachers by her wise and just guidance. Truly, it may be said of her that always "Mercy tempered justice." When problems arose, her's was always wise council. Our faculty soon became as a happy family where love reigned.

With the children she showed the same sympathetic understanding. She knew the fine distinction between sternness and firmness and thereby won the confidence of the children down through the years. She worked untiringly that the underprivileged child might be more adequately prepared for his school activities. No really ill child ever missed her visits which always brought a small gift to prove her loving interest in his well being. As though to strengthen the bond between them she was able to call each child by name even though she had no direct contact with them in the classroom. Surely the love of a little child is the most treasured of laurels.

The parents, too, held her in high esteem. In the humblest of homes as well as the most cultured, she was a welcome guest. To her troubled souls came for understanding and sound advice. Always she seemed to find some solution for their many and varied problems. She held their confidence in high regard.

In the community Miss Boyd was a valued citizen. She was indeed a valued part of its very life. In school and community affairs, she was always there to add to the jovialty with her sage and witty remarks. In the several clubs in which she held membership, she rendered valuable service both as officer and participating member. She put her church always in the foreground and never shirked a responsibility therein.

As an official, among her many excellent qualities, should be placed loyalty as one of the most outstanding; loyalty to school officials, loyalty to her fellow-teachers, loyalty to her friends and to her church. In the years of association with her as teacher and friend, I never knew her to be guilty of a disloyal act.

Her's was a truly courageous spirit. She never lacked courage to carry through any undertaking when she believed it to be right and just. Never a soldier fought more valiantly than she in the face of impending doom. Her's was the courage which all the world honors.

A rare privilege has been mine these only too few years, in that she has been a member of our family and in this relationship some of the sweetest traits in her character were revealed to me. No special occasion that concerned the least of us was allowed to pass unnoticed, no servxice that is within her power to render was left undone. Just now, there is blooming in our home a lovely little flower whose beauty is a gentle reminder of her thoughtfulness and love.

May we always remember her as "one from whom deeds of week-day holiness fell nioseless as the snow."

Consumer's Anti-Sales Tax Forces Threaten Court Action

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 14.—Unyielding in its stand of "no compromise" with the administration of new-tax-advocates on a proposal to substitute a two per cent sales tax bill for the Ellis 1½ per cent gross receipts tax measure, the Consumer's Anti-Sales Tax Association of Alabama Monday had inaugurated a program calling for a determined court fight with the avowed goal of resisting collection of the tax "to the bitter end" in the event the legislation, now pending in the senate, is given final approval by the special session legislature.

A resolution reiterating its determination not to compromise, but to continue the fight against the gross receipts tax, or any other form of new taxation, was adopted by the executive committee of the association meeting at the Whitley Hotel here Sunday night. At this meeting, attended by representatives speaking for the farmer, consumer and merchant, speakers told of emissaries, representing themselves as speaking for the administration, contacting merchants in various parts of the state in an effort to gain support of retailers for a two per cent sales tax measure as a substitute for the gross receipts tax bill.

"We say no, unqualifiedly, to this move," read the resolution, adopted unanimously "We stand for economy in state government, not more taxes. Our appeals to the administration for an economy program, such as incorporated in the so-called Spark's plan, which would have solved the school problem, have been ignored.

"We stand unalterably opposed to the gross receipts tax or a sales tax, and in the event of enactment of either measure by the legislature, recommend that every merchant in the state refuse to pay the tax and at the same time refuse access to his books by the state department's office. Then in event of prosecution by the State, the merchant is urged to demand a jury trial and to prolong the litigation just as long as possible, so that none of this tax money will be paid into the state treasury during the remaining two years of the Graves administration."

Jeff Beeland, Greenville, president of the association, presided at the meeting and stated that only in one of two instances had any merchant been prevailed upon to endorse a general sales tax as a substitute for the gross receipts tax. This occurred at Mobile, where "two or three" favored "riding along with the administration," he said, because they felt that the governor was going "to shove a tax down their throats anyhow and they might as well accept his trade which promised the means of freeing Cochrane Bridge." Other speakers read articles appearing in a Mobile newspaper that quoted Representative W. C. Taylor, of Mobile County, as stating that the bridge would be freed of tolls or "another bridge will be constructed" as a result of an understanding with the administration. Mobile's three house representatives voted for the Ellis gross receipts bill.

"Aside from this there have been no defections in our ranks," said Beeland. He read telegrams from chairmen of county units of the association from all sections of Alabama urging no surrender and no compromise.

"If we are beaten, we will take our licking standing up like men," he said. "We will not compromise, nor will we cease our fight, as we know that we have right and justice on our side. This tax proposal is only another scheme to pour millions into the coffers of one of the greatest political machines this state has ever known.

"We know from the expressions here tonight, and from telegrams we have received that the consumers—farmer, laborer and white collar worker—are with us to every man and woman in the state, because they are the ones who will bear most of the burden in the event that this piece of legislation is enacted and the state is able to collect the money.

"You notice I say 'if the state is able to collect the money.' I sincerely believe that an aroused sentiment will sweep this state like wild fire when the true story of how the administration has traded and swapped for votes in order to shove this bill through the legislature, and an outraged and wronged public will not only demand a house-cleaning, but will sweep all officials and lawmakers responsible out of office as speedily as possible."

Simultaneously with this action, reports Monday told of indignation meetings in many sections of the state and more scheduled during the week. Sunday, at Uniontown, a large gathering of farmers, merchants, and workers were reported to have met at the Economy Store and adopted a resolution urging a state-wide "Boston Tea Party" movement in which consumer and merchant would be pledged to refuse to pay or collect the proposed tax. Another mass demonstration meeting was reported planned at Huntsville Monday night.

WILTON NEWS

We are glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Williard Jackson to our community. They have rooms with Mrs. Ben Smith.

Miss Martha Milstead, of Bessemer, visited her mother, Mrs. Ruby Milstead, Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Arnold, of Aldrich, spent Monday in Wilton.

Kathryn Limly, of Aldrich, spent Saturday with her mother.

Mr. Forest Jackson and son, Dempsey, of Six Mile, spent Sunday with relatives here.

Mrs. Roy Tatum and Miss Alma Battle spent Monday with their mother, Mrs. Charles A. Battle, of Six Mile.

Mrs. Mary Limly spent last week in Selma where she was called due to the illness and death of Mrs. G. H. Graham.

We are sorry to report Mr. J. D. Bean was taken to South Highland Infirmary Friday night.

Funeral services were held at 4:00 o'clock p.m. Monday for Mrs. G. H. Graham, 79, widow of the late George H. Graham, of Selma. Mrs. Graham, of Maplesville and Selma, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jesse Baggott, in Selma, early Sunday morning. She was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Baggott and Mrs. Ada Patton, of Philadelphia; three sons, Norman W. and Dewey P. Graham, of Selma, and Dan H. Graham, of Montgomery. Services were held at the Brislin Brothers Funeral Home at 4:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. John Cunningham, of the Central Baptist Church and the Rev. B. F. Haight, of the First Baptist Church of Selma. She will be greatly missed by the host of friends that she made while visiting here in Wilton.

There will be a dance at Marvel Hall on December 18th. Those who wish to enjoy this form of recreation will be interested to know that Coleman Sachs and his orchestra will be featured.

Mr. Peters Gives Additional Data On The History Of The Dove

Montgomery, Ala.—In addition to studying the life and history of the dove, Harold S. Peters, Project Leader of the Alabama Cooperative Wildlife Research Station at Auburn, and his assistants have devoted much time during the past year to studies of land management in raising quail, factors influencing the increase and maintenance of deer, and food for waterfowl.

This research work is sponsored jointly by the State Conservation Department, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey and American Wildlife Institute.

The quail priject, as outlined by Peters, has been primarily one of land management ,as no attention has been given to life history to date. The preliminary work has indicated that there is sufficent seed stock of quial throughout most of the State and if this seed stock is given sufficient protection, food and cover it should increase to sufficient numbers to provide good hunting for sportsmen.

"By protection we mean protection against overshooting by man, as well as protection from various bird and animal predators and the uncontrolled fires which generally sweep over most of the State some time during the dormant season of plant growth," Peters said.

One of the predators of quial is the fire ant and a study of methods to control this ant is to be stressed during the coming year. Quail food plants have been collected for analytical purposes and trial plantings have been made in cooperation with the Auburn Agronomy Department as one phase of the land management program. A few quail likewise have been collected for a study of parasites and diseases.

The deer project has been established on the lands of the Alabama Lumber Company in Sumter County. This tract of approximately 112,000 acres of land has been handled primarily for timber production during the last 30 or 35 years, but Col. E. F. Allison has protected the deer to such an extent that they have increased to extremely heavy concentrations. Particular emphasis is being placed on a study of the food of deer in this area. The average weight of 357 deer examined on the Allison preserve during the last hunting season was found to be 138½ pounds.

A study of the availability of waterfowl food in Gulf State Park in Baldwin County, an area set aside as a wildlife sanctuary, is being made by the research station which expects to make recommendations, based on its findings, to the State Conservation Department in the very near future.

No Villian

Mae West's latest comedy, "Go West Young Man," which comes to the Strand Theatre on Thursday and Friday, is a picture without a villian!

To be sure, there's a menace, played by Warren William, who, is the fly in the star's ointment most of the time during the picture. He plays the part of Miss West's press agent and it is his job to keep her from falling in love. He succeeds twice, much to Miss West's chagrin, when he breaks up a romance with Lyle Talbot and then with Randolph Scott. But like many a man who sets a trap for another, he is caught in it himself. "Go West Young Man" is the rollicking story of a movie actress stranded in a Pennsylvania farm house.

* * *

Army once spoiled Navy's otherwise perfect record by getting a tie with the Middies. The only other time one of the teams came into the service contest undefeated and untied Navy upset the works by triumphing over the confident Cadets . . . Georgetown college in old Kaintucky played two consecutive games against such foreign sounding teams as Paris and Versailles in 1904 . . . One out of every four students at Catawba college, Salisbury, N. C., comes from Pennsylvania, yet Catawba has never played a football game with a team from the Keystone state . . . In the 1880s an injured player could not leave the football field unless the opposing captain consented.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

Hirsch Jacobs, the nation's leading trainer, is a tyrant in his stable, although a swell guy personally. During his career he has fired hundreds of colored stable grooms who didn't meet with his high requirements of efficiency. . . . Wrestling poobahs are making a serious mistake in trying to freeze out the very popular and able Jack Curley. . . Ebbets Field football fans complain that the special cops are as bad as their baseball bosses in the way they treat cash customers. . . . Smart money is making Judge Jeremiah Mahoney 3 to 1 to be elected A. A. U. president at the Houston Convention.

Because Bill Terry figured the youngster might possibly be a big timer if returned to his original third base assignment, the Giants scouted Tony Malinosky last summer. After a week or two of patient observation they lost interest in this newest first aid offering to long suffering Dodger fans. . . Joe Cooper, new Ranger defense man, probably would do more blocking if he spent less time watching Lester Patrick for signals from the bench. . . . In spite of pangs over the probable loss of Davis Cup supremacy English newspapers take the viewpoint that Fred Perry cannot be blamed for turning pro.

Jules Audy, platinum blond from Montreal, leads all six-day bike riders in the matter of fan mail. . . Long before he decided to devote his time to riding around and around vast arenas counting the 1,400 parts of a bicycle Eddie Miller was a ballroom dancer, appearing with Paul Draper. . . The heavy-shouldered Italian youth, Charley Yaccino, who recently made his pro bike racing debut in his native Chicago, once was an amateur middleweight champion wrestler. . . Louis Cohen, another of those who will compete in the grind, is a Brooklyn plumber. . . The bicycle, by the way, was invented by Michael De Sirvac in 1690 and six-day races have been held in New York since 1891.

Jim Londos Gets Inside the Covers of a Book

Jim Londos

Mat devotees will like Nat Fleischer's book "From Milo to Londos," the story of wrestling through the ages. It begins with the wrestlers of ancient Greece and finishes with the grapplers of modern Hellas . . . Jockeys are squawking about taking chances with the new Australian starting gate Joe Widener has insisted upon restoring to Hialeah Park . . . At the end of each racing year they hold a barbecue at the Sagamore Farm and show news reel shots of Young Al Vanderbilt's numerous turf triumphs . . . The better jockeys' agents are planning to form an association with membership requirements so strict they can persuade Florida tracks to remove the ban against them . . . Because the Dodger directors like to be unanimous when they cut capers, the homebodies among them have promised to behave themselves while the Jim Mulveys are touring Europe.

Yale's athletically inclined students have 125 acres of land on which to play their games. . . Note on fame: Glenn Cunningham, celebrated runner and current N. Y. U. student, stood ignored and hatless in a crowd watching the recent I. C. 4-A cross-country championships in Van Cortland Park. . . The Tetmor Boys' club of London named their soccer team in honor of Jimmy Johnston, the boxing promoter when he recently visited his native heath. . . . Keep an eye on a jockey named Palumbo and follow his mounts carefully. . . Hawaii will be represented by two five-man teams in the American Bowling Congress to be held in New York next spring. The big ten pinners will travel 9,000 miles, aboard an army transport, to engage in nine games.

Political pressure has failed to budge Pimlico officials who grounded Jockey Eddie Arcaro until March 31. Names that cause New York officials to bend one knee and knuckle their forelocks are simply names to Pimlico authorities, and even the fact that Eddie was to start wearing Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's colors on January 1 did not budge them. . . Dan McKetrick, the eminent promoter and boxing manager, likes to recall that he has crossed the Atlantic thirty-two times without a touch of mal de mer, although his fighters were always making friends with the fishes. . .

Informed men are betting the sale of the Browns to a former Cards official and the taking up of night baseball are the first steps in transferring St. Louis' National league franchise to another city within two years. They add that such a plan long has been cherished by the shrewd gents who have the Cards. . . . Could the reason why so many horsemen are deserting Florida for California this year be that movie actors are so anxious to bet for a trainer who thinks he's right?. . . Penn, with veterans three deep at every job, is a heavy favorite to win the Eastern Intercollegiate league basketball title this season. . . The much improved Boston Bees will continue to lure patrons away from millionaire baby Tom Yawkey's unimproved Red Sox in 1937.

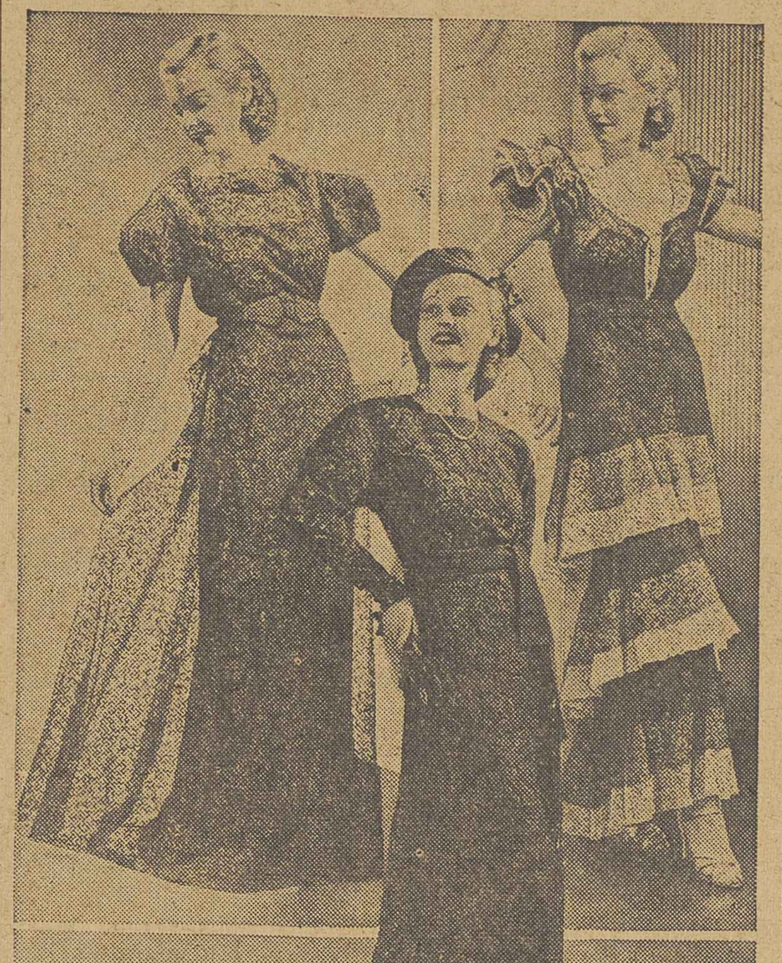
Lace Is in Every Phase of Fashion

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THE story of lace continues to unfold enchantment to an admiring world. It is not only that than lace there is nothing lovlier with which to adorn as an expression of the "eternal feminine" but the significant thing we are coming to learn about lace is that in many of its modernized types it is absolutely practical for general wear. Through convincing demonstration in present-day fashions the theory has been utterly done away with that lace is a luxury to be reserved for "occasions" only.

The following might seem merely a pretty fairy tale to entertain. It is, however, a really and truly true story which has to do with the recent arrival from Paris of a prominent American who brought with her a perfectly exquisite and thoroughly practical wardrobe fashioned all of lace. Of course this collection embraced laces of versatile type for the lingerie as well as sports and evening clothes are each and every one of lace. The thrill uttermost and the argument conclusive as to the practicality of lace is a raincoat of handsome closewoven waterproofed lace. We hasten to assure that the raincoat has been put to the test time and time again, proving to be water repellant, and a sure protection.

To be sure, every worthy tale must have a moral or deliver a message and here it is—the happy possessor of this most charming and replete lace wardrobe is telling her friends that for travel lace clothes are eminently practical and satisfactory. Not only does lace prove flattering at all times but a vitally important thing about lace clothes is that pack them as hurriedly as you may they come out unwrinkled, maintaining a well groomed appearance without the necessity of pressing.

There is no end to the types of lace now available. You will find a lace tuned to your every need and to every mood of fashion. In the lace story for winter, it is the daytime dress made of wool lace that is making the headlines. A stunning model is pictured in the foreground of the illustration. It is of suede-finished brown wool lace in a heavy fabric type which makes the perfect thing for daytime street wear. To trim this handsome frock, Piguet uses a stitched sheer fabric woven of wool the same as made the lace, bordering the square neck, for the sash belt and to finish the side seams. We venture to predict you'll be deciding on a wool lace frock for your "fashion-first" this winter.

You can see from the beguiling dance frock shown to the right that designers are doing delightfully original things with lace. Chanel's evening and dinner dresses in ankle-length were a feature of her recent showings in Paris. She has a particularly charming dress as pictured with a dipping hemline starting from the ankles in front, done in Chantilly lace in pink and in black. The tiers of the skirt are matched by the cap sleeves in alternating ruffles of pink and black.

The dress illustrated to the left was one of the hits in the Lelong collection, and considered by him one of the best of his creations. He did it in several fabrics, including lace. For the lovely gown here shown he used one of the lovely filmy laces now so modish in an interesting delicate patterning. The feature of the pleated sleeves is also carried out in the little back peplum which stands out in quaint bustle effect. The girdle is matching suede.

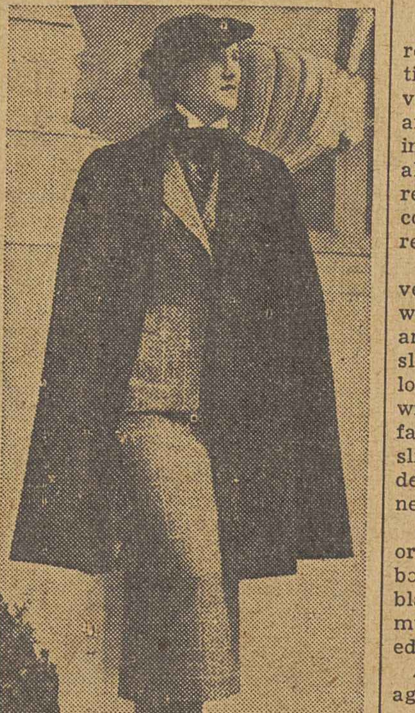
REVERSIBLE CAPE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Complete tweed ensembles are excellent style. The model pictured is a Creed masterpiece done in terms of select wool weave such as declares its style supremacy. The cape is made reversible, which is a feature to be commended as it adds to the adaptability of the ensemble to occasion. Tailored outfits of this type, with jacket suit and top cape, are a whole wardrobe in one.

RED IS IN FAVOR FOR EVENING WEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The fashionable set literally "saw red" at the brilliant first night functions of the winter season. Red velvet wraps, gowns of red taffeta and slipper satin, the gleam of red in nails and lips—the shades varied all the way from the subtle smoky reds to the brighter tones of ruby, coronation and mountie, or orange red.

Particularly effective is a red velvet gown, ermine-trimmed and worn with a white ermine wrap, and an artful Juliet cap of red over sleek blonde hair. The sleeves were long and bound with ermine at the wrists. An ankle-length wrap of faille taffeta in mountie red, very slim of waist and broad of shoulder was worn by a striking brunette.

Muffs are worn demurely small or large and debonair. A girl in bouffant black net under a slim black velvet wrap carried a large muff of white ermine tails, decorated with a spray of gardenias.

All-black splashed with color is again repeated and is second in favor to the predominating red.

Lamb-Trimmed Tunics

Three importantly dressed women recently observed at Longchamps wore tunic wool costumes, with the silhouette marked by Persian lamb borders. One coat by Jodelle used also a wide border of the lamb for a bib-like front collar.

High Hats

New highs are marked by many new hats. A youthful mode by Agnes is of black antelope, draped and twisted to a high-point cone held by three long royal blue coq feathers.

Her Happiest Christmas

Alice B. Palmer

FOR many years Marelu had not been exactly happy on Christmas; somehow she had never received the pretty things bestowed upon other girls. "If they all only knew how I have secretly longed for those soft, dainty luxuries," thought Marlu, as she sat before the fireplace, just three days before Christmas.

"There are those kitchen aprons, for instance, from dear old aunt Lucia. Every year, as far back as I can remember, it has always been aprons. I must have almost a dozen by now. Then there is cousin Marie, who has been sending the inevitable handkerchief right along, year after year. There must be quite a collection of them, too."

While she had been grateful and thankful for these kind remembrances, she had not been exactly thrilled.

A happy Christmas thought suggested itself to Marelu as she gazed out at the slender icicles shining like silver in the moonlight. "I know what I'll do. I'll start right now and wrap up all these things into pretty Christmas parcels and give them to some one who really needs them."

When Christmas day arrived Marelu started out with her basket brimming full of beautifully wrapped and tied Christmas gifts. Every step she took over the holiday carpet of snow represented a kindly thought of cheer.

"Merry Christmas," she cried, as she handed a bright colored parcel to dear old Linda Larsen.

"The very same to you," said she, with a questioning look of surprise. The next moment she was proudly unwrapping a pair of pretty bath towels. Marlene and Dolly, two little girls around the corner, danced up and down with joy, when they saw the snowy handkerchiefs with colored borders. Marelu smiled happily as she left the little girls and proceeded to her next stop. Effie Lynn was overwhelmed with surprise when a gift was handed her. She explained that it had been years since she had received a Christmas present

After several other interesting calls Marelu started for home. The street lights flashed on and the glimmering Christmas trees joined in the ceremony on all sides of her. As she drew near her own home she stood still a moment and admired the grandeur of the dark pines encircling the house under a white burden of snow. The variations of colors gleaming from the windows seemed to be stretching out to meet the pines.

Inside the house was warmth and joy and Christmas cheer as the family gathered about the Christmas tree, pointed with the star of Bethlehem. Marelu was just in time for the celebration. Bobby had been chosen to read off the names upon the gifts and all eyes were centered upon the huge basket containing them.

"First on the program," shouted Bobby, "is for mother." All wondered what it could be.

"A gorgeous lamp shade," cried mother, as she held it up for all to see.

While still admiring this thing of beauty, Bobby shouted louder than ever, "something for the governor, himself. Get ready, pop, for your surprise."

"What can the strange package be, for goodness sake?" said father, his eyes popping with interest. "Well, I do declare, if it isn't a golf set. Just what I have wanted for a long time," as he started to examine it.

"Oh boy, hold out your hands and catch, Dot, a ducky package for you, all tied with silver cord. What is it? Open it quick!"

Dot removed the bright red tissue and disclosed a white wool skating outfit.

Marelu had been so absorbed in what the others were receiving that she had forgotten all about herself. For the first time in many years she had received the things she really adored. With a heart full of appreciation and joy, she suddenly shouted, "Merry Christmas!" The others did not quite comprehend the extent of Marelu's enthusiasm, but she, herself, felt, somehow, that this had been the very happiest, merriest Christmas she had ever had.

The Pope's Health
One Pillar Missing
Big London Fire
A Pretty Good Country

News, far more important than any English royal marriage controversy, concerns the health of Pope Pius. The whole world, admiring the Pope's character and his loyal efforts for peace, hopes earnestly for his speedy recovery, while millions that follow the Pope's spiritual guidance pray for that recovery, with the cardinals kneeling at the Pope's bedside.

Arthur Brisbane

In spite of his advanced age, there is reason for hope, in his always temperate life and his early Alpine climbing expeditions.

Mr. Hull, secretary of state, offers "eight pillars of peace" upon which American peace and prosperity might rest.

With all respect for the secretary's earnestness, it must be said that the most important "pillar" for the United States is not found among the eight.

The interesting pillar is a protective force of airplanes and submarines so great as to make any attack upon this country unthinkable. When John L. Sullivan lived, no one hit him.

London's Crystal palace, covering 17 acres, went up in flames, visible for 50 miles. London has not seen so great a fire since "the" great fire of 1660. That fire started at one o'clock in the morning in a house in Pudding lane; you may read some interesting details in Pepys' diary. Burning four days, the fire caused great destruction, but did good in the end. It wiped out, for one thing, the great plague of London, that made the citizens mark their doors with a red cross and "Lord, have mercy upon us," and caused the grass to grow in London's streets. London was rebuilt of brick; after the fire no more wooden houses, and streets were made wider. Our misfortunes often improve us.

Former President Hoover, just now in New York, smiles at the suggestion that he plans to leave this country and take up his residence in England. The former President, in spite of the "Maine-Vermont" incident, thinks this is a pretty good country and he is right; it made him President.

This is "the day of woman," as a well-known religious leader said. Hongkong tells of a lady, chief of pirates, looting a ship, taking $10,000, displaying unusual ability and ferocity.

The airplane, in a better way, helps to establish woman's more-than-equality; Capt. Mollison starts through the air from England to Africa, trying to beat the record of his own wife, not that of some other man. Flying records depend upon the machine and the nerve of the pilot. Women have more nerve and physical courage than men have ever had, although men don't know it.

Washington reports that the President, using the discretion given him by congress, will order the construction of two battleships, to cost $50,000,000 each. Many will hope that the statement is mistaken, especially as the President is said to be doing this to "match Britain's move."

If we should build those battleships, squandering $100,000,000 of the public money on them, and then be foolish enough to send them out, in case of war, a couple of $50,000 airships would sink them, or low-priced submarines would blow them up.

If you have imagined at any time that the United States has lost its interest in kings, titles and nobility, turning away from such things in its complete, simple-hearted democracy, look at your newspaper and see how many columns and pictures it prints about Britain's king and his proposed marriage at this time; and observe, if you dine out, the general subject of conversation.

It was truly a marvelous reception that Buenos Aires and the entire Argentine Republic, its President, cabinet and people, gave to the President of the United States. An enthusiastic crowd of a million and a half crowded every street in the great Argentine city, now in the spring season, and most pleasing were two words used by the Argentine president, Justo, "Mi amigo" ("my friend"), as he greeted the American President.

Those two words, mi amigo, extended in all sincerity from one end of the two American continents to the other, would solve the American peace problem, and this country need not worry about the two words popular in Europe and Asia—"MY ENEMY."

Character-Building

An absolute surrender to all that is better, purer, truer is the secret of character-building.

Penetrating Eye

The curious questioning eye, that plucks the heart of every mystery.—Mellen.

WHEN WARM SPELL COMES LOOK OUT FOR SKIPPERS IN POORLY SMOKED MEAT

"Skippers," the larva of a fly, which hatch in meat not properly smoked. Greatly enlarged

During cold weather, keeping meat on the farm is a simple matter. But when hot summer comes, or a warm spell in winter, look out! You suddenly find your meat, into which so many hours of hard labor and feed have been put, crawling with "skippers"! This little worm (shown in photo above) is the larva of a fly, which has laid its eggs in the meat. At the first warm spell, they hatch.

But there are other troubles besides skippers. Green mold often develops, or rancidness near the bone. The meat dries out, gets too hard to eat.

ONLY ONE PREVENTIVE

Thorough smoking is the only known way to prevent all these troubles. But how? Everyone knows how uncertain the old smokehouse method is. Other so-called smoking methods, or substitutes for smoking, are likewise risky. How can you tell whether or not the meat is thoroughly smoked? But if you want to be absolutely SURE your meat will come through the hot summer months sweet and wholesome and eatable, don't take chances. Brush every square inch with FIGARO Condensed Smoke. It is a liquid; and it penetrates every crevice and pore of the meat surface. It positively PREVENTS skippers, green mold, rancidness, or hardening. And flavor? FIGARO-smoked meat is the finest you'll ever eat.

AND COSTS NOTHING!

Actually FIGARO-smoking costs you nothing. The average farm loses 50 pounds of meat every year through improper smoking. At 30 cents per pound, that's $15.00! To protect your meat, to guarantee every pound of it keeping perfectly, will cost you less than one-third cent per pound, the FIGARO way! And using plain salt in the cure, then brushing FIGARO on the meat afterward, actually will cost you only HALF the cost of using "smoke salt."

HAS SMOKED OVER TWO BILLION POUNDS OF MEAT

S. E. COLGIN, who discovered FIGARO

More than 30 years ago, S. Eugene Colgin, Texas farmer boy, discovered what it was in the old smokehouse that preserved the meat. This secret led to condensing of smoke in quantities, and, with certain additions to improve the flavor of the meat, this is FIGARO Condensed Smoke. It has smoked more than two billion pounds of meat since that time. Your dealer has FIGARO, or can get it. The 32-oz. size smokes 500 pounds, and costs only $1.50; the 16-oz. size smokes 250 pounds, and costs only $1.00.—Adv.

Senior III Dance At Mrs. Mahaffey's

The annual Senior III dance was given last week at the home of Mrs. C. H. Mahaffey. This was in the form of a Leap Year Dance, the girls invited the boys. Any student, receiving a bid and paying 25 cents admission, could attend this dance. Music was furnished by the "Bama Skippers". The entertainment committee, composed of Margaret Fancher, Scears Lee and Clay Griffin, arranged the program dance. It featured no breaks, Senior III leadout, "M" club leadout, and also the officers of the different clubs had a leadout dance. A dance was dedicated to Captain Hicks and to Miss Ann Wills and Mr. Henry Clay Griffin.

Chaperons for this occasion were Misses Elizabeth Utterbeck, Walker Coke Barker, and Mr. Leon Hicks.

Mr. W. M. Davis, of Alabama Power Company, spent from Monday through Friday in Birmingham last week.

Miss Lessie Mae McConnatha, a teacher in Calera, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McConnatha.

All the schools will close Friday for two weeks vacation. January 4th will find them at work again, with 1937 making its debut.

Mr. Burr Nabors, of Birmingham, was a visitor here Wednesday.

Mr. Lee Wilson, who has been away for several months, is in town again.

Mr. Walter F. Fancher made a trip to Birmingham Wednesday.

Baptist Church

"The Spirit of Christmas" will be the pastor's theme at the Sunday morning service. In the evening all the churches of the town will join in a union service at the Presbyterian Church.

The Sunday School will meet at 9:45 a.m. The Junior and Intermediate B. Y. P. U's will meet at 6:45 p.m., as usual.

The U. D. C. Meeting

The General Josiah Gorgas Chapter of the U. D. C. met last Thursday at three o'clock at the home of Mrs. F. W. Lacey, with Miss Bessie McCary, Mrs. W. N. Robinson and Mrs. A. H. Yeager as cohostesses. After the regular business was attended to, Miss Mary McWilliams gave a very enlightening discussion on "The Tenant Farmer," and "The New Deal" "Saluting The Flag" was given by the members in unison:

1. "I salute the Confederate Flag with affection, reverence and undying remembrance."

2. "I pledge allegiance to the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible; liberty and justice for all."

Refreshments were served to about eleven members.

The third edition of "The Spotlight", Montevallo High School paper, will be ready for distribution in a few days. This is a nine-page mimiograph issue and sells for the small amount of one nickel. It is proving to be very popular, according to the information given by John Orr. Buy one at the next opportunity and inform yourself of the interesting happenings at the High School.

We are very sorry to report that Mrs. F. W. Rogan suffered a severe fall last week and is confined to her bed. We hope she will soon be able to be up again.

Bobby Breen's 'Rainbow On the River' A Vivid Picture

Set in the colorful background of New Orleans in the gay 70's, "Rainbow on the River", Bobby Breen's new singing vehicle produced by Sol Lesser for RKO Radio release, offers film patrons a lavish musical drama boasting a strong story plot, a fine cast, elaborate settings and a group of songs by a talented nine-year-old star, at the Strand Sunday and Monday.

May Robson heads the supporting cast of the young songster who skyrocketed to fame in his debut picture, "Let's Sing Again," after having won wide popularity as Eddie Cantor's radio protege.

Charles Butterworth, Louise Beavers, Alan Mowbray, Benita Hume, Marilyn Knowlden and Henry O'Neill essay important roles. More than a thousand atmosphere players appear in the several spectacular sequences.

Adapted from the well-loved novel, "Tionette's Philip" by Mrs. C. V. Jamison, the screen play presents young Bobby as a winsome waif raised in the southland by a devoted negro servant, Louise Beavers, until he is taken away to live in New York with a wealthy Yankee grandmother, May Robson.

In this strange environment Bobby yearns for the colored mammy and the simple life they led in their humble cabin. Because of her hatred of the South, inspired by the loss of a confederate son who died in the Civil War, the cold-hearted grandmother is reluctant to claim the southern lad as kin. Bobby, however, finally melts her heart with his enchanting voice while innocently revealing his loneliness by singing those songs which endeared him in the hearts of his southern friends and playmates.

The musical numbers, which are keyed to the action of the story and mood of the characters, come from the pens of foremost composers.

Surprise Party For Dr. and Mrs. Burns

A lovely Christmas party, sponsored by the McCoy Bible class, was given by the members of the Methodist Church Tuesday night, to Rev. O. R. Burns and family. The party was in the nature of a surprise pantry shower, and when Mrs. Burns answered the doorbell and found Santa Claus and all his family standing on the porch singing "Merry Christmas To You," surprise was indeed the word. The crowd literally mobbed her pushing their way into the living room with baskets, bundles and packages to put on the Christmas tree. After an hour of special "get together" and singing of Christmas carols with a genuine Christmas spirit prevailing throughout the evening, the party disbanded to their respective homes.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Davis, Mr. Davis playing old Santa, and their daughter, Mrs. Strickland, of Tallahassee, Florida, Dr. and Mrs. J. Alex Moore, Dean and Mrs. T. H. Napier, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Mulkey, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mahaffey, Mr. and Mrs. Brewer Carpenter, Mrs. W. P. McConaghy, Mrs. J. A. Brown, Miss Kate Jackson, Dr. Rosa Lee Jackson, Mrs. W. C. Weems and Pat, Mrs. Marie Jones, Mrs. J. A. May, Miss Josephine May, Mrs. Addie Brandon, Mrs. Pearle Crawford, Mrs. Cook and Sarah, Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. S. B. Brown, Mrs. H. E. Latham and Mrs. Lena Durhan. Many contributed who could not attend.

The McCoy Bible Class were happy to sponsor a miscellaneous shower, given the family whose home and furnishings were blown away in the storm a few Sundays ago, out at Newala.

A Merry Christmas to All
1936

(St. Luke 2:7-20

7. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8. And there were in that same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

9. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

10. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which will be to all people.

11. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

13. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of heavenly hosts praising God, and saying,

14. Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

15. And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which has come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

16. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

17. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child.

18. And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19. But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

20. And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

TATUM CHEVROLET CO. HAS NEW ELECTRIC SIGN

Tatum Chevrolet Company has recently erected at their place on main street, a large circular super service electric sign which adds greatly to the attractiveness of their quarters and also to that particular section of the town. The sign is four and one-half feet in diameter and the brilliant and beautiful lights reflected from the sign catches the eye easily, and has been the source of much favorable comment.

Social Week At Alabama College

Christmas parties given in the clubs and dormitories of Alabama College this week emphasized the holiday spirit.

On Tuesday night The Alabamian student newspaper, entertained its staff members in Reynolds Hall. Martha Lowery, Birmingham, editor; Mary Scarborough, Eastaboga, and Annie Laura Livings, Andalusia, associate editors, had charge of the decorations and the program.

The senior home economics majors were given a waffle supper at the home management house Tuesday. Marguerite Cook, Camden, was in charge of the supper. Kathleen Coyle and Theda Wyatt, Montevallo, served.

The French Club Tuesday evening included on the Christmas prodent; Erna Gilde, German student, and Carmen Sierra, Mexican student, who described Christmas customs in their own countries.

The faculty and majors of the physical education department entertained at a banquet Tuesday night. An after-dinner program was arranged by Ruth Joyce, Birmingham, and Helen Lewis, Bessemer, in the parlors of Main Dormitory.

Climaxing the week's entetainment, parties were given Thursday night in the three dormitories prior to the student's departure for their homes Friday.

The party in Ramsey Hall, senior dormitory, was directed by Mary Eleanor Barlow, Gadsden, house president. The program included songs by Mary Wanda Seibert, Mobile; Dorothy Davis, Andalusia; Eleanor Watson, Georgiana; a violin solo by Elizabeth Donald, Pine Apple, and a reading by Phyllis Poland, Mobile.

Winifred Funchess, Montgomery, house president of Hanson Hall, junior dormitory, directed a program consisting of Christmas carols readings and games. After the program, the guests enjoyed dancing in the lobby.

Minnie Elizabeth Nicholas, Jay, Florida, house president of main dormitory, presided over a program of caroling and dancing in main assembly.

BAPTIST CHURCH

All the churches of the community will join in a union service at the Baptist Church Sunday evening at 7:30. Rev. O. R. Burns will deliver the sermon.

Dr. Pearson will preach at the morning worship service at 11:00 o'clock.

Clanton, Ala.—Chilton County farmers have repaid $33,000 of the $41,000 loaned them by the Resettlement Administration during 1936.

Thanks Extended To Donors

The Department of Public Welfare wishes to take this opportunity to thank every person who has made a Christmas offering to be used by the Department in making the holiday season a happier one for many families.

Cash contributions have come from a few individuals and these have been especially useful. Several church organizations have asked the Director for suggestions and for help in distributing their offerings. The Columbiana High School is playing Santa Claus to nine families, and one of the Home Economics classes, under the direction of Miss Ouida Thompson of Montevallo High School, has been working for Santa in the doll department. The cunning rag dolls with clothes that may be "taken off and put on" will delight the heart of many a youngster on Christmas morning.

Helping people who are in trouble is a very "ticklish" business, and one which calls for high intelligence, patience and sympathy. If we could put ourselves in the places of those who receive, we would readily understand how much it might hurt to feel that we were "on charity", even though the gifts received were needed and appreciated.

The Department congratulates you who have given on your intelligence in wanting your gifts to be given through the Department rather than giving them directly yourselves. After all, helping people is a profession, just as teaching is a profession and you would not want your children to be taught by someone who is untrained.

May your Christmas be merry, and may you keep the spirit of Christmas not only this day but ev-

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for filling the position of Fireman-Laborer, $1260 per year in the Custodial Service, Post Office Department, Montevallo, Alabama, for which the receipt of applications closes January 5, 1937. And for unskilled labor (men only) for filling vacancies in the position of charman at 50 cents an hour for each hour of actual service in the custodian service, Post Office Department, Montevallo, Alabama, for which the receipt of applications closes January 6, 1937. Applications must be filed with the Manager, Fifth U. S. Civil Service District, New Post Office Building, Atlanta, Georgia, on or before the above dates.

Applicants must be within the ages of 20 and 55 on the closing date of receipt of applications, except that these age limits do not apply to persons granted preference because of military or naval service. They must show that they have had at least six months of experience firing steam boilers (including locomotive engines but exclusive of small home heating plants and logging, sawmill or threshing engines). Preference in appointment will be given to bona fide patrons of the Montevallo, Alabama, Post Office.

Full information and application blank may be obtained from the secretary, Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners, Post Office, Montevallo, Alabama, or from the office of the Manager, Fifth U. S. Civil Service District, New Post Office Bldg., Atlanta, Georgia.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The subject of the pastor's message on Sunday, December 27th, will be "Entering a New Year." The worship service will begin at 11:00 o'clock a.m. The congregational singing will be accompanied by music produced by the Hammond Electric organ, with Prof. H. D. LeBaron at the console. Tell your friends of this and let us all go into the New Year 'with our coats off', determined that nothing will prevent the enrichment of life.

The Church School will meet at 9:45 a.m., in the church annex, under the able supervision of Professor W. J. Kennerly.

At 7:30 p.m., the union evening service will be held at the Baptist Church, with Rev. O. R. Burns delivering the message.

Collegiate Abuses Due to Prexies Not Coach or Coached

INVARIABLY at this time of the year I get a pain in the spot where too many higher educators keep their brains. This unease in a neck, already so sorely battered that it can stand few more bruises and contusions, naturally comes from the annual yelping about the indecency of one of the widest spread of collegiate practices. I refer specifically to the so-called athletic scholarships and the huggermugger publicity grabbing which ever is associated with them.

Since this is a nation given to boasting about foisting book learning upon the masses, it is difficult to understand why one pack of purists must get into full cry because of one minor extension of the grand privilege. Do these high-class gents believe that an ambitious boy must be kicked in the pants because he has muscles as well as poor parents? Or is their fine dither due to unshakable conviction that youngsters who grow higher than five feet three inches or scale more than a featherweight are thus barred by nature from swimming around in classic fountains?

Can these highly moral cutups believe it is a crime against the state for a youth to be healthy? Or can it be that lather really beads their jaws because sons of a Brooklyn waiter and of a Staten Island street sweeper were permitted to win scholastic distinction as well as football games at two famous universities this season?

Tramp Athletes Are Believed on Wane

I make no effort here to unravel the minds of such talented messiahs. Yet—stemming from the premise that even though education may not do husky kids any real good it probably won't seriously damage them—the way is opened for a discussion of more wholesome things.

Tramp athletes—young men who prefer to travel from college to college, trading upon their athletic ability, rather than to sweat at a more gainful occupation—still exist. But there is only a corporal's guard of them now.

The reason for this is apparent. Football has become a complicated game, difficult to teach and difficult for the student to assimilate. For preservation of their cozy jobs, if for no other reason, coaches prefer players whose brains somehow keep apace of their muscular reactions.

Similarly football has become a game where one mistake can spoil a season. Only too well aware of this, coaches also are aware that the shirker is most apt to make the mistake. With few exceptions they have understood for years that the boy who cheats or lays down on his studies is not apt to discard these habits.

Coaches and Coached Said to Be Pawns

There you have the case for the coaches and the coached. One group being well paid in gold coin for their skill as teachers and recruiters. The other group receiving the doubtful tender of a modern college education in return for weekly exhibitions of muscular prowesses. Both groups, pawns in the fanatical glorification of victory over defeat which anesthetizes academicians of this land and day. The actions of neither group needing high - powered investigation quite so much as the smug skullduggeries of winking college presidents.

Do you doubt it? There are N. Y. U. alumni who will take oath that their Alma Mater tilted the scholarship fund not a whit when Chick Meehan came to the institution ten years ago. The shrewd and earthy Chick, they say, merely regimented the rewards which previously had been spilled in prodigal fashion upon barren soil.

Is the picture still out of its accepted focus? Then listen to Southern Conference professors lamenting their own ravaged vistas. Last year Dr. Graham, one of the saner college presidents in that section who long had realized that the yen for victory was inseparable from other greed, proposed a plan for keeping this human craving in check. He sought merely to have the number of athletic scholarships limited and awarded in full view.

It was sound reasoning that deserved a better fate.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

BROOKLYN fans are indignant because Ford Frick refused to attend their dinner for Casey Stengel Dec. 5. They write that it is about time the National League president obtained some first-hand information as to what is happening to baseball's best franchise . . . John Hay Whitney, who entered racing in a big way only a few years ago, now breeds more horses than any of his clan . . . Penn and Cornell have played forty-three football games but never have had a contract . . . Tony Canzoneri is gathering himself a stable of boxers. He has not yet decided whether he will be an active manager or a behind-the-scenes partner.

Although his purse for boxing Mike Belloise for the world's featherweight campionship amounted to $1,000, Dave Crowley, the English challenger, received only three dollars for himself. At least that is the story of his manager, Harry Levine, who promises never to return to the United States . . . Leon Ketchel, the Polish Peak, has gone in for wrestling. He retired from boxing after the veteran Larry Gaines twice stopped him in the gym. . . . Dr. George Devine, who had a hand in the Battling Siki-Mike McTigue promotion, is due in New York shortly . . . Even England refuses to consider seriously the comeback Jack Kid Berg says he will make as a welterweight . . . In spite of the ballyhoo baseball is making little progress in England.

Chicago is strong for the plan, originally advanced in New York, of five-day weeks for racetracks. The next pro season may reveal John Sims Kelley as head coach and Cal Hubbard as line coach of Brooklyn's Football Dodgers. Which, the celebrated Pat Rosa suggests, will put Burleigh Grimes and Hubbard in just about the same rocking boat . . . Very best thanks to Skateland for the season's roller-skating ducat, to the National Boxing association for the honorary membership card and to Keen's for a chance to smoke one of those long-stemmed "churchwardens" after dinner . . . Pete Cleary, former assistant postmaster of Brooklyn, now is a boxing and wrestling timekeeper at Brooklyn clubs . . . John D. Spreckels 3d, the turfman, is a boating enthusiast, but blushes when racing friends mention it for fear people may confuse it with the "boat race" term of the turf.

Di Maggio Keeps Legs in Shape Ice Skating

Joe DiMaggio

In spite of the way his boss, Colonel Ruppert, worries about it, Joe Di Maggio continues to keep his legs in shape by cutting ice-skating capers on Lefty O'Doul's Frisco rink . . . New York is a good spot for the American Bowling congress which will be held in New York city next spring for the first time in thirty - seven years. It is estimated that there are more than 300,000 bowlers in the city . . . Earl Walsh, Fordham football coach soon to be admitted to the New York bar, is considering an offer to join a local law firm.

When Shanteb won at Bowie it was the second time this year that a twin had won a race. Prior to this season horsemen couldn't seem to remember when the last twin, if any, ever won. The information is provided by that eminent handicapper, Jerry DeNonno, along with the added tidbit that his first name really is Jeremias . . . Could the rib Izzy Jannazzo is supposed to have broken in the Ross bout really have been shattered weeks previously by Ceferino Garcia? . . . Glen Cunningham is training daily at N. Y. U. under the watchful eye of Track Coach Emil Von Elling.

The Mr. John Bosley, who seldom is mentioned when Mrs. John Bosley's horses win races, once was the most celebrated sports member of the family. That was twenty-five years or so ago when he starred at football and baseball for St. John's (Md.) college . . . The Football Rules committee would be silly to alter the present rule governing interference with a forward pass receiver because of squawks heard this season. The truth is that most coaches teach their defense men to interfere, figuring to get away with it under timid officials. So, since even now the helpless receiver is hopelessly mauled, a milder penalty for the foul merely would pave the way for really serious injuries.

Babe Siebert and Eddie Shore played side by side on the Boston Bruins' defense all last season without speaking to each other . . . Clem Loughlin, manager of the Black Hawks, remembers the coldest hockey game in which he ever took part. It was at Edmonton between the Edmonton Eskimos and the Vancouver Lions. It was 47 below zero in the rink and so cold the players cut off the tops of their stockings to use them as ear muffs.

Walter Camp's first All American team was composed entirely of Big Three players; his last team, in 1924, was the first one in which no Big Three men appeared. . . . For three years, 1909-1911, Marquette U. tied Notre Dame; in the next year Marquette was defeated 0—69 by Notre Dame.

"The Man Who-O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

BACHELOR CAMPAIGNERS

TODAY'S accepted view of the way to ballyhoo the voter is, broadly speaking, to tell him first one of two things—either the candidate recommended was reared on the farm or he has sold newspapers.

When this has been established the campaign manager next reaches into his bag and there begins to issue a swelling stream of pictures, mostly of the candidate in the bosom of his family. The larger the family, so much better the results, is the political reasoning.

With this in mind it is interesting to reflect that two of the 31 Presidents challenged the accepted political belief that "it couldn't be done" and campaigned for office successfully while unmarried. They are James Buchanan, (1857-1861) and Grover Cleveland, (1885-1889 and 1893-1897.)

Cleveland, after little more than a year in the White house, married Frances Folsom there on June 2, 1886. Buchanan remained a bachelor and is, therefore, the man who is our only bachelor President.

Most of our Presidents have performed nobly in lifting the average size of White House families.

Theodore Roosevelt customarily is regarded as a pioneer among advocates of large families. The fact is, the estimable Teddy was something of a piker in this respect when his record is compared with those of a few of his predecessors in office.

The Republican Roosevelt married twice, as have four other Presidents, with one child from the first union and five from the second. But John Tyler (1841-1845), also twice married, was father to three sons and four daughters by his first wife and to five sons and two daughters by the second.

Tyler may have taken his cue from William H. Harrison, preceding White House resident, who sired six sons and four daughters. The widow of Harrison, incidentally, survived for more than 20 years after his death in 1841.

Six Presidents, including the immortal George Washington, were childless. But Rutherford B. Hayes with eight, and Thomas Jefferson and Zachary Taylor, with six children apiece, helped raise the average.

Youngest to marry was Andrew Johnson, a stripling of eighteen on May 5, 1827, when he wed Eliza McCardle, the woman who later taught the Tennessee tailor to read.

TAKING A WALK

A CHECKUP on election day in November, 1933, doubtless will disclose that some of the more prominent members of both major political parties have "gone fishing."

Going fishing is the politician's milder and more modern method of showing dissatisfaction with his party's candidate and refusing to appear at the polls where he is entitled to vote. It is his way of "taking a walk," a topic stirred to live discussion by public remarks of Alfred E. Smith of New York, prior to the national conventions.

Taking a walk would be no new experience of the Democratic party but history records that Alexander Hamilton, powerful Federalist of the country's earliest days, was the first important stroller and that his action ultimately resulted in the destruction of his party.

Hamilton, a dominant political personality, was a bitter opponent of John Adams, second president, having tried to block his election as vice-president although both were Federalists.

The feud continued when John Adams became president, Hamilton secretly obtaining and holding control of the Adams cabinet. Adams, not by nature gifted in that sort of intrigue, nevertheless fought back with considerable success. At one time, our second president averted a war with France in which Hamilton was scheduled to occupy a military leadership as powerful as that of General Pershing's in the World conflict.

Hamilton was not the man to take any rebuffs sitting down. When John Adams sought re-election in the campaign of 1800 Hamilton "took a walk" by publication of a letter designed to show "irrefragable proofs" of Adams' unfitness for the job.

Hamilton succeeded too completely in his battle. Adams failed of re-election but the Federalist party went down with him. While the ding-dong "walkout" battle was in progress during the Adams presidency, Thomas Jefferson, whose name is referred to so frequently by Democratic orators, took advantage of the duelling.

Jefferson was earnestly and efficiently making his plea for unified support of the "plain peepul" and in the election he smashed the Federalists so completely they never again figured conspicuously in a national election.

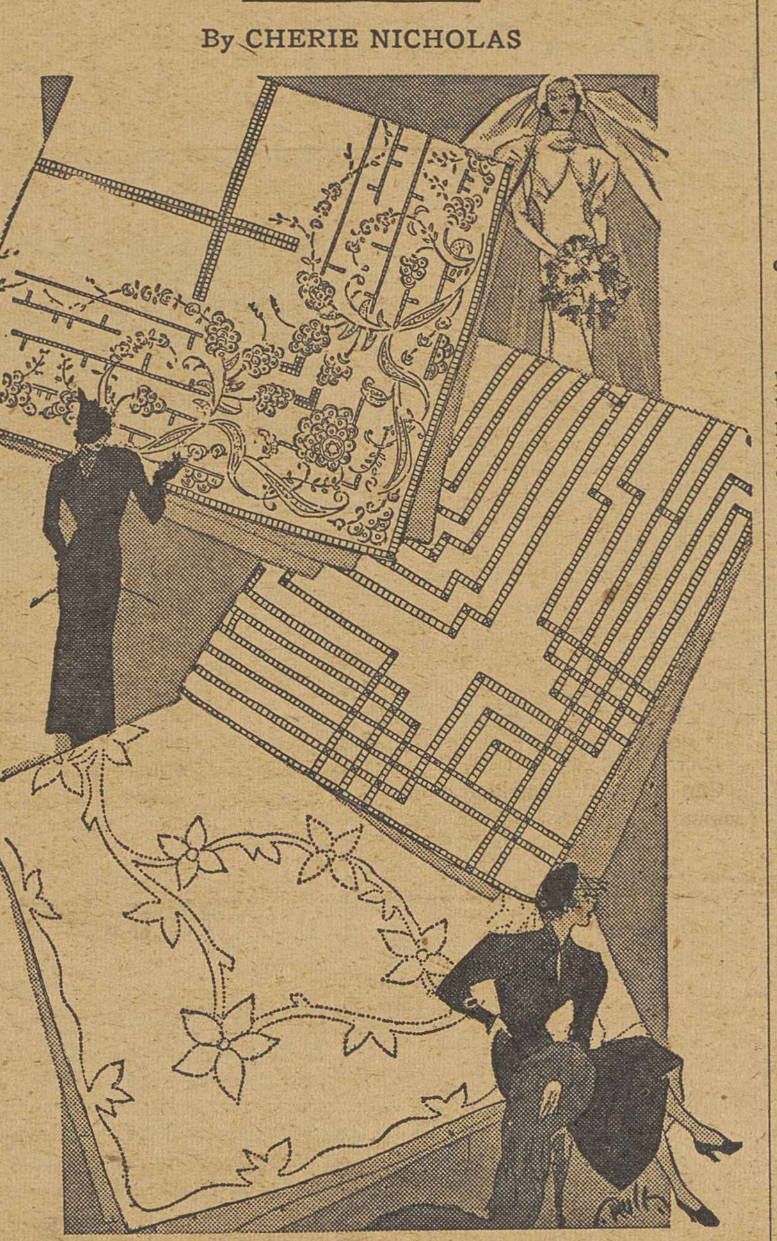
Heirloom Handkerchiefs, Others

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THE handkerchief which we take so much for granted was once a luxury permitted only to those of noble birth. A Hungarian queen of the Fourteenth century owned one silk handkerchief profusely embroidered and by decree of a German king in the Sixteenth century the handkerchief was permitted to those of noble birth only.

The first record of a handkerchief appears on an old Assyrian bas-relief, but even so Persia does not seem to have adopted it. According to Xenophon, Cyrus the Great in Persia fobade his subjects to blow their noses. In Egypt, at this time, royal subjects dried their tears on the bottom of their mantles.

Square handkerchiefs originated in France. Louis XIV made a law that all handkerchiefs, regardless of size and texture, must be made as broad as they were long.

Concerning the handkerchief as we of this day and age know it, as sands of the sea does it number, while fashion plays it up in every conceivable mood as a smart accent to the costume.

Not only is the modern handkerchief a "friend indeed in the time of need" but is a created a "thing of beauty"—a "joy forever" too, for the wedding kohlkerchief sketched at the top in the illustration proves just that, since it is a perfectly exquisite type such as the modern bride carries, to be handed down from generation to generation. Made of sheerest of hand-woven linen it is embroidered in fine seed, appenzel type needlework, the entire center spoked in squares. The flower centers in each corner are embellished with real pearls (48 in number), an accessory which becomes an heirloom even as the fine veil and lace may be handed down to posterity. However, delicate though it is in appearance it may be laundered.

Other kohlkerchiefs (new name in modern fashion parlance for certain high-type handkerchiefs) have literally traveled half-way round the world before they reached the United States. Here's how—the flax was raised in Belgium, then sent to Ireland where it was made into sheerest linen, much of it hand-woven. The linen was sent to China where it was cut into the required sizes, stamped with designs created by American artists and embroidered by skilled Chinese needlewomen whose art dates back 2,000 years. When the handkerchiefs are finished to the last degree of perfection and artistry they are sent to America.

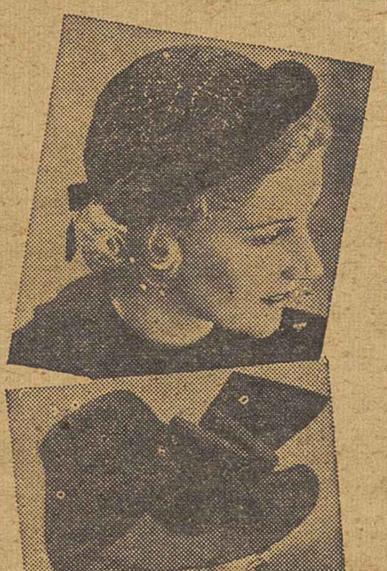
WOOL LACE HATS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Wool lace, so fashionable this winter for daytime suits and dresses, is proving a perfect medium for smart sports headgear. When the outdoor event is to be followed by cocktails and an evening of dancing, what could be more appropos for the occasion than the trim little skull-cap chapeau shown here at the top? Of black wool lace it is just the thing for a windy afternoon and perky enough for any young blade to adore. Its trim of shiny black ostrich immediately makes it quite correct for the more formal aftermath. The other hat is also of black wool lace, showing to advantage its use for a chic sports model. The crown is quite high with the narrow-shaped brim broadening toward the front to make a flattering shield over the eyes. The large bow is of the same wool lace.

NEGLIGEES ASSUME HISTORICAL TREND

The sirens of the centuries have inspired the new negligees.

The high-waisted line of the glamorous Empress Josephine, the full-skirted silhouette of the Directoire belles and the trouser costumes of almond-eyed Oriental beauties have all left their mark on outfits designed for the lounging hours of modern fashionables.

The outstanding news is the ensemble effect generally combining two fabrics and two parts, as a gown and house coat of pajamas and jacket. Supple silk satin gowns designed as night dresses, but almost as formal in cut as evening frocks—are topped by hip-length or floor-length coats, often of a conarasting fabric.

Military Capes Are All the Rage in New York

Square-shouldered capes are taking New York by storm.

You see them in tweeds and furs, velvets and lames, worn by day and by night.

And they appear again in the advance showings of southern resort fashions, engaging the attention of resort-flitters just now.

The cape suit is a new success, in rough tweeds, suitable for town or country wear.

Usually it consists of matching skirt and fingertip-length cape, with contrasting fitted jacket.

The capes have the square-shouldered dash of historical military costumes and are highly flattering to practically any type of figure.

Prints Are Featured in Dresses for Resort Wear

The resort mode is breaking into print. Wild, high colored floral prints on white grounds are the trend of the times.

Some are in silk crepe and some are in cotton, some are in linen and some chiffon, but all are vivid as to color and striking as to design.

These same prints are the ones you will be wearing next spring and summer, so if you aren't a southern bird of passage, you might still keep the subject in mind.

To Control Business

Washington — Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming has prepared a bill for introduction early in the new congress that will set up, if it becomes law, a comprehensive mechanism to control and regulate some of the principal activities of business corporations. It is a far reaching proposition, as it now stands, and it cannot be passed off lightly. There is support for it in a number of quarters. While it undoubtedly will not become law in its present form, it must be regarded as the opening wedge.

The Wyoming senator's principal idea is to require businesses of an incorporated character to take out a federal license. If they do not comply, the proposed law would deny them the right to ship goods into retail trade between states.

While the main theme of the proposition does not seem anything about which one should get excited, it is the things that can be done behind such a general requirement that must and will be examined by congress and the country before it takes a step of the kind advocated by Senator O'Mahoney. For example, if the federal government is permitted to require businesses to obtain a license or charter from Washington, those businesses may be compelled to meet all manner of requirements before such a license or charter is granted. In the reverse, if after they have the license, they fail to observe the provisions laid down either by congress or bald - headed bureaucrats, revocation of the license is the penalty that may be exacted. It should be added that exaction of a penalty of this kind, once the license provision is established as a federal government right, becomes a powerful weapon and the limit to which that power may be exercised is scarcely to be forecast.

While, as I said, the O'Mahoney legislation may not be expected to become law in its present form, its terms and provisions give a hint of what can be expected of any legislation of a similar character.

Take this provision, for example: "Rates of pay shall be increased and hours of work shall be reduced in accordance with gains in the productive efficiency of the industry, arising from increased mechanization, improvements in technological methods, or from other causes, to the end that employees shall have an equitable participation in the output of industry, and that employment and mass purchasing power may keep pace with industry."

* * *

Dictatorial Powers

It seems quite obvious that under such a basic statement of principles, a business could easily be made to agree to collective bargaining among its employees, to establish minimum wages and to follow the dictates of some bureau or commission in Washington in actual management and promulgation of policies. Indeed, it is set forth in the O'Mahoney draft that the federal trade commission would be authorized to obtain all "relevant and detailed data as to production costs, prices and profits."

As I see this sort of thing and from the views of experts with whom I have consulted, I cannot escape the conclusion that such legislation simply extends to the federal government dictatorial powers over virtually all private business.

It means, moreover, that politics and politicians would be the guiding force and that if union labor leaders were in control of the agency having supervisory powers over business or if communists or conservatives or any other class were in control, business would be directed in accordance with the economic views of that school of thought. Since our nation frequently hands the responsibility of government control from one political party to the other, the implications of such legislation as this are tremendous, to say the least.

Constitutional questions enter into this legislation and it may be that the basic theory advanced by the Wyoming senator will not hold at all. As I understand it, Senator O'Mahoney is holding no pride of authorship as to the language of his bill but to the principles he strongly adheres. So, it is made to appear at least, as I said above, that this proposal constitutes an entering wedge on an entirely new theory of government's relation to private business. For that reason, it is one of the most significant propositions to come forward in recent years, more significant, I believe, than the ill-fated NRA. It certainly is a proposition that should be watched closely by all citizens.

Mixing in Love Affairs

Affairs of the heart are all right privately, our American Department of State holds, but it reserves the right to horn into any love affair that involves an American foreign service officer. It is all perfectly open and above board. The Department of State has put its conclusions into writing, into an official regulation, and hereafter no foreign service officer can marry an alien while he is in the foreign service unless he gets the consent of "father" State department.

It is immensely interesting but not significant in an international way that the State department's order concerning international marriages should have been promulgated during the heat of the British constitutional crisis over King Edward's determination to marry the American - born Wallis Warfield Simpson. It simply happened to come along at the same time, but since all the world loves a lover, in Washington one hears reference to the Simpson-Edward affair mentioned many times in the same breath with the State department decree. This obtains because nearly all of our foreign service people have relations or friends in the national capital and the decree forbidding international marriages set many tongues to wagging.

But the State department ruling ought to be treated with utmost seriousness and sincerity. It is important. It is necessary to stretch the imagination a great way in order to assume that international marriages of the type banned by the State department would "shake an empire" after the manner of international marriages among royalty. On the other hand, it seems to me to be quite fair to say that international marriages among official representatives of a nation can very easily prove embarrassing to the government by which the foreign service officer receives credentials. In fact, there are instances on record where such marriages have proved to be serious obstacles in the settlement of disputes between governments.

Then, it must be considered that there is a genuine possibility of war in Europe in the next few years. A tremendous tragedy is being prepared there. While obviously any governmental decision that has the effect of keeping lovers apart arouses antagonism, a sympathetic feeling among all with tender hearts in this circumstance, the rule seems well justified. In addition to following the lead of other nations on the point, our State department has banned these international marriages largely in order to keep our nation free from any possible entanglements in event of that European tragedy that looms like red fire on the horizon of the future. Marriages heretofore contracted, of course, will not be disturbed by the new ban, but elimination of that source of potential difficulty for the future is regarded as likely to be valuable.

I have heard criticism of the State department's order on the ground that affairs of the heart are private affairs—which indeed they are. But it must be remembered that where an individual accepts the rights, prerogatives and privileges of official position, he accepts at the same time certain definite responsibilities. In the case of a foreign service officer, his acceptance of the government title makes him at once and the same time a part of that government in a most peculiar way. Because foreigners do not understand our government any better than we understand foreign governments, when an American foreign service officer speaks, he speaks actually as the American government. One need not amplify this further than to say, therefore, one of that official's responsibilities is to carry out policy. National policy can be arranged only at its proper sources, namely, the President and the Department of State.

So, while budding romances may be blighted, heartaches may arise, soft lights in the eyes of men and maidens may be dimmed by the cruel and cold words of official regulations, it needs must be said that the welfare of a great nation must supersede the personal desires of a lonely man for a mate.

Thus, where any of our American diplomats or consular officers hereafter feel they cannot tread life's highway without the accompaniment of a foreign-born princess of their dreams, they simply will have to resign from their jobs and bring the lady home.

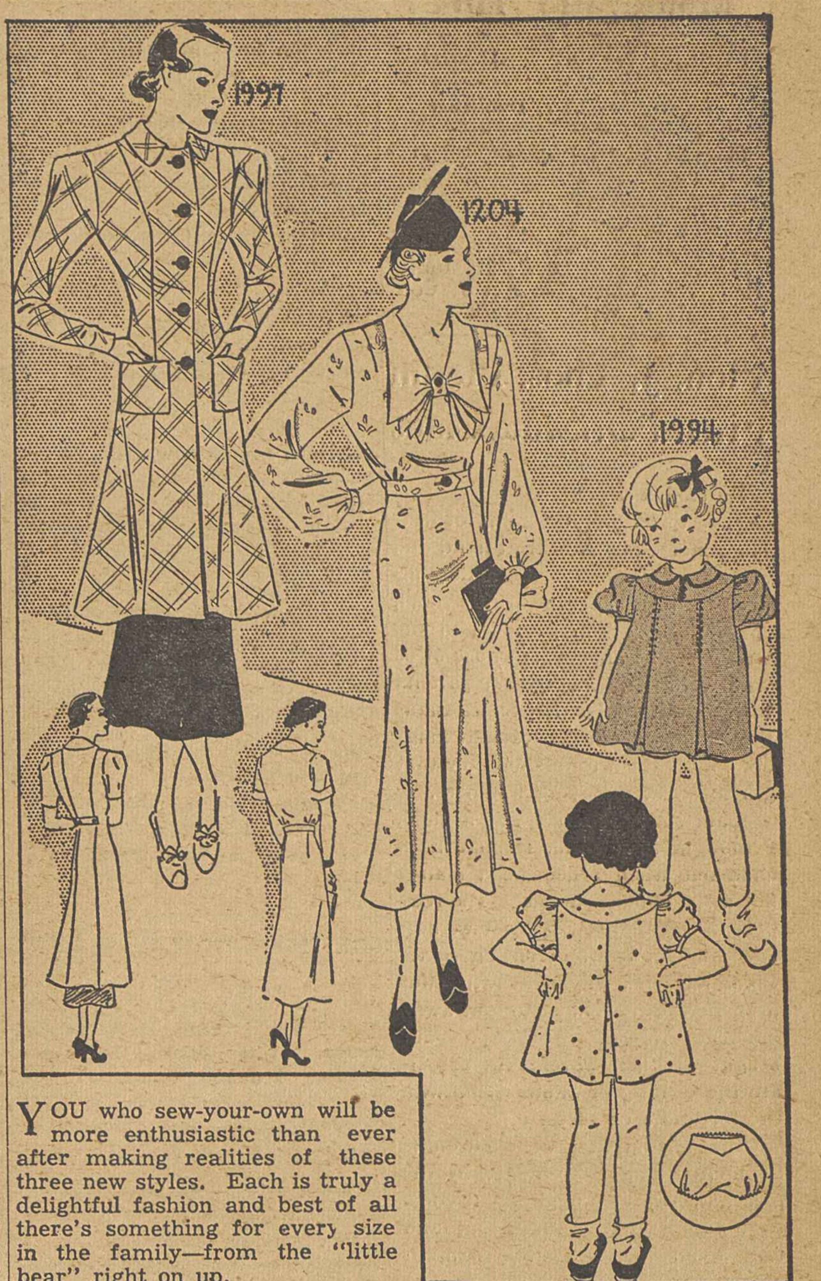
The Egyptian Bloodstone

The Egyptians called the carnelian the bloodstone because it was supposed to cool the blood and prevent apoplexy. It overcame anger and produced peace. It was said that wearers of this stone had beautiful skins—free from blotches and sores. Certain Hindus believe that it will stop bleeding from the nose. For this they hold it between the eyes. The Turks and Greeks of the Middle ages believed that it protected a man from sorcery and the undue fascination of an unscrupulous woman. It has been used for many years by the Orientals as a charm against the evil eye. The belief once existed in Khurdistan that wearers of this stone became invisible in battle. If the ancient Kurd doubted his wife's fidelity he made her drink milk in which the stone had been washed. If she had been unfaithful her skin would break out in blotches.—Pearson's Weekly.

Showing Three New Styles



YOU who sew-your-own will be more enthusiastic than ever after making realities of these three new styles. Each is truly a delightful fashion and best of all there's something for every size in the family—from the "little bear" right on up.

Pattern 1997 is the smartly styled smock that probably has an option on a little portion of your heart right now. Fair enough, follow the dictates of your heart and you can't go wrong. This little wardrobe nicety will serve you becomingly and well. It will add to your comfort too. Make it of broadcloth, gingham, sateen or chintz for prettiness and easy maintenance. There is a choice of long or short sleeves and the shiny gold buttons offer just the sort of spicy contrast one likes in informal apparel. Available for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1204—This new day frock for sizes 36 to 52 is the final word in style and charm in any woman's language. To don this flattering fashion is to step blithely into the realm of high fashion. The soft feminine collar is most becoming and it serves as an excellent medium for contrast. The sleeve length is optional. Slender lines are the main feature of the skirt and a very pleasant effect results from the wide and handsome flare. Satin or sheer wool would most assuredly win your friends' approval and perhaps just a little of their envy. This pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4⅜ yards of 39 inch material. Less with short sleeves. The collar in contrast requires ⅞ yard.

The adorable little number for Miss Two-To-Eight, Pattern 1994, is surely without competition in the way of downright intrigue. It's the essence of youthfulness with a lot of grown-up technique added to make it a crackajack. Why not do things up right and cut this model twice—panties too, naturally—using sheer wool for the "best" occasion frock and gingham or seersucker for school, play and all-purpose use? Pattern 1994 is available in sies 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material plus ¾ yard of bias binding for trimming.

Good Resolutions

LET us all resolve: First, to attain the grace of silence; Second, to deem all fault-finding that does no good a sin, and to resolve, when we are happy ourselves, not to poison the atmosphere for our neighbors by calling on them to remark every painful and disagreeable feature of their daily life; Third, to practice the grace and virtue of praise.—Mrs. H. Hon. J. Thos. Heflin Friend Of Santa Claus

He said today:

"The time for the coming of dear old Santa Claus is near at hand and soon that great lover of little children will be abroad in the land, spreading joy and gladness in the Kingdom of Childhood. Those of us who were permitted by our parents to revel in the joys that Santa Claus provided for us in that radiant kingdom, bless them to this day, for that gracious act of loving kindness.

"Paul said, 'When I was a child, I thought as a child, I spoke as a child but when I became a man I put away childish things.' The rosy period of childhood is brief at best and I am in favor of letting Santa Claus have his way with little children before they have to 'put away childish things.' Children are taught by their parents to associate the coming of Santa Claus with the birthtime of Jesus.

"The imagination of children is stimulated and strengthened by the pleasant, helpful thoughts that come to them as they think about and talk about the 'Beautiful Land of Somewhere,' where Santa Claus lives and provides gifts for them at the Christmas time.

"I have never known any man or woman to express regret for having had the gift-giving friendship of Santa Claus in childhood.

"I fondly cherish the memory of my childhood experience with Santa Claus and I shall never forget the thrill and the joy that were mine at daybreak on Christmas morning when I saw a cream colored woolen sock bulging with gifts for me that came from Santa Claus. My cup of childish joy was full and running over. And if I had my way about it, I would have Santa Claus pay a visit on Christmas night to every little boy and girl in our country."—LaFayette Sun.

WHERE ESTATES COME FROM

Only about three cents out of the American investment dollar goes into life insurance.

Yet seven out of every eight dollars left by men to their families, are life insurance dollars.

In other words, somewhere about ninety cents out of each dollar invested by the average man is lost or spent and does not become part of his estate.

Here is more proof of the fact that a systematic estate building plan of the life insurance or trust fund nature, is essential to the protection of dependents.

FOR THE RECORD

For whatever enlightenment it may afford to the taxpayers, let it be recorded here that the Alabama House, by a vote of 42 to 39, resolved to pay the Alabama legislators and clerks their full compensation, estimated to amount to something like $20,000, during a 17-day holiday recess.

In the Senate, however, the measure first was amended to give the legislators only their mileage, but allowed the clerks to draw their salaries.

The House refused to accept the change and the resolution went to conference. But in the end, the generous idea prevailed.

The legislators favoring the resolution included many of those who have been saying that they couldn't find money needed for the schools except by the new taxes which, with such vigor, they have enacted.

Of course, this would have been only a mere $20,000. And what's $20,000 of the people's money?

"Belshazzar's feast has started," Senator Swift commented, "but I refuse to participate."

Perhaps even comment was unnecessary. The record is certainly a plenty.—The Birmingham Age-Herald.

POLITICS' PET FALLS DOWN

Theoretically, municipally owned electric plants should be able to undersell private plants by a wide margin. Municipal plants are free from almost all taxes—private plants are among the heaviest taxed of industries that pay various special taxes in addition to regular taxes. Municipal plants usually escape state regulation—private plants are regulated most comprehensively. A large number of municipal plants are publicly subsidized, directly or indirectly—a private system receives no subsidies, but, on the contrary, must pay heavy taxes, and also make both ends meet or go bankrupt.

Yet, according to a breakdown of Federal Power Commission statistics made by Robert C. Cleminson, municipal rates are almost invariably higher than private rates.

Taking the United States as a whole, municipal plants undersell private plants in but one consumption bracket, 25 killowatts per month, and then by but a margin of 3 cents. This amount of electric usage is far below the average family's.

For forty killowatt hours per month, the municipal plants charge an average of $3.21 as against $3.20 for private systems. For 100 killowatt hours, they charge $5.73 as against $5.47. For 250 killowatt hours—a consumption which permits the use of a few labor saving devices — the municipal plants charge $11.01 where the private companies charge $9.38. So it goes, with the difference in favor of private systems mounting with higher consumption.

In some states, the private utilities undersell the municipal plants in all brackets, even the unimportant one of 25 killowatt hours per month.

Here, certainly, is the answer to the charge that the private industry charges excessive rates. Though it is heavily taxed and stringently regulated, it manages to consistently undersell its untaxed and unregulated competitor.

YIELDS INCREASED

Field tests in several leading potato producing states prove that proper placement of fertilizer often increases potato yields as much as 35 to 40 bushels an acre, says United State Department of Agriculture scientists. Best results were obtained when the fertilizer was placed in a narrow band at each side of the row about two inches from and on the level with or slightly below the seed pieces. Potato planters with side fertilizer attachments are now available.

Dairymen should breed a majority of their cows in December and January for Fall freshening, as Dairy Herd Improvement Association records show that cows that freshen in the Fall produce more milk and return more profit above feed costs than cows that freshen in the Spring.

Economic Highlights

The spokesmen of the people—that is, the Senators and Representatives who will make up the next Congress — are converging on Washington. They are settling themselves in hotel suites, apartments, houses. They are meeting unofficially and discussing the tasks that lie before them. And they are looking forward, cheerfully or otherwise, to a very heavy business calendar.

Leadership of the Senate will not be changed from last session. Robinson of Arkansas, who was reelected by a staggering majority, will head the overwhelming Democratic majority. McNary, of Oregon, one of the very few Republicans of high public position who survived the Roosevelt landslide, will be spokesman for the G. O. P. minority. In the House, the Republican leadership will also probably be the same as it was last session, but there will be a new Speaker. There is a considerable competition on foot for this very important post, but it seems almost certain that administration-backed Representative Rayburn of Texas (who has been in the House for more than a generation, but is not widely known) will get the necessary votes. His chief opponent is Representative O'Conner, of New York, 13 years a member of the House.

These leaders and their followers will have plenty to do between January and June, or whenever Congress ends. It would seem, in view of the great Democratic majorities, that there would be little trouble in approving or voiding legislation—but unless all the forecasters are wrong, there will be many a burning speech delivered from the floors of both branches, many a bitter wrangle in committee rooms.

For example, one of the biggest questions facing Congress is that of appropriations. The President is said to favor a reduction in government expenditures, in talking of a balanced budget. Most officeholders pay him lip service in this—but privately, many of them have different ideas. Biggest spending bureau of the government is the WPA. It is obvious that government costs cannot be materially curtailed without more or less drastic WPA retrenchment. Word has already gone out from the White House that the WPA budget is to be gradually reduced, starting with a 7 per cent slice.

So far so good—but when you cut WPA spending, you must discharge thousands and perhaps hundreds of thousands of people from WPA rolls. Each of these is a voter, and each voter may control two or three other votes. Congressmen—especially Representatives, whose terms are only two years, as against six years for Senators—are afraid of reprisals at the 1938 polls if WPA beneficiaries are given the gate.

Present WPA funds will run out along about January 21. More funds will be appropriated—but the president's ideas as to totals are likely to be very different from those of lesser officeholders. So he faces some internal warfare when that matter comes up. Probably his wishes will determine the final outcome—but there will be fireworks first.

As contrasted with the burning topic of spending, it seems only reasonable to presume that the President's desires will be followed without much argument in most other matters. He wants the Reciprocal Tariff renewed. It undoubtedly will be. He also wants the expiring RFC given a new lease on life—that too will be done, unless a miracle happens, so with the President's power to devalue our currency, the hot oil measure, FHA insurance of defaulted mortgages, and other measures which are now in effect under expiring laws.

It is said that there will be no law rejuvenating in different legal terms, the defunct NRA, and that the 30-hour week bill will die a legislative death.

As for the administration's attitude toward the Supreme Court, there are many guesses being made, but the only person who can say definitely what will be done, the President, has said nothing. The recent Supreme Court decision on the New York unemployment insurance laws has led some to believe that the Court is "following the election returns" and becoming more "liberal". That remains to be seen. There is always the possibility that, should the Court void measures close to the Administration's heart, Mr. Roosevelt will ask the country to pass a new Constitutional amendment restricting the Court's power.

Business is naturally looking forward to Congress convening with keen interest and some trepidation. Leaders hope the President will be able to keep all factions contented. They naturally approve his announced stand in favor of budget balancing and debt reduction.

A recent period, in the words of the Annalist, "brought additional evidence of further improvement in industries that have already experienced much recovery and indications of a revival of industries that have been lagging. It seems to be a seller's market all along the line, as finally reflected in a sharp rise in this weekly wholesale price index."

Ingenuity Shown By Farm Women

Materials Usually Discarded Used To Make Useful Things

Greenville, Ala.—Butler County farm women have developed a unique way of making attractive pieces of furniture and other things for use in their homes from materials that are usually thrown away.

As listed by Effie Cowan, home demonstration agent, some of the articles recently made are: a woolen afghan made from left-over pieces of yarn which were dyed with crepe paper.

A quilt-comfort made with samples of men's clothes.

A picture made from wool thread.

Christmas candlesticks made from common pine burs.

Displays of what attractive wrapping can do to jars of jelly and preserves to make nice gifts of them.

All the Christmas boxes used in the display were boxes which had been covered out of Christmas wrapping paper.

Hunting Accidents For Two Months Near 1935-36 Season's Total

Montgomery, Ala. — With the 1936-37 hunting season but a little more than two months old, Alabama has witnessed almost as many hunting accidents as were reported for the entire 1935-36 season.

Carelessess on the part of hunters up to December 15 had resulted in 13 accidents, five of them fatal to the victims. One of the five fatal accidents was the drowning of a hunter weighted down by a string of squirrels around his neck.

This steadily mounting list compares with 9 fatalities from 15 accidents during the 1935-36 season and, if hunters fail to exercise more caution in the fields, bids fair to eclipse the high of the 1933-34 season when 31 accidents and 17 fatalities were recorded.

Hunting accidents reported to the State Conservation Department up through December, 15th included:

T. R. Long, Uniontown, fatally wounded when he accidentally discharged his gun while crawling over a fence.

George Leonard Scarborough, 19, Wilmer, fatally wounded when his gun was accidentally discharged as he leaped from a stump.

Rufus Layton, 51, Enterprise, fatally wounded by the accidental discharge of his gun while he was attempting to cross a fence.

L. D. Collins, Birmingham, was wounded by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of a hunting companion.

Patton Brasfield, Grove Hill High School teacher, accidentally shot in the face while hunting near Demopilis.

. William McLean, TVA construction superintendent at Wheeler Dam, accidentally shot in the face by a hunting companion while shooting birds near Florence.

W. C. Hall, member of the Selma City Council, suffered the loss of two fingers from his right hand when the gun he was carrying was accidentally discharged.

William A. Bryant, watchman for the Baldwin County Hunting Club, suffered an injury to his eye when struck in the face by a low hanging limb.

Aubrey England, Butler, shot in the shoulder by a companion while hunting near his home.

Bonnie Jean Lott, West Butler, struck in the head by a rifle bullet fired accidentally by a hunting companion.

Blackstrap molasses is one of the cheapest feeds available to Alabam livestock producers this winter. One pint of blackstrap per day will cheapen the ration of either beef or dairy cattle and will replace an equal weight of corn.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

The Christmas joys and happiness of your home and families at this season of the year will not depend upon the amount of money you spend toward making Christmas a great occasion. Those things which form lasting memories in the minds of both grown-ups and children are not always those expensive gifts which cost far more than the giver could afford to spend, nor from celebration so glamorous and glittering that we quite forget the sacredness of the occasion we are celebrating. The real Christmas joys of the lasting kind are those that come from unexpected messages of Christmas cheer—kind words spoken at the right time, a hearty hand clasp when the soul is in it and the joys that come from carols sung beneath lighted windows. Don't forget the shut-ins at Christmas. Remember that the greatest of the gifts was not a gift of material worth but a gift of love. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." We must not put Christmas upon cash basis alone if we expect to carry with it the sacredness it has possessed until now.

Margaret Sangster has expressed very beautifully in the following lines of the poem a very beautiful Christmas thought.

"THE TOE OF THE STOCKING"

Christmas morning, and stockings hung
In a wonderful, gift-stuffed row.
How I hurry to get to mine,
Ever so long ago.
Joys in the toe and a candy cane,
And fruits from bright tropic lands.
And far below, in the stocking's toe,
A prize for my eager hands.

Ah, that I now might find the thrill,
Of a stocking stuffed with joys.
Life grows complex as we grow tall,
There are fewer simple joys.
But I still remember the laughing haste
Of the journey down the stair,
When my eyes would go to the stocking's toe,
Toward the prize that waited there.

The world is a stocking crammed with gifts,
And some of the gifts are small,
And some of them break in our eager grasp,
And some are not there at all.
But still I have courage to think there is
A prize if we dare dig deep.
I somehow know in the stocking's toe,
There's a gift for the soul to keep.

PWA To The Fore To Help In Removing Illiteracy

Program Calls For The Expenditure Of $7,600,184 For Building Purposes, Etc.

A report on what is probably the greatest program ever attempted to remove illiteracy from this state, through construction of school and college buildings financed with the aid of the Public Works Administration, was forwarded to Congressman Lister Hill here yesterday by Dr. J. A. Keller, State Superintendent of Education.

The program, beginning in 1934 and continuing into the future, was said to call for the erection of 334 new school buildings, additions to 145 structures and repairs and renovations to 48 others. The total of expenditures involved, for work already completed or for which contracts have been awarded, was given at $7,600,184, of which $6,048,578 was in loans and grants, and $1,560,613 was provided outright by the sponsors.

In the 1934-1935 season, allotments of $1,528,503 were made for 13 school buildings, with $1,522,171 provided by PWA grants or loans; in 1935-1936 allotments of $5,172,209 were made, providing for erection of 44 school buildings and college units. Additional allotments were made for school and college buildings which will be completed during 1937. The total sum involved for the new construction was given at $998,382.

It was pointed out that the Alabama schools have had but little available capital outlay for such work in recent years, but that great progress had been made under the PWA which provided $45 in grants for each $55 raised by the authorities of the various localities.

All of these buildings erected, Dr. Keller said, were badly needed. He added that the PWA school and college structures were well built and were providing proper housing for thousands of young persons who, otherwise, would have been forced to remain away from school or be housed in antiquaited buildings.

31,247 IN CCC CAMPS

Since April, 1933, 31,247 men have been employed in CCC Camps in Alabama, 27,914 of which were enrollees and 3,333 non-enrollees. Dependants of enrolled workers have received $5,475,000 to October 1, 1936. Enrollees allot $22.00 to $25.00 of their $30.00 monthly salaries to dependants.

CRIES SAVE INJURY

Pittsburgh—Five-months old Elizabeth di Pietro wailed in her cradle and saved herself from death or injury. Mrs. Mary di Pietro, her grandmother, heard the cries, picked up the baby and started toward the kitchen. She heard a crash, paused, and looked back. The ceiling had given way and several large chunks of plaster dropped onto the baby's crib.

Alabama Coal And Coke Production

Estimates On Mine Output Set Total For The Year At 12,000,000 Tons

For the first time since 1931, virtually all the larger coal and coke companies in Alabama will use black ink when they write down results of operations for 1936.

This was the frank statement of leading coal and coke operators today. Although they declined to make estimates as to the percentage of profit they expected to show for the year, they freely admitted marked improvement in sales and production.

Coal production in the State for 1936 will set a new five-year high mark of more than 12,000,000 tons and come close to equalling the 1931 total of 12,126,,300 tons, according to estimates of W. B. Hillhouse, chief state mine inspector.

Coke production will also be the best in five years, Mr. Hillhouse's estimate being 2,250,000, the largest since 1931 when 2,857,476 tons tons of coke came out of ovens in this district.

Leading operators predicted production and sales of coal and coke in 1937 would surpass 1936 by at least 10 per cent.

Coal mines over the state, however, are employing from 15 to 30 per cent fewer men today than in 1931, although production is right at the 1931 level.

The reason for the decline in employment is the increased use of machinery in mining coal. Mechanical improvements are being installed heavily, the past year seeing a greater number of such improvements made than any year in nearly a decade.

Coal and coke prices today are only slightly higher than in 1931.

Coke operators said that October and November shipments were the best in the history of their companies.

Coal production last year was 9,012,743 tons. The 1936 estimated production of more than 12,000,000 tons ,an increase of 33 per cent over 1935, was attributed to general improvement in business conditions and the absence of strikes. Last year Alabama Coal mines were closed about three months because of labor trouble.

The Montevallo Coal Mining Company opened up a new mine during the year at an estimated cost of more than $100,000.

Coal and coke production is still far from the 1926 peak, however, in that year the state's mines produced 21,508,812 tons of coal, while 4,610,309 tons of coke went on the books.

President Back in Washington Preparing for Inauguration—Hopkins May Get New Cabinet Post—Wallace Urges Permanent Crop Control.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

President Roosevelt

RETURNING to Washington in fine health and spirits after his trip to Buenos Aires, President Roosevelt plunged into a great mass of work that had accumulated on his desk. There were numerous reports on government activities to be read, plans for the inaugural on January 20 to be made, outlining of his inaugural address, and consultation with the full cabinet concerning the program for his second term. Still more immediate was the task of writing his annual message on the state of the nation and his budget message for the coming fiscal year. Then, too, he is expected to devote considerable time to consideration of the revamping of the cabinet and to plans for reorganizing the government machinery in various departments.

The inaugural ceremonies will be simple in accordance with Mr. Roosevelt's wishes, and the traditional ball will be omitted. After consultation with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the inaugural committee and Vice President Garner, it was decided that the parade should be limited to units from the army, navy and marine corps and from the West Point and Annapolis academies. Governors of all the states will be invited but they will be limited to three motor cars apiece. There will be no civilian organizations in the parade. Grand stands are being constructed on both sides of Pennsylvania avenue at the White House, and on the steps of the Capitol.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's first duties was a sad one—that of attending the funeral services for August Gennerich, his close friend and bodyguard who died suddenly in Buenos Aires. The services were held in the White House and with the President were Mrs. Roosevelt, Vice President and Mrs. Garner and cabinet members. A delegation of New York City policemen was present to pay the respects of the "finest" to one who had served with distinction on the force for twenty-five years.

The President and his household were cheered by news from Boston that Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., ill in a hospital with a streptococcus infection and sinusitis, was recovering rapidly, that an operation probably would not be necessary and that the young Harvard senior has a good chance of spending Christmas in the White House.

JOHN HAMILTON is still chairman of the Republican national committee. At a meeting in Chicago 74 of the 76 members in attendance rejected his resignation, and he responded: "I'm gratified, and I'll keep right on working." The opposition to Hamilton was led by Hamilton Fish of New York, but it dwindled rapidly during the debate.

Before adjournment Hamilton was empowered to appoint a group of Republicans soon to formulate a plan to bring the party funds out of the red. Treasurer C. B. Goodspeed reported that the campaign expenditures were $6,546,776, and that the deficit was $901,501.

H. L. Hopkins

"SECRETARY OF PUBLIC WELFARE" may be the title of a new member of the President's cabinet, and it may be held by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator. The creation of this department has been under consideration for some time and becomes probable with the plans for consolidation of several governmental agencies and activities pertaining to public welfare, from the social security program and the independent office of education to the children's bureau now in the Department of Labor.

There has been talk that the new department might be given to Miss Perkins, who is slated to retire from the labor secretaryship, but general opinion is that Hopkins, favorite money dispenser of the administration, will get the job.

WITH five men and two women aboard, a big liner of the Western Air Express disappeared in fog and storm south of Salt Lake City and it was believed it had crashed and that all seven persons were killed either in its fall or by exposure. Searching parties found possible traces of the accident in a broken tree and "tracks" in the snow, but the weather was so severe and the region so isolated that the hunt was badly hampered. Those aboard the plane which started from Los Angeles were Mr. and Mrs. John Wolfe of Chicago, just married; Henry W. Edwards of Minneapolis; Carl Christopher of Dwight, Ill.; Stewardess Gladys Witt, and Pilots S. J. Samson and William Bogan.

EXTENSION of the glass workers' strike to plants in Toledo, Charleston, W. Va., and Shreveport, La., brought the flat glass industry almost to a standstill. The closing of these factories is directed against the automobile industry, but the Ford company is equipped to produce its own glass and the other automobile makers are said to have enough glass in stock for a month. It was estimated that 14,300 men were idle at the plants of the Libby-Owens and Pittsburgh Plate Glass companies.

The new strikes were called after leaders of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers failed to reach an agreement with representatives of the two companies concerning strikes already in progress. Libbey-Owens also was negotiating for a new union contract, their old one having expired.

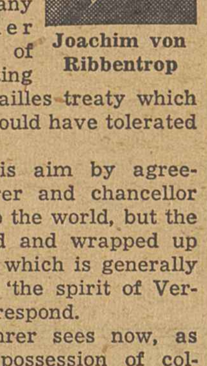
Employers said the impasse was reached as a result of the union's determined demands for a closed shop, a checkoff system of union dues, and wage increases.

Glen W. McCabe, president of the Glass Workers' federation, denied the union was demanding a closed shop or that the checkoff system had to be granted.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE in his annual report to the President, recommends that, instead of "emergency crop adjustments," the government establish a permanent production control. In this Mr. Wallace ignores the opinion of the Supreme court in the Hoosac Mills case holding that congress has no power to regulate agriculture. The secretary said that shortage caused by drouth could only be temporary and that the natural reaction will be production that will glut the market and pile up surpluses. Soil conservation alone, he said, is not a sufficient preventive of overproduction.

In another section of his report, Wallace cited figures showing that imports of agricultural products exceeded exports by 418 million dollars in the fiscal year 1936. He blamed this, however, on the drouth, rather than the scarcity policies of the old AAA and the administration's trade agreements.

The report asserted that a permanent agricultural policy should achieve "soil conservation, consumer protection, and crop control altogether," but outlined no specific plan for attaining all those objectives.



Joachim von Ribbentrop

JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP, German ambassador to England, addressing an English audience in London, told the world plainly that Germany intends to scrap "the discriminating part of the Versailles treaty" and that Adolf Hitler is determined to regain colonies for his country.

"One thing is certain," he said, "and this I cannot help stating: Germany has made up her mind to get rid of that discriminating part of the Versailles treaty which no great nation could have tolerated forever.

"To attain this aim by agreement, der fuehrer and chancellor made his offer to the world, but the world, still blind and wrapped up in the mentality which is generally known today as 'the spirit of Versailles,' did not respond.

"But der fuehrer sees now, as before, in the possession of colonies desired for supply of raw materials only, on one side, and in world trade on the other, two most essential means of raising the standard of life of his people from the present subsistence level.

"A reasonable solution to the colonial question, therefore, is most desirable and to my mind to the interest of all in the long run."

IT WAS announced in London that Great Britain and Italy had almost agreed on the terms for a mutual declaration of interests in the Mediterranean. At the same time Foreign Secretary Eden told the house of commons that on September 12 the British government warned Mussolini that he must keep his hands off the Spanish Balearic islands. He said there was now reason to believe Italy would not enter into negotiations with General Franco, the Spanish Fascist leader, for a change in the Mediterranean status quo. Eden added that Great Britain had not recognized Italy's annexation of Ethiopia and did not intend to do so.

PRESIDENT MIGUEL GOMEZ of Cuba and his administration, including a large part of the congress, are at outs with Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff and the "strong man" of the island republic. Batista has been insisting on a bill for a 9 cents a bag sugar tax designed to produce $2,000,000 revenue annually for rural schools to be operated by army sergeants. Gomez and his crowd have opposed this legislation, fearing it means the rise of fascism; but it is warmly supported by the farmers, tobacco raisers and canefield workers, thousands of whom marched to Havana to demand the passage of the bill. These people call Batista "defender of the common people" and "savior of Cuba."

Several months ago Batista was quoted as saying he would not be afraid to head a dictatorship "if it were necessary for the good of the country." He may soon be called on to assume that position.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek

WAR clouds again gathered over the Far East when Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of of China, was kidnaped at Sianfu, Shensi province, by troops commanded by Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, former war lord of Manchuria. The mutinous marshal demanded immediate declaration of war against Japan; a pledge from the Nanking government to recover all lost territory, including Manchuria, and reorganization of the Chinese Nationalist party, the Kuomintang, so that Chinese communists might be admitted to membership.

The Nanking government promptly declared war on Chang and his army and a large body of troops was sent toward Sianfu to besiege the city. But it was reported in Shanghai that Chiang Kai-shek, clinging to his ideal of a united China, sent word to Nanking by Gen. Chiang Ting-wen forbidding hostilities. Meanwhile agents of Chang and the kidnaped generalissimo were passing to and fro, trying to open negotiations for the release of Chiang Kai-shek.

Japan professed to believe that Chang's action was promoted by Russia, and officials in Tokyo said forceful steps by Japan might be necessary.

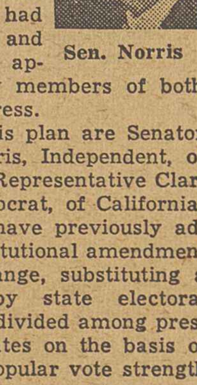
The soviet news agency Tass in Moscow issued an official denial of reports that Russia had conspired in the Chinese crisis, but diplomats in the Far East were of opinion that Moscow would intervene if war should break out between China and Japan. Japanese action would be based on the reported setting up of an independent government at Sianfu by Marshal Chang with the support of soviet Russia.

REPRESENTATIVES of the 21 American republics gathered in the conference at Buenos Aires all signed two measures designed to maintain peace, security and nonintervention in the Western world. These projects are:

A plan for maintenance of peace and security which provides for consultation in the event of war within the American continents or war abroad which menaces American peace.

A reiteration of the resolution of the 1933 Pan-American conference, for nonintervention by one nation in another's affairs. This carried also a Mexican amendment for consultation if intervention appears necessary.

GREAT BRITAIN again defaults on its war debt to the United States, but intimates it would like to re-open negotiations for reduction of the debt. This time the British government does not state it has found no new reason to warrant a resumption of payments. All the other debtor nations also defaulted except Finland, which as usual proudly paid the installment due.



Sen. Norris

MEMBERS of the electoral college met in the capitals of their respective states and went through the empty formality of casting their votes for Presidential candidates — 523 for Franklin D. Roosevelt and 8 for Alf M. Landon. About the same time it was announced in Washington that a move to abolish the antiquated electoral college system had been started and would have the approval of many members of both houses of congress.

Leaders of this plan are Senator George W. Norris, Independent, of Nebraska, and Representative Clarence Lea, Democrat, of California, both of whom have previously advocated a constitutional amendment making the change, substituting a system whereby state electoral votes would be divided among presidential candidates on the basis of their relative popular vote strength in the state.

Under the present system President Roosevelt, polling approximately 27,750,000 votes, received 523 electoral votes. Governor Landon, polling approximately 16,680,000 votes, received 8 votes. Each Roosevelt electoral vote represents the desires of 53,000 voters. Each Landon vote represents the wishes of 2,085,000 voters.

CHRISTMAS AMONG THE PINES

By

Jocile Webb Pearson

BIG BILL, in spite of his six foot four was a boy at heart. Boss of a logging crew he could be plenty stern when occasion demanded, but a Christmas tree and all the lights and cheer that goes with it was his weakness.

"Christmas is no fun without kids," was the way he put it. But, it looked like Bill was doomed to disappointment this year.

The crew were lounging around the fire after a hard day's work when Pudgy Sam, the cook, shook the ashes out of his pipe and said: "What's the reason we can't have a Christmas just like home right here? Plenty trees, if we can muster the trimmin's."

"Christmas No Fun Without Kids," the Way He Put It.

Bob, the kid dishwasher, was all enthusiasm. "We've got popcorn. I've strung yards at home for mom. Sam's got a harmonica, and Dave a Jews harp, an' some of you fellows can sing. And I'll trim the tree."

"The Boss wouldn't think much of a Christmas without kids," put in Dave. "There's the Martins. They got a couple kids; we can ring them in. I was by there t'other day an' heard them talkin' about Santa comin'."

"Boss said Martin looks sort of beat out, too," said another. "Suppose we appoint Bob, here as a committee of one to extend our invitation for them to join us. I feel we owe them something, the way they helped us when some of the men had flu."

Big Bill was jubilant with their plans. "You fellows took the wind out of my sails, but you'll do a better job than I could."

"Oh Little Town of Bethlehem," lead by Sam's harmonica, floated out from lusty throats upon another star-strewn night.

Big Bill in a scrambled suit of red flannel and a hemp beard was a satisfactory Santa Claus to at least two happy children. He handed out gifts to everyone. Sam had done his best on the feast that followed, and everybody joined in the "three cheers and a tiger" for a jolly Christmas among the Oregon pines.

A House Built Christmas Day

. . . by . . .

Frances Grinstead

A HOME that was built on a Christmas day stood for a long time on the old Santa Fe trail where it passed near Arrow Rock, Mo., on the Missouri river. Though not quite completed in a single day, with the help of his neighbors on that "holiday" about a hundred years ago, Henry Nave got his cabin ready for his family and the day after Christmas took them into his shelter.

Of course the house was built of undressed lumber, felled right on his farm. When he had selected the location this pioneer cut down round poles for the walls, rafters and joists—the framework.

Mr. Nave had found some large, flat stones, and in the afternoon they dragged these into place for the hearth. Then of other suitable rocks, by much puffing and pulling they built a fireplace—one of those great practical ones which served to heat the home and to cook venison, buffalo meat, corn pone and other "victuals." The exterior of this fireplace was wood, the stones providing a fireproof lining.

The mortar to bind the stones was chiefly mud; to obtain even this simple ingredient it was necessary to build a fire in the middle of the half-constructed cabin and thaw the ground.

But, writes this hardy woodsman, "It was not many days until we were living snugly in our cabin and in good health and with fine appetites."

While the Little Nave Children Wished for Things.

Holidays among our ancestors were made occasions for such celebrations as this, but they never witnessed the cessation from labor ours afford. There was always need for immediate shelter, crop harvesting, or game killing. Hence log-raisings, corn-huskings, and gun-shoots were made social occasions. But do you suppose we ever have more fun than Henry Nave's family and friends had building a house on Christmas day?

From Old China
She Wore Boy's Clothes
The Long Farewell
Dangerous Gold, in Russia

Arthur Brisbane

A roar comes from the great Chinese dragon, the 400,000,000 that live, labor, die and are exploited. The Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, attached to the ancient Chinese belief that right is so powerful that it does not "require to be supported or enforced by might," is arrested by his mutinous troops demanding "an immediate declaration of war against Japan; recovery of all Chinese territory, including Manchuria."

This outbreak worries Tokyo, and it might, if China had a few fighting leaders, with enough airplanes and good pilots. China now is like Niagara Falls before the turbines were put in, much power going to waste. What could military genius and modern weapons accomplish, backed by a nation of 400,000,000?

Helen Coberly said she "never liked girl's clothes, wanted to be a boy."

Millions of other girls have said that. Helen lived up to it, put on boy's clothes, went through the boys' high school to the senior class, earning her way "digging ditches, mending fences."

Known to be a girl, expelled from the class, she weeps. Some intelligent young man with blue eyes and a kind heart, marrying Helen Coberly, might some day be the father of a great American.

The Former King Edward has bid farewell to England, and England and the rest of the world bid farewell to the young man, who told his people: "I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility without the help and support of the woman I love."

A good many men might say that who do not realize it.

Whoever wrote, or helped to write that broadcast, it was a sincere, touching farewell to the world's highest position, and well done. There is no doubt that the young King inspired it.

Russia's production of gold increases rapidly, with 144 gold fields active; the total production not less than $200,000,000 a year, and according to some estimates nearly $500,000,000.

Russia already surpasses Canada and the United States in gold production, and expects soon to surpass the British South African gold fields, and all the gold goes to the government. Prospectors and miners get "praise."

This gold production does not mean greater power for bolshevism. Quite the other way, it may be the worst thing that could happen to the Karl Marx-Lenin-Stalin theory.

As nations and individuals become rich they become conservative.

There is still reverence for English kings in "democratic America." In New York clubs of "aristocratic" membership all rose when the broadcast began, and not one sat down while the King was speaking. In England they sat down, they are used to kings there.

Mrs. C. H. Wilson of Columbia, S. C., went farther; her house was on fire, she told firemen, let me know if you think the roof will fall, and went on listening to Prince Edward, while the house burned.

It takes a long time to breed out of human beings that which is inbred into them through ages; hence the persistence of our various superstitions.

Intelligent Dr. Craster, health officer of Newark, N. J., starts a needed campaign against kissing babies, suggesting the use of bibs embroidered with these words:

"I don't want to be sick—do not kiss me."

He says:

"A kiss can be more dangerous than a bomb."

Consumption begins in infancy; babies usually get it from tubercular mothers who kiss them on the mouth.

Congress resumes work soon; what will it do, and try to do? How will it interpret the 46 to 2 vote, "all present" except Maine and Vermont; how will the unwieldy Democratic majority deal with its problems?

It will probably try to do whatever President Roosevelt tells it to do; that last election seemed to intimate that the President has the public's permission to do as he pleases.

And that makes the situation extremely difficult for the President. There is such a thing as TOO MUCH approval, too much POWER.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle aged surgeon, is possessed of seemingly supernatural powers. He is able to anticipate what people say before they utter a word; occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, however, is in love with Dan Carlisle, a professor at the University who has little means. They discuss marriage, but decide to delay talking to her father about it. Nancy, who has been playing tennis with Dan that afternoon, tells her father she had been playing with a girl friend. Greeding knows this is untrue and is secretly enraged. Stepping into his wife's room, his eye falls on a marble statuette which he dislikes. He picks it up, wishing he could smash it to bits. Suddenly it is snatched from his grasp as by an invisible force and burst asunder. Mrs. Greeding is greatly disturbed over the mysterious destruction of the statuette. The doctor makes light of it. He reveals that Ira Jerrell wants to marry Nancy. On the way to a dinner party a car cuts in front of Greeding's. He angrily expresses the wish that the driver would break his neck. An instant later an accident occurs in which this very thing happens. At the dinner the Greedings meet Prof. Carlisle, Dan's father, and his daughter Mary Ann. Dr. Greeding is intrigued by Mary Ann, who is a surgical nurse. Mrs. Greeding tells Prof. Carlisle about the destruction of the statuette and he indicates it might have been caused by a "poltergeist," a "racketing, mischievous spirit." Greeding pretends to Nancy that he has no objection to Dan. More interested in Mary Ann, Dr. Greeding induces her to take a position in his office.

So Mrs. Greeding was silenced; but there was not long any doubt in Doctor Greeding's mind that Mary Ann was competent. She was like a second pair of hands. At the operating-table she anticipated his desires before they took shape in his mind. She watched his fingers and the progress of the operation; and when he was ready for knife, scissors, snaps, retractors, he found the desired implement in her hand, awaiting his grasp. He found the morning's work left him fresh and free from fatigue; he thought his own technique improved, and told her so.

"Miss Rimes was excellent," he said. "But — I shall be tempted to overwork you, even after her return. You must protect yourself against my impositions."

She smiled and said: "I never saw anyone whose work was at once as unhurried and as swift as yours." And he was by her approval absurdly pleased.

They progressed by degrees from acquaintance to friendship. Doctor Greeding committed to her attention the matter of that man whose death he and Mrs. Greeding had witnessed.

"I saw the accident, he explained. "It—touched me. For no particular reason, I am inclined to do something for his family, if they need help of any kind."

He was not blind to the approval in her eyes as she promised to investigate.

Subsequently, Mary Ann reported that the man was an automobile mechanic; and he had been, on that particular evening, in haste to come to the hospital, where his wife was about to be delivered.

"But the accident has its compensations," she confessed. "He appears to have been a worthless sort. He used to be a chauffeur in a nice family; and the daughter of the house eloped with him. I went to see her, last night. She told me that after they were married, when her husband realized that her father would not support them, he was furious; and since then he has mistreated her abominably. Now that he's dead, she's going home, forgiven, happier than she could ever have been as long as her husband lived."

Doctor Greeding found in this discovery a surprising satisfaction. He had since the tragedy moved warily, like a stranger in a great power-plant who avoids contact with the machinery about him, lest he loose forces beyond his understanding and control. But now, assured that this man for whose death he felt responsible was better out of the world than in it, a treacherous feeling of infallibility took lodgment in his mind.

Yet outwardly there was no change in the routine of his days, except that he saw more and more of Mary Ann. He no longer disturbed himself so much about Nancy and Dan. Nancy had agreed with him as to the wisdom of delaying for a while any formal announcement of her engagement, and —he had always banked on his luck. He did so now. Jerrell was seeing much of Nancy, for Dan had gone to Newfoundland to fish for salmon, and Nancy's time was free . . .

Doctor and Mrs. Greeding kept open house every Sunday afternoon and evening; and any number of people were apt to drop in, casually, without forewarning. Jerrell took advantage of one of these occasions; and after supper he and Nancy disappeared together. When later they returned, Jerrell joined Doctor Greeding in the library.

They spoke at first of casual things; Jerrell said presently:

"By the way, Nancy tells me she knows Dan Carlisle."

Doctor Greeding was instantly on guard. "You know him?" he asked.

"Only through his book," Jerrell said. "That is an able piece of work. A textbook not only for college classes, but for business men, and investors too."

The Doctor smiled. "I haven't read it," he confessed, and turned the conversation into safer channels. "I suppose you're as busy as usual?"

"Just now, yes," Jerrell assented; and after a moment's hesitation, he explained: "I'm taking an interest in a new outfit, Associated Cottons. We're proposing to cover the field from plantation to retailer, in one way or another. Of course I'm not personally connected with the technical end; only with the financing. We issued the stock privately at ten, and then had it listed. It's around eighteen now."

He looked at the ash on the end of his cigar. "It's apt to sell off a bit this month and next," he said. "But we expect it to hit fifty by the first of October."

"Your profession has always interested me," Greeding assented in an indifferent tone, but he was not indifferent. If Jerrell said Cottons would hit fifty, it was likely to do so. He filed the information in his mind. "I never speculate, myself," he added, unnecessarily.

But despite his disclaimer, he telephoned next day an order to Paul Master, who handled his investments, to buy a block of Cottons . . .

Jerrell continued to see Nancy frequently; and Doctor Greeding, watching his daughter without seeming so to do, thought that she was faintly ill at ease in the older man's company. When Dan came back from Newfoundland and brought a fourteen-pound salmon to Nancy, Doctor Greeding proposed to Mrs. Greeding:

"Why not invite the Carlisles over for dinner? We'll have the salmon!"

Mrs. Greeding said sensibly: "I expect Dan would rather have steak. After all, he must have eaten salmon in Newfoundland till he feels like one himself."

The Doctor chuckled. "He won't care what he eats, as long as he can be with Nancy," he pointed out.

Mrs. Greeding suggested: "Mr. Jerrell has been here so much, while Dan was away. I think Nancy has —enjoyed seeing him."

"Give Dan a chance to repair his fences then," Doctor Greeding retorted. He saw her surprise, and said with a chuckle: "I'm not taking sides, Myra. I'm for a fair fight and let the best man win. Dan's probably all right. If he's anything like his sister, he's an able young man. Mary Ann has done very well with me. She's much the best nurse I ever had."

"You mean that we should invite Mary Ann too?" she asked doubtfully.

"Of course," he assured her. "And Professor Carlisle. Make it a family party!"

Mrs. Greeding in the end, although with a clear reluctance, agreed. Professor Carlisle and Dan and Mary Ann would come to dinner on Tuesday night.

Doctor Greeding had heretofore, save on the occasion of their first meeting, seen Mary Ann only in street clothes, or in her nurse's uniform; but tonight he thought he saw her for the first time. Her gown itself he could not have described, knew only that it was a harmonious part of her. Yet she seemed to him so radiant that it required a conscious effort on his part to control his tones and make them no more than casual. When he lifted his cocktail, his eyes met hers, and the drink was flame in his veins.

He took refuge in jocosity. "Dan," he announced, "we've a special treat for you tonight. A friend of ours sent Nancy a salmon, and we're having it for dinner!"

It requires not much encouragement to lead a fisherman to talk about fishing, and Dan was full of reminiscences of his trip. The dinner-table conversation was almost a monologue. When Mrs. Greeding rose at last, she said:

"Ned, I expect Professor Carlisle and Dan would like a liqueur, and to smoke their cigars here."

She and Mary Ann and Nancy went into the other room; but Doctor Greeding saw Dan's eyes follow them, and he said amiably:

"No need of your staying with us, Dan. I think Nancy has some design on you. Go along and see."

So Dan grinned and he too disappeared. Doctor Greeding sat at one end of the table, the Professor at the other; for Professor Carlisle had filled the pipe which he preferred to a cigar.

For a little, nothing was said. Then Doctor Greeding remembered certain matters almost forgotten and he said, making his tone casual:

"Professor, Mrs. Greeding tells me that you gave her that evening at the Jordans', quite a lecture on poltergeists. She had so much to say about it that I came home and read up on the subject myself. Do you seriously think there is any truth in these tales?"

Professor Carlisle smiled faintly. "I should hardly expect you to accept them," he confessed.

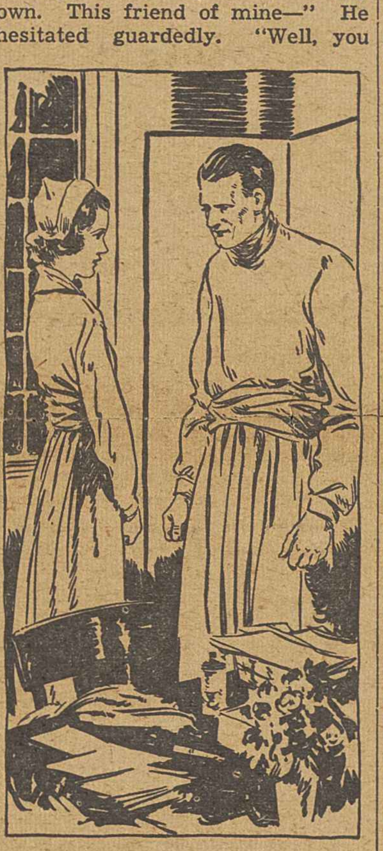
Doctor Greeding chuckled. "But I'm not completely incredulous," he protested. "I had a friend once who confessed to some personal experiences of the sort."

Professor Carlisle looked at him with a new interest. He said, at hazard: "It has often seemed to me that an open-minded physician must observe in his practice many things not easily explained by any medical formula."

Doctor Greeding nodded. "That is true," he said. "I do remember occasions when things seemed to go unusually well, in the course of an operation; when my fingers were successful without my mind being fully conscious of the sources of that success.

"For an example, there was a man with a crushed and lacerated arm, necessitating amputation; it was during my days at the City, on relief work. An artery tore loose and retracted into the upper arm. Ordinarily, this means a swift and extensive dissection in order to catch the end of the vessel and check the hemorrhage. I did it in a matter of seconds; and even now, I don't know just how it was done. The artery seemed almost to thrust itself into my reach."

He continued: "But I wasn't referring to any experience of my own. This friend of mine—" He hesitated guardedly. "Well, you know the old belief, Professor, that to be born under a caul was lucky. This chap was born under a caul; and I think he was always secretly a little proud of the fact, feeling that he was set apart from other men by that circumstance."



She Smiled and Said: "I Never Saw Anyone Whose Work Was at Once So Unhurried and as Swift as Yours."

The Professor smiled. "He wasn't also, by any chance, the seventh son of a seventh son?" he suggested in ironic amusement.

Doctor Greeding chuckled. "No. An only child," he admitted; and he went on:

"We grew up on adjoining farms, and if there are poltergeists, I suspect that he was one. I remember that when he was a boy, if he was left alone in a room, something was apt to fall and break. Of course, he was always blamed, and punished. His father used to say he whipped this youngster not for breaking the thing in question, but for lying about it afterward."

Professor Carlisle commented: "Boys have lied before, and will again."

"I know," Doctor Greeding admitted stubbornly. "But this boy always denied, even to me, that he had done the things for which he was blamed. I remember once we were haying, on a hot day in July; and they put us in the mow to stow the hay, and the hay caught fire. The barn, in fact, burned to the ground. Fortunately, it was a small hay-barn, across the road from the house, used only for storage, and the loss was not serious. But there again, he was blamed. They insisted that he had lighted a match, or done some other folly." He chuckled. "He bore the welts of that affair for days," he said; and he asked: "Isn't this the stuff poltergeists are made of?"

"The subject is pretty extensive," Professor Carlisle explained. "Fires are a common manifestation, appearing in many of the tales." He added: "There was a man named Charles Fort—he is dead now—who made a study of such things. Probably with his tongue in his cheek. In one of his books he said these fire phenomena look to him like the survival of a power that may once have been common, when primitive men needed fires and didn't know how to make them. He talks about vestigial functions in the human body, just as you surgeons talk about vestigial organs . . . Of course, this is all in the highest degree fanciful."

"But it's an amusing subject for speculation," Doctor Greeding insisted. "Your man Fort, I gather, thought these functions were originally of some use to their possessors. But what possible good can it do to project a plate across the room and allow it to break against the wall?"

The professor answered good-humoredly: "Well, Fort suggests that these poltergeist disturbances may emanate from some malicious mind. If your friend in the haymow wished the hay to burn up, for instance, so that he would not have to work so hard on a hot day—"

Doctor Greeding laughed, suddenly expansive. "Like Mrs. Greeding's statuette," he suggested. "She told you about that, the other night. As a matter of fact, I had the statuette in my hands when it fell—though I haven't dared confess as much to her. She'd blame me for dropping it; but I didn't. I was thinking that it was rather hideous, when the thing simply flew out of my hands and crashed to bits."

He saw the other's curious glance, added quickly: "If this chap had been in the house, I'd suspect him!"

"What was his name?" asked Professor Carlisle.

"Tompkins," said Doctor Greeding readily. "But he's dead now."

The older man was for a moment silent; he lighted his pipe afresh, looking intently at the bowl. But at length he asked curiously:

"Did you—notice anything unusual about the way the statuette fell? You said it flew out of your hands?"

Doctor Greeding nodded, forgetting caution. "Exactly," he assured the other man. "It was as though some one snatched it away; and I remember it seemed to hang in the air for a moment before it fell."

Professor Carlisle smoothed his pipe-bowl in his hands. He said after a moment: "Well, that hesitating, uncertain flight is often mentioned in the accounts of poltergeist disturbances."

He added apologetically: "But I'm afraid I'm a skeptic at heart. I can discuss these absurdities so long as the discussion remains empiric; so long as I confine myself to things that are reported to have happened to others, far away. But when you tell me things that happened to your friend, and now to yourself, I lack the courage of my conversation."

Doctor Greeding felt a faint irritation rising in him at this disbelief. He said: "You sound rather like an incredulous scientist yourself!"

"It's much less disquieting," the professor pointed out, "to assume that there is a credible explanation for these—incredible occurrences."

Doctor Greeding watched him narrowly, till pique at the other's attitude drove him on. "Are there any cases," he asked challengingly, "of actual injury or death, through this sort of thing?"

"Yes," Professor Carlisle assented. He was grave now. "There have been persons found dead, their bodies charred to a cinder, their clothes not burned at all. There are even one or two cases reported of men killed by a bullet, or stabbed, but with no rent in their clothing to correspond with the wound in their bodies."

"What does your friend Fort say of such incidents?"

"He only points out that 'wounds such as might be imagined by haters of people have appeared upon the bodies of people,'" the professor cautiously explained.

Doctor Greeding nodded. "I suppose most of us, in fits of anger, have wished that unpleasant things would happen to certain people," he reflected soberly. "It would be rather disturbing to a man if those malicious wishes on his part began to come true." He chuckled. "Nations might enlist an army of good effective haters to win a war by wishing their enemies dead!"

Professor Carlisle shook his head.

Danger From Lightning Greater in Open Field

Relatively few people are ever struck by lightning, but it is well to try to avoid such a fate by bearing certain facts in mind. Lightning should be regarded as being very eager to get from the cloud to the ground by the path of least electrical resistance. It prefers to travel through metal; animal tissue is its next choice, then plant matter, and it goes through air only when nothing else is available.

The worst place to be during an electrical storm is standing upright in an open field, warns Dr. Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune. The next worst place is under an isolated tree. It is easier for electricity to pass along the wet branches than through the air, and from there to jump to a man than to pass through a dry trunk. Contrary to our instinctive belief, or horse sense, the vicinity of a well made lightning rod is far safer than that of a tree.

The safest place to be during a storm is either in a deep mine or in a skyscraper with a steel frame. If these are not immediately available, a house, preferably a well rodded one, is safe enough.

The Christmas Quilt

by

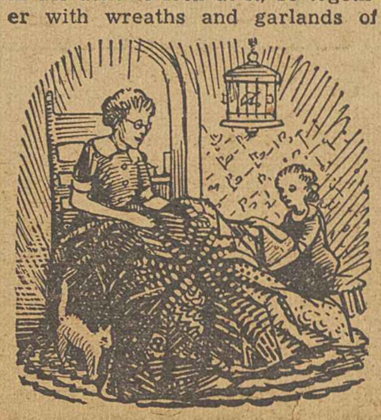
Blanche Tanner Dillin

THE snow was beautiful but made one feel somewhat lonely, Nancy Atwell thought as she stood at the window watching the falling snow. For an instant she regretted refusing the urgent invitations of her two brothers and two sisters to spend the holidays with them. Each of them had been insistent, but were all so far away it was out of the question, financially, and she didn't want them to furnish the money—and then for years she had spent Christmas here in the Connecticut hills with grandmother and she couldn't imagine it seeming like Christmas any place else.

Peggy North, her old and dear friend, had written that she could not get away for the holidays, so hoped that Nancy could be with her.

Nancy had done little toward any sort of festivities and had left putting up the decorations until the last minute. In fact she hadn't bought anything new—the old ones would do well enough. Perhaps she might just as well go up to the attic now and see what there was. It might seem more like Christmas with some decorations around.

As she opened a drawer in an old chest her hand touched grandmother's old quilt—"Grandmother's happiness quilt," as she always called it. It was just such a day as this so long ago, when sitting at grandmother's feet down in the "setting" room she had heard the history of the pieces in the quilt. There was no place here in the attic to look at it, so together with wreaths and garlands of tinsel she carried the quilt down to the room where she had heard its history for the first time, and spread it out on the bed.



She Had Heard the History of the Pieces.

Here was a piece from the dress grandmother had worn when grandfather proposed. Here was the piece of grandmother's wedding dress—others from Christening robes, party dresses, wedding dresses and dresses worn on other happy occasions—some almost in shreds, but still enough left to recall the stories to Nancy as Grandmother Atwell had told them. How grandmother had loved telling them and how she had laughed at some memory. Nancy had commented on what a happy life grandmother had had. No one ever had a happier one, grandmother assured her. How cheerful, unselfish, grandmother had been, never dwelling on her own troubles, but ready to help others in theirs.

Nancy recalled the times grandmother had been the means of making the path a little smoother, the pain less keen, by the gift of something Nancy especially wanted or the fulfilling of some cherished plan of Nancy's. And when Nancy was left alone in the old home and grandmother sent for her she must have guessed just how much Nancy wanted the rest and quiet the hills would give her. Nancy never forgot the smile and embrace with which grandmother greeted her — no rehearsing of painful experiences, but plans immediately made for happy days in the future. Nancy's loss had been grandmother's as well, but grandmother had never let others know the shadows that crossed her path.

What a satisfaction it must be to be able to help others as grandmother had. Then Nancy saw how she could do the same, in a measure at least. First she could give Anna a vacation over the holidays. Next she would wire Peggy she would be with her over Christmas. As she laid the quilt away after carrying out her plans, deep gratitude filled her heart for if she hadn't found the quilt she would never have known the happiness she now felt.

MEANING OF "NOEL"

"NOEL" is the French name of the Christmas feast and of the old carols formerly sung in the French country churches at this season. Its derivation is from the Latin "natalis," meaning "born," and the word was originally shouted or sung to express joy over the birth of Christ. With the spelling "Nowel" it is found in Chaucer and other early writers.

Making a Choice—

Independence and Loneliness or Dependence With Ties of Affection

TO MOST persons there comes sometime in their lives the opportunity for a choice between independence and loneliness or ties and affection. The wise mature person thinks long before choosing the former above the latter. There are many young people, however, who feel so sure of themselves and their ability to "get along all right" that they are irked by the least restraint. They throw it off, only to discover later in life that affection is worth the curtailing restraint and dependence entailed. Companionship has been their portion up to the time of their decision that dependence is what they must have, at any cost. They have no idea of what loneliness means.

Separation.

The adult who is separated from his family because of distance, domestic estrangement, or who has outlived the other members, realizes to the full what it means to be alone. It is when estrangement causes the separation that there are times when the aloneness is bearable or agreeable, but these times are interrupted by hours when the feeling of loneliness creeps over him (or her), and companionship, though with but a small degree of affection, is craved.

Individuality.

Human nature is so constituted that people cannot live in the same atmosphere and always see eye to eye. There is wisdom in this plan. Individuality would be quelled if what any person thought (however beloved) could always be accepted without dissent by those around him (or her). Nor can actions of even those dear to us, invariably meet with our approval, whether expressed or unexpressed.

It is when we learn to permit personal differences without censure that companionship, in the home or out of it, develops best. Even when children are young, they must be allowed a modicum of such freedom or when older they will long to break away, and if they do then there is loneliness in store for the youth, and sadness left in the home.

Married couples, when they contemplate divorce, have the choice between independence plus loneliness, or dependence, each on the other with affection restored, or remaining less than could be desired. It may be there is incompatability, but it should be remembered that no two persons, married or single, can live together under the same roof and always be congenial. However, this does not signify that at heart affection is gone. Separation means loneliness for one or both of them.

Families.

Within a family there is sure to be some dissension at times—young folk may quarrel and adults dispute. But when these times are over, the ties of affection, the associations that intertwine, and the fabric of their lives so closely woven together, should prove a firm foundation for continued companionship. The door to loneliness should remain barred.

German And French Girls College Chums

A German and a French girl who are studying at Alabama College have allowed no international difficulties in Europe to spoil their friendship. The two exchange students, Erna Gilde, of Germany, and Monique Baillet, of France, have been seen frequently together ever since their arrival in Montevallo last September. They are together at social affairs, and on all occasions when international relationships are being discussed, for they are close students of public opinion. Their own contributions to forum discussions are valuable, for they represent intellegently the the national mind of their countries.

Planning to join their exchange students from Europe now studying at Agnes Scott, University of Virginia, and University of Georgia, Miss Baillet left Alabama College last week for Christmas holidays in Florida and Cuba.

Miss Gilde at the same time left for New York where she will be the guest of relatives during the holidays.

PROTECTS OIL

Cottonseed, corn and peanut oils which were protected from light with green paper remained fresh and suffered little loss in vitamin A, but samples of the same oils which were not protected from light became rancid and showed appreciable loss in vitamin A, reports the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils. In tests in oils used in making potato chips, peanut oil remained fresh longer than the other oils studied.

RICE GOOD "EXTENDER"

With a bumper crop of rice on the market, this is a good year to remember that rice is a satisfactory "extender" for meat and gravy dishes, such as chicken and gravy, Swiss steak, or curried lamb or pork. Also many sauces go well with rice. For example, Spanish sauce, made with tomatoes, green peppers and onions, is colorful and appetizing when served with flaky white rice.

Yuletide One Of Best In History

BUT 265 HOLIDAY DEATHS IN DAY COMPARE WITH FIVE IN SPANISH WAR

Unseasonal warmth and prosperous business conditions brought to the United states one of the merriest Christmas days in history.

Millions of dollars worth of gifts were exchanged in quantities which merchandising organizations reported to be near a record. Charity groups, which found their task of collecting funds easier than in many years, gave food and good cheer to thousands, but their burden was lightened by the increase in employment.

There was a tragic side to the day, however, with at least 265 persons meeting sudden death in holiday accidents, mainly caused by automobile crashes.

The death toll in the United States was far worse than in embattled Madrid where airplane bombs and artilitary shells, smashing into the Spanish capital, killed only five.

In Bethlehem, British troops on garrison duty to prevent rioting in the Holy Land, sang Christmas carols in the streets.

Pope Pius, having broadcast a Christmas Eve plea for peace to the whole world, grew steadily weaker in the Vatican.

President Roosevelt had sixteen members of his family in the White House, but Mrs. Roosevelt was in Boston with her son, Franklin, Jr., who is recovering from a sinus operation and a sterptococcus infection. The presidential mansion was deluged with thousands of gifts from citizens.

The president and his family attended a morning church service.

Generally sunny weather throughout the country, except for rain in a few sections, was largely responsible for the large number of motor accident fatalities. Cars were out in numbers approximating Summer travel.

All other means of transportation were crowded, the air lines, particularly, doing a capacity business.

One group of travelers achieved two Christmases. The Eastbound Phillipine Clipper of Pan American Airways crossed the international dateline between Midway and Wake Islands, carrying the crew and passengers back from Christmas Day to Christmas Eve and so into Christmas again.

England rejoiced over the birth of a Christmas baby—a princess—to the Duke and Duchess of Kent. She becomes sixth in the line of succession to the throne.

King George and the royal family attended church at Sandringham.

His abdicant brother, the Duke of Windsor, also attended church—in Vienna. Acting as lay reader, he read the story of the nativity from the scriptures.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

On the first Sunday of the new year, during the eleven o'clock worship service, Rev. Mr. Cox will use as the theme of his message the first thought expressed in that popular song, "It's So Easy To Remember."

At the 7:30 p.m. service, which will take place at the Methodist Church (and is the final Christmas season union service), Mr. Cox will bring a sequel message, based on the second thought of the same song "And So Hard To Forget."

Remember the Church School, which meets at 9:45 a.m. in the Church annex, under the supervision of Professor W. J. Kennerly.

We bid you welcome in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord.

To all who mourn and need comfort, to all who are tired and need rest, to all who are lonely and need companionship, to all who sin and need a savior, to all who are rejoicing in the Lord, and to whomsoever will, this church opens wide its doors. Nowhere in the world can you obtain such comfort, companionship and encouragement as is secured by those who go into the House of the Lord.

Pete Jarman Writes Constituents On Eve Of Assuming New Duties

CONGRESSMAN

PETE B. JARMAN

It is my sincere wish that a very merry Christmas has been enjoyed by all, and my equally sincere hope that the happiest New Year in years is in store for you and that 1937 will prove one of the best, most prosperous and most enjoyable years of our lives.

I go now to assume the performance of my duties as your Representative in Congress, responsible duties which you so kindly imposed upon me. As I do so I desire again to thank you most sincerely for the confidence evidenced by your magnificent support and to reaffirm my determination to prove worthy of it, and cause you to desire that I continue to represent you for a long while, until the seniority so valuable to a Congressman, and much more so to his District, is gained.

I repeat that it will be my purpose to represent the whole people of our excellent District to the best of my ability, squarely meeting all issues as they arise. Toward that end, I have requested assignment to committees, selected after very mature thought and numerous conferences with senior Congressmen, on which I believe I can best serve our District, and I confidently hope that the strenuous effort I have made in that direction will result in my assignment to one or more of them.

I fully realize that it will prove quite impossible for me to invariably please all my friends and constituents because of conflicting wishes and views. However, it will be my purpose to serve you all to the best of my ability at all times. I also realize that, being human, I shall make mistakes, but when the book is written and the record is made I hope and believe it will be a fruitful one to which my keenly appreciated friends and constituents can point with pride. Toward that end, I respectfully and sincerely solicit the thoughtful cooperation of all patriotic citizens in our District. The campaigns are water over the dams. Let us look to the future rather than the past. I shall be the Congressman of you who did not support me as well as those who did.

It is my purpose to spend next summer in our Disttrict, and I look forward with pleasurable anticipation to seeing and enjoying a conversatioin with you at that time. In the meantime, may God bless you and keep you healthy, happy and prosperous.—Pete Jarman.

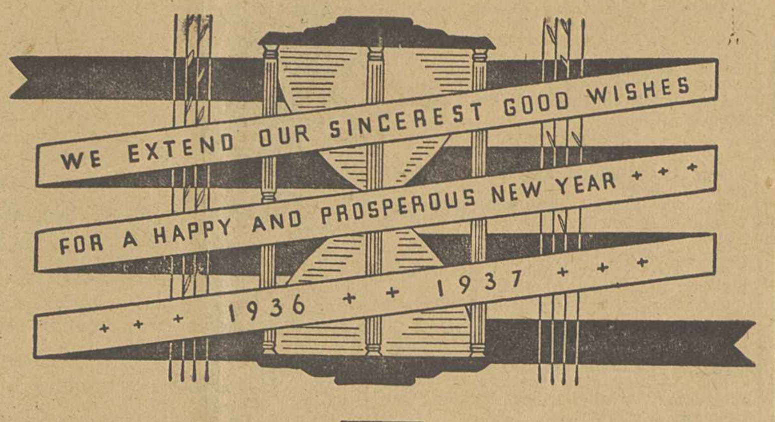
"Did you see the gorgeous sunset on Christmas Day, in beautiful shades of blue and gold? It was truly the end of a perfect day." This beautiful thought was submitted by Mrs. F. W. Rogan, and I am sure she will not mind my giving her the honor of recalling the beautiful Christmas Day to us.

To make a good dustless duster, put two tablespoonfuls of furniture polish or liquid wax into a glass jar, shake around until the inside of the jar is well coated, and pour out. Put a piece of old soft silk or chamois in the jar and let it remain a day or two to absorb the polish. When the dust cloth becomes soiled, wash it and repeat the waxing process.



WE EXTEND OUR SINCEREST GOOD WISHES
FOR A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR + + +
+ + + 1936 + + 1937 + + +

The publisher of The Montevallo Times is prepared to enter the New Year, 1937, with greetings to every friend everywhere, and a sincere wish for your good health, happiness and prosperity. Though it may be only a dream, we would have all of you attain your every wish during 1937.

Along with our hopes for the wellbeing of our friends, The Times is zealous in its own sphere of opportunity for the future. As a community institution in Montevallo, we hope to be able to exercise fully and effectively our privileges to serve our community along with other agencies that will in the same manner strive to make our community better, happier, more prosperous, more beautiful.

We hope to be able during the coming year to reflect the community of Montevallo to the world of our neighbors near and far, in more truly representative light than ever before. We expect to improve our physical facilities and make them more capable of meeting and portraying our spiritual ideals for our splendid town and community.

Our thanks go out to every friend who has contributed to our success in this field thus far. Certainly we could not have sustained or achieved without those friends and supporters.

We came to Montevallo to stay—to live and to make a living—because we believed it a good environment in which to rear the children in culture, refinement, and enlightenment. We are strengthened in that belief by our contacts and experiences during the months we have been here. Our hopes for the future are made brighter by the alluring advantages and pleasant associations with the splendid people of the town and community.

Generally speaking, we think everyone may find encouragement in the prospects for business activity in 1937. Let us hope this expectation may prove true.

We hope the laborer may find uninterrupted and peaceful employment throughout the year, with the sustained capacity to earn the things he may desire for the comfort and happiness of his family.

We hope our farmers may be blessed with the proper balance of seasons—sunshine and rain—that will make the fields bring forth abundant harvest, with markets and prices to return a margin of profit in money and comfort to those who till the soil.

We hope the school teachers will be paid their salaries in order that they may have physical substance to sustain them and inspire their spirits to higher service in the great cause they serve.

During 1936 we have followed the Star of Bethlehem to the place where we found the Light of the World at the end of the year. Now we look forward to the Rainbow of Hope for 1937. We wish that each and every one of you may find your Pot of Gold.

W. M. WYATT, Editor and Publisher.

"College Holiday" Gayest, Maddest Comedy of Year

Madcap, hilarious and giddy—tuneful, gay and gorgeous—is "College Holiday," which will be shown at the Strand Theatre on Sunday and Monday, January 3rd and 4th. You can rate it right now as the laugh hit of the season.

Headed by a half dozen of America's greatest fun makers, and supported by a cast of brilliant specialty performers, "College Holiday" sets a new high standard in comedies for Hollywood to shoot at.

Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Mary Bolland and Martha Raye are in charge of the laughs, and the assignment could not have been placed in more capable hands. The love interest is maintained by Marsha Hunt, Leif Erickson, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, Olympa Branda and Louis DaPron, with featured roles by Ben Blue and Etienne Girardot. A chorus of beautiful girls trained by Leroy Prinz introduces sprightly new dance routines.

"College Holiday" is the story of a pair of crack-pot cultists, played by Miss Boland and Girardot, who take over a bankrupt hotel, do it over into a Roman Garden, and there propose to prove that it is possible to do away with love. Gracie Allen plays the part of Girardot's daughter. She is endowed with a fifth sense which provides her with the ability, so she thinks, of determining who is best suited for whom. Benny, press agent for the hotel, brings a group of college boys and girls to the hotel—ostensibly for the experiment, but actually to rally paying guests.

In this situation almost anything could happen and does. Martha Raye, the "find" of the year, who soared to the top rung of popularity after only three film appearances, scores another smash success in "College Holiday" with that exhuberant, madcap and hilarious type of humor which is so distinctly her own.

The music in "College Holiday" also sets a new mark for Hollywood tunesmiths to shoot at. The celebrated teams of Ralph Rainger, and Leo Robin, Bert Lane and Ralph Freel, have put their heads together to write "Sweetheart Waltz," "A Rhyme For Love," "Who's That Knocking At My Heart?", all definitely in the hit class and all certain to be sung and whistled by the citizenry for months.

"College Holiday" is beautifully conceived and produced in every detail. It was directed by Frank Tuttle, to whom—an orchid.

Saturday Was Last Trade Day Event

Saturday was the last and concluding big event day of the trade building campaign that has been conducted by the merchants of Montevallo during 1936.

The event was attended by a large crowd of people, with keen interest in the awarding of about sixty dollars in cash prizes. Mr. W. J. Kennerly was master of ceremonies, announcing the awards through the loud speaker.

On behalf of the participating merchants Mr. Kennerly expressed appreciation to the people of this trade territory for their interest in this series of events, and for the patronage they have given to the merchants. He announced this as the concluding event of the present schedule, but impressed the crowd that each and everyone is invited to continue to come to Montevallo to trade.

While no definite plans have been made for the future, is was announced that the merchants of Montevallo are considering the inauguration of another trade campaign, perhaps to be started in the next few months. Already some of the merchants have expressed themselves as very favorable toward a resumption of the plan.

Program Doubtful For Next Congress

Lacking Definite F. D. R. Program, Outlook Is Unpredictable

Washington, December 27.—Some veteran observers described the legislative outlook for the approaching Congress Sunday as the most unpredictable in recent years.

Demands for a mandatory neutrality act and efforts involving the administration's reciprocal trade policy were among the few broad issues about which sentiment was definitely crystalizing as the advance guard of the Seventy-Fifth Congress arrived.

Little indication has come from the White House of a legislative "program" since the last campaign.

The president was represented as feeling he indicated in his campaign the general policies he hopes to carry out in his second administration. Concrete proposals forthcoming have not been sufficient to indicate the trend of congressional alignments.

One indication of minority activity concerned the impending effort to continue the reciprocal trade treaty act which expires June 14, 1937.

Representative Treadway (R., Mass.) minority member of the House ways and means committee, said he would present a resolution demanding that the secretary of state cite legal precedents for trade treaties to become operative without Senate ratification.

More potential discord arose from the demand by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) a member of the Senate munitions and foreign relations committees, for a mandatory neutrality act. The administration was expected by many to ask for legislation leaving invocation of such law to the president.

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said he had revised his bill providing a system of national charters for business concerns doing interstate business to include protection of states with child labor laws.

Senator Ashurst (D., Ariz.) chairman of the state judiciary committee, said he would reintroduce a proposed constitutional amendment broadening congressional authority to regulate agriculture, commerce, industry and labor.

Dr. and Mrs. A. K. Parks and daughter, Julia, of Memphis, Tennessee, former residents of Montevallo, visited friends here Sunday Dr. Parks is a member of the faculty of the University of Tennessee Dental Department. Mr. and Mrs. Woodford Parks, of Montgomery, accompanied them here also.

Miss Betty Joe Doyle, of Birmingham, came down Christmas Day to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Doyle. Their neice, Doris Jolly, of Birmingham, also spent the day with them.

Mr. Walter Fancher spent Sunday and Monday in Selma.

Heavy Death Toll On State Highways

FIVE BIRMINGHAM PEOPLE AMONG YULE ACCIDENT VICTIMS

The Christmas holidays brought gory death to 15 people in automobile accidents on Alabama Highways, three of the dead being a Birmingham man and two of his children who were killed when his automobile was struck by a freight train between Calera and Columbiana Christmas afternoon. Another Alabamian was killed in an accident in Florida.

Five persons were treated at Birmingham hospitals for injuries suffered in Christmas accidents. Two of these suffered burns from Christmas explosives, a woman and a child were treated for cuts and another child for injuries suffered when she fell from her new velocipede.

One of the fatal accidents occurred in Birmingham, bringing to 61 the total of traffic deaths in the city this year.

The dead:

H. C. Cost, Dorothy Cost, 14, and Charles Cost, 12, formerly of 1405 Tenth Avenue South.

Fletcher Hillary, Birmingham.

George Williams, 35, Gintown, Alabama.

Mrs. F. M. Lee, Opelika, Ala.

J. H. Poitevint, Camilla, Ga.

Gus Carter, 65, Dothan.

Mrs. Ann Sirey, 65, Dothan.

Nicholas Vickers, Jr., 20, Mobile.

Freeman Jacobs, 32, Atlanta.

Allen Cosey, Mobile.

Frank Hardaway, Mobile.

Clyde Hall, Langdale, Alabama.

Pvt. Joe C. Graham, Ft. McClellan, Alabama.

Mr. Cost and his two children were instantly killed near Shelby Springs, according to Sheriff Fore, of Columbiana, while on the way for Christmas visit with relatives at Jemison when their automobile ran into the side of a moving locomotive.

The car was dragged about 100 feet. The automobile was demolished and the bodies of the three victims were horribly mangled. Funeral arrangements were handled by Walton's Funeral Home, Columbiana.

J.A. Brown To Give Employees Party

Mr. J. A. Brown will give a turkey dinner tonight, December 31, for the entertainment of the employees of his eight business enterprises in this community.

The event will be at the home of Mr. Brown in Montevallo, and in addition to the turkey dinner, will include many features of entertainment as a New Year's party.

A list of employees to attend this occasion is as follows:

A. J. Wood, Frank Miller, L. C. Ozley, A. J. Hicks, C. H. Adams, R. C. Tucker, Cooper Shaw, J. G. Glasscock, W. L. Brown, M. H. Williams, Miss Edythe Hartley, Mrs. F. W. Rotenberry, J. B. Higgins.

The colored employees will be remembered with a proper portion of the hospitality of their employer. They are Hobson Stoudemire, Posey Burns, Andy Smelly and Geo. Cottingham.

In addition to this entertainment which so pleasantly expresses the appreciation of Mr. Brown for the faithful services of the people in his organization, he further emphasized his appreciation by distributing a total of $300 among his employees as a bonus for Christmas.

The eight business enterprises operated by Mr. Brown and represented by the employees in this happy Nw Year party are: Montevallo Grocery Company, Brown Grocery Company, Montevallo Ice Company, Brown Gin Company, Dixie Cash Store, Alabaster, Central Ice Company, Acme Oil Company, Peoples Garage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Woolley and two children, James and Homer, of Ragland, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Woolley during the holidays.

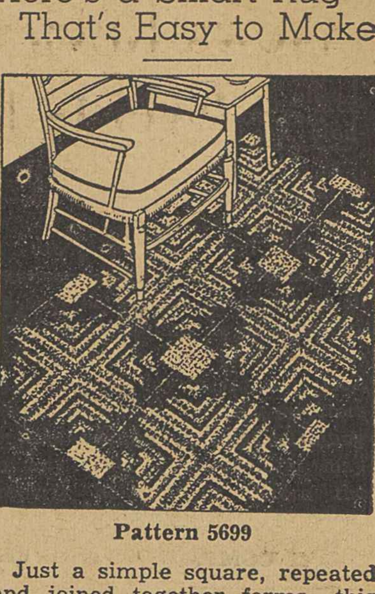
Here's a Smart Rug That's Easy to Make



Pattern 5699

Just a simple square, repeated and joined together forms this smart rug. You'll love doing the colorful squares in varied colors, and, in no time at all, you'll have enough completed to make this stunning rug. Here's one way to turn useless rags into something worthwhile, though rug wool or candlewicking may also be used. Done in Germantown the squares would make a handsome cushion or chair set. In pattern 5699 you will find complete instructions and charts for making the square shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

Casting Precious Metals

In casting gold and silver, temperatures running about 1,600 degrees Fahrenheit are used. These temperatures create a considerable problem in materials for the mold boxes, as most metals oxidize at such great heats. Recently an alloy of nickel and chromium has been chosen as the material for these boxes because it resists destructive oxidation until a thermometer reading of 1950 degrees is reached.

Cuban Congress Ousts President Gomez—Another Archbishop Attacks Edward, Duke of Windsor —Treasury Plan to Curb Credit Inflation.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

MIGUEL MARIANO GOMEZ, president of Cuba, was on his way out because he defied Col. Fulgencio Batista, the real ruler of the republic, by vetoing the sugar tax bill to raise funds for the building of schools that would be conducted by army officers. Despite plenty of warnings, Gomez persisted in his opposition to the measure which, he said, would lead to fascism. So the house of representatives, dominated by Batista, impeached him and he went to trial before the senate with the certainty that the decision would be against him. He was accused of attempting to coerce the congress unconstitutionally to defeat the tax bill, and of mal-administration. It was the first bill of impeachment ever voted in the history of the Cuban republic.

Miguel Gomez

Gomez defended himself vigorously but was resigned to his fate. The prosecution was conducted by three members of the house—Carlos Palma, veteran Republican leader; Eduardo Martinez Fraga, Nationalist, and Felipe Jay, Democrat.

Vice President Federico Laredo Bru was ready to succeed Gomez automatically. He is a lawyer, sixty-one years old and was a colonel in the Cuban war of independence.

ARCHBISHOPS of the Church of England just can't let the duke of Windsor and his love affair alone. The Most Rev. Dr. William Temple, archbishop of York and second only to the archbishop of Canterbury, took his turn in lambasting the abdicated king, in a Christmas diocesan letter that displayed little of the Christian spirit. Said the archbishop:

"It has happened to many a man before now to find himself beginning to fall in love with another man's wife. That is a moment of critical decision and the right decision is that they should cease to meet before the passion is so developed as to create an agonizing conflict between love and duty.

"This decision often has been taken by men of honor. And when the power of personal attraction is reinforced by the glamor of the throne the moral obligation is the more urgent for that reason.

"Let us remember that any kind of love which can be in conflict with duty is not the love of which the gospel speaks."

The British press and a great many of the English people are disgusted with these repeated attacks on Edward by the prelates and there is a growing danger of a split in the Church of England.

Dispatches from Edward's haven in Enzesfeld, Austria, say that he is planning to make Mrs. Simpson the duchess of Windsor in May next, immediately after her divorce becomes absolute. Meanwhile he probably will remain at the castle of Baron Eugene de Rothschild without seeing Mrs. Simpson.

There were reports that the duke might take legal action against the archbishop of York, presumably for slander.

SIMEON D. FESS, former senator from Ohio and for years a leader in the "Old Guard" of the Republican party, died suddenly in the Carlton hotel, Washington. He had been in retirement from national politics since 1932 when he was defeated for re-election to the senate.

ACCORDING to a decision of the United States court of appeals in New Orleans, the national labor relations board has authority to compel employers to bargain collectively with their employees. The tribunal upheld the board's cease and desist orders against Agwilines, Inc., which operates the Clyde Mallory Steamship lines, in connection with the dismissal of seven employees for alleged union action.

THE Supreme Court having upheld, in the Chaco arms embargo case, the neutrality powers of the President, Mr. Roosevelt let it be known that he would ask congress to revise the present neutrality law to give him broader discretion in his relations with foreign governments. In other words, the "teeth" which he and the State department have always thought the statute lacked. Just what the President would ask was not told to the press, but there were indications that he wants authority to:

1. Declare an arms embargo "upon the outbreak or during progress of" a war, and forbid the passage of American citizens or transport of American goods on belligerent ships, except at the traveler's or shipper's own risk.

2. Determine the actual volume to which commodity shipments would be limited and enumerate the items becoming contraband beyond those limits.

Government officials looked upon the Supreme Court's decision as the most sweeping approval of a New Deal law the tribunal has yet given. They read in it an inferential approval of the reciprocal trade treaty program, still untested, and a broader inference that the President should be given more latitude in negotiations of all kinds with foreign governments.

DELEGATES to the inter-American peace conference in Buenos Aires signed the 69 accords approved during the sessions and the conference came to an end. Farewell congratulatory speeches were made by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Argentine Foreign Minister Carlos Saavedra Lamas and the head of the Peruvian delegation, Carlos Concha. They all urged that the peace efforts be continued in the next Pan-American conference, which will be held in Lima, Peru, in 1938.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU and Chairman Marriner Eccles of the federal reserve board announced a new program for curbing credit inflation, and it is likely to involve $1,000,000,000 of borrowings in 1937. About a billion dollars worth of gold is flowing into the country annually, and if this continues next year, it was said by officials, the treasury will take that amount out of the money market, to offset the effects of the gold influx on domestic credit.

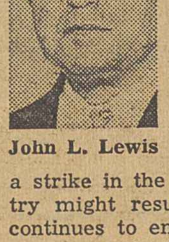
M. S. Eccles

The plan, which probably was devised by Mr. Eccles, is intended to hold the excess reserves, which are the reserves that member banks deposit with the federal reserve system in excess of legal requirements, on the same plateau where they are now. Previously gold flowing into the country was chalked up as excess reserves upon which an inflationary credit boom could be built.

THREE new indictments against major oil companies, oil trade publications and individuals were returned by a federal grand jury in Madison, Wis., in order to avoid delay in the trial of the anti-trust cases. With few changes the new true bills are similar to those returned previously by the 1935 grand jury and contested as invalid on grounds that the grand jury was illegally impaneled.

It is understood that the government plans to bring the cases to trial in March.

UNDER the general leadership of John L. Lewis the war for unionizing the steel industry and destroying the company unions is now under way. Some 250 company union representatives from the Pittsburgh, the Cleveland - Youngstown and the eastern districts met in Pittsburgh and were told by Philip Murray, chief aide of Lewis and chairman of the committee for industrial union, that a strike in the $5,000,000,000 industry might result "if the industry continues to employ its dog-in-the-manger attitude," in dealing with trade unions.



John L. Lewis

Thereupon the delegates adopted resolutions unanimously condemning the company union plan as a "farce," and establishing a new organization called the "CIO representatives council," with this "declaration of principles:"

1. All steel workers be organized into a national industrial union.

2. Employee representatives use their influence to enroll the steel workers into the steel workers organizing committee's campaign.

3. All steel workers be thoroughly informed by employee representatives who know from experience that the company union is a device of the management and totally unable to win any major concessions for the steel workers.

4. CIO employee representatives remain inside the company union for reasons obvious to all.

The wage demands are:

A $1.24 a day increase for all employees receiving over $5 a day.

A 30 hour, five day week.

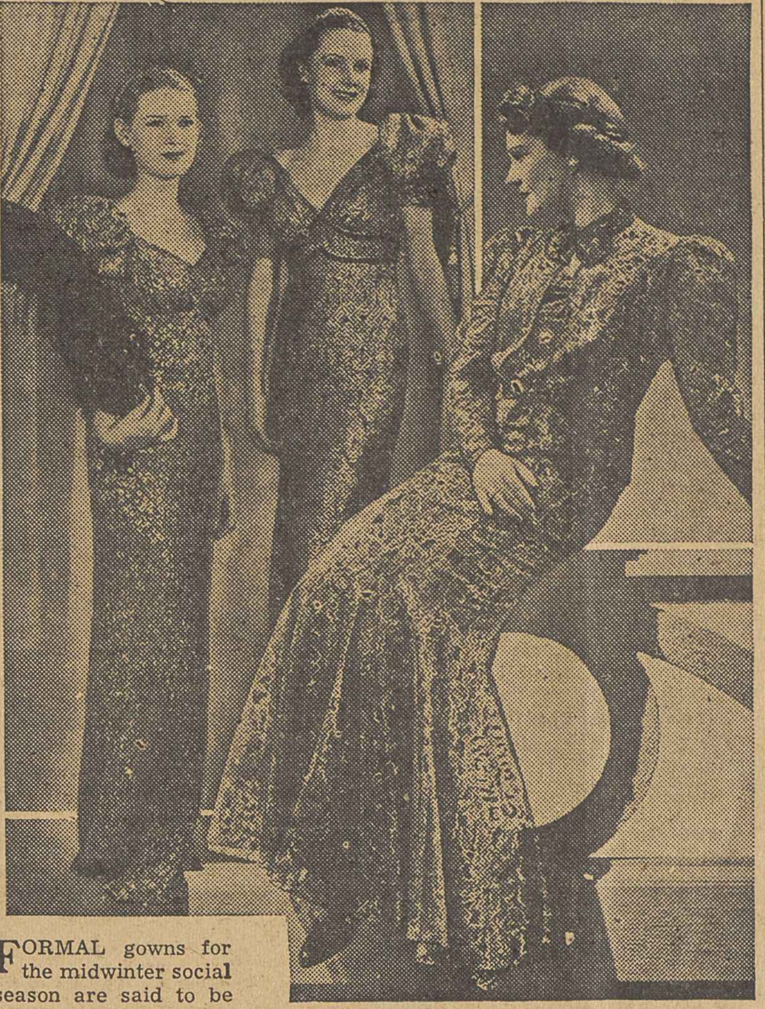
Paid vacations of one week for employees of two years' service and two weeks for employees of five or more years' service.

Time and one-half pay for overtime within the regular working week.

Double time for Sundays and holidays.

Period Influences Superb Fabrics

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



FORMAL gowns for the midwinter social season are said to be the most elegant, the most sumptuous and most extravagant that has been seen at any time since pre-war days. The "dress-up" movement is growing more and more so with each passing hour. From style centers come reports that an astonishing number of formals are selling this season and that the call for handsome afternoon gowns in rich metallics, velvets and laces is reaching beyond the usual.

Gorgeous, glinting, gleaming, sparkling and arrestingly colorful are the fabrics and laces that are fashioning the luxury apparel noted at fashionable gatherings. Then, too, the trend to greater elegance is expressed in the emphasis placed on luxurious accessories, on flattering little dinner hats and elaborate evening headdress.

Even more thrilling than the elegant materials and the vainglorious accessories that distinguish this season's formal modes are the various period influences that mark their styling. Designers seeking inspiration for the costume creations are delving into fashion lore of centuries past as they never delved before. The picturesque Tyrolean and Dalmatian mood is expressed in terms of colorful embroidery which is generously used at present and in other intriguing details that are adding greatly to the gaiety of current fashions. Boleros are flourishing in the mode both day and night and in the evening the latest is to throw a lace mantilla over head and shoulders and wear a red, red rose for corsage—fashion has gone as picturesquely Spanish as that!

One of the most outstanding gestures toward recapturing styles of the past is the reincarnation of the lovely Empire gowns taken from the days of Josephine and Napoleon. The stately and very beautiful dresses worn by the standing figures in the illustration bespeak the new Empire move as interpreted by designers in the style apparel creator group of the Chicago wholesale district. In these gowns we see the modern woman transformed into a glamorous true-to-tradition Napoleonic type. The silhouette, as you see, achieves a fashionable figure launched with a new profile of erect carriage and imperious dignity, accenting a high bust and waistline, flat diaphragm, deep decolletage, short puff sleeves and long graceful skirt.

Superb lame weaves gleaming with gold and silver and striking color are used for these gowns. The gown to the left is of an eye-catching metal brocade in an alluring tangerine color. Handsome lame in a vivid emerald green fashions the center dress with narrow green-metal ribbon accenting the high bust line.

The spirit of embellishment and splendor in keeping with the new luxury trend has invaded the lace realm also. Very lovely Chantilly laces have their floral patternings outlined in metal threadwork, while some laces add a decorative touch of embroidery or perhaps are starred with sequins, pearls and such. A dinner and evening ensemble stressing the vogue for the jacketed formal gown is attractively expressed in metalic-outlined Chantilly as worn by the seated figure in the picture. The neckline of the dress is square and the jacket ties softly with a bow. Which is the same as telling you when you buy lace for your frock it is not enough, you must allow an extra length for a jacket. In this way it serves a twofold purpose—with the jacket informal enough to wear to the simple dinner party, without the jacket a gown formal enough for the most pretentious evening occasion.

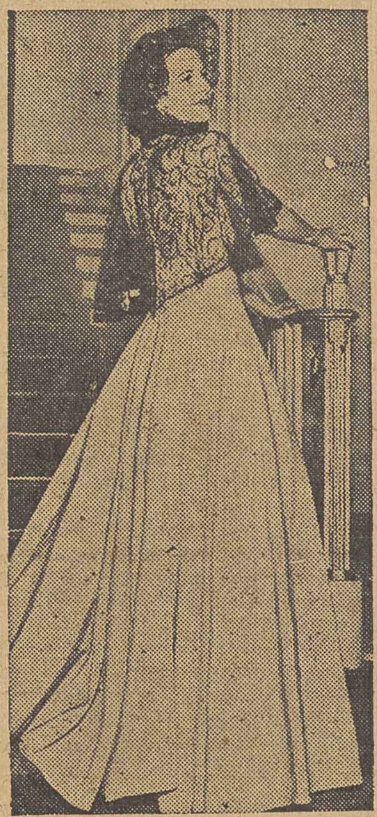
LACE MANTILLA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



White metallized silk moire for a picturesque wide - skirted formal evening frock with a Spanish mantilla of black silk lace gracing shoulders and head, here indeed is the costume-ideal for the debutante to wear to mid-winter festivities. Such grand silks as we have with us this season! The silk moires are beloved indeed and they are lovely in white or colors. White shot with silver is supremely chic. And the new silk brocades! One can't describe them for their beauty is beyond word pictures. These brocades are stunning for princess evening coats that button down the front.

HATS NOT BECOMING TO AVERAGE WOMAN

The selection of becoming hats promises to be more difficult than ever this season. Seldom has there been such a generous choice, as far as actual style trends go, but most of the numerous different shapes prove unbecoming to the average woman.

Height still reigns supreme, although many milliners have tried to retain the more moderate rounded and shallow crown. The tall crowns, still shaped like inverted flower pots, prevail on every type hat, but the turban. Some of these felts seem to be inspired by early Pilgrim days in America, while others look more like modern Alpine hats with taller crowns.

Adding Accessoies Gives New Effects to Costumes

If you know your fashion arithmetic you will discover that one costume can be made into two by the addition of the right accessories. Take those black suits, for example, which have a modest bit of Persian lamb trimming on collar, cuffs and pockets. It doesn't matter whether the jacket is short or long, or whether it is fitted or swagger—the choice of a blouse, hat and gloves determine the ensemble's perfection.

For afternoon and informal evening needs there are elegant blouses of metallic fabrics and satins, while for tailored needs the shirtwaist blouse with studs is the smartest you can find. Light gloves, dark gloves or bright gloves have their advantages as do hats of felt or velvet.

Pointed Hats

Young women have adopted with enthusiasm the fashion of high pointed hats trimmed with long curling feathers. These are wor' well off the forehead.

Arthur Brisbane, Editor, Dies at 72

New York, N. Y.—With the death of Arthur Brisbane Christmas morning, the world lost its most widely known and most widely read newspaper writer and editor. The veteran commentator, whose column "This Week" appeared regularly in this newspaper, died of heart disease while he slept. He was seventy-two.

True to the Brisbane tradition, he kept up the terrific pace of his work to the last. When he was stricken late in the afternoon of Christmas eve he had almost finished his column, "Today," which appeared in many large daily newspapers, principally those of William Randolph Hearst's string. He was forced to call upon his son, Seward, 22, to complete it. It was the first time in his life Arthur Brisbane had not finished what he had set out to write.

Millions of Readers.

It was only a few hours afterward Mr. Brisbane fell asleep in his Fifth avenue apartment. At his bedside were his physicians, Dr. Leopold Stieglitz and Dr. Frederick Zeman, and a nurse. In the apartment his entire family had gathered — his wife, Mrs. Phoebe Brisbane, whom he had married in 1912; his son, Seward, and his four daughters, Mrs. J. R. K. McCrary, 23; Emily, 18; Alice, 14, and Elinor 12. The great editor never awakened.

ARTHUR BRISBANE

Probably no one knows how many millions of persons read Mr. Brisbane's verse, analytical comments upon the news of the day. It is estimated that 25 millions read his daily column. Additional millions followed with satisfaction the weekly column syndicated by Western Newspaper Union to this and many other leading weekly newspapers.

Mr. Brisbane was wealthy. It is reported that his yearly salary at the time of his death was $260,000. In addition, there was the return on his extensive real estate holdings.

Arthur Brisbane was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1864. He attended the public schools and then, forsaking a college education, he became a reporter on the old New York Sun at 19. Yet his rise to the position he held in the world of journalism at the last was not the Horatio Alger type of success story, with glory crowning the hero after countless tear-jerking tribulations. He was good and he was successful from the start.

It was not long before he was the Sun's London correspondent. After five years, there was a shake-up on the paper and the management cabled him to return. He said he would if they made him managing editor. Managing editor! He was just 23. They made him managing editor. And so well did he execute his job, Joseph Pulitzer took him over to the New York World, which, under the Brisbane directorship, soon became the most influential organ of public opinion in America.

"Greatest Journalist of Day."

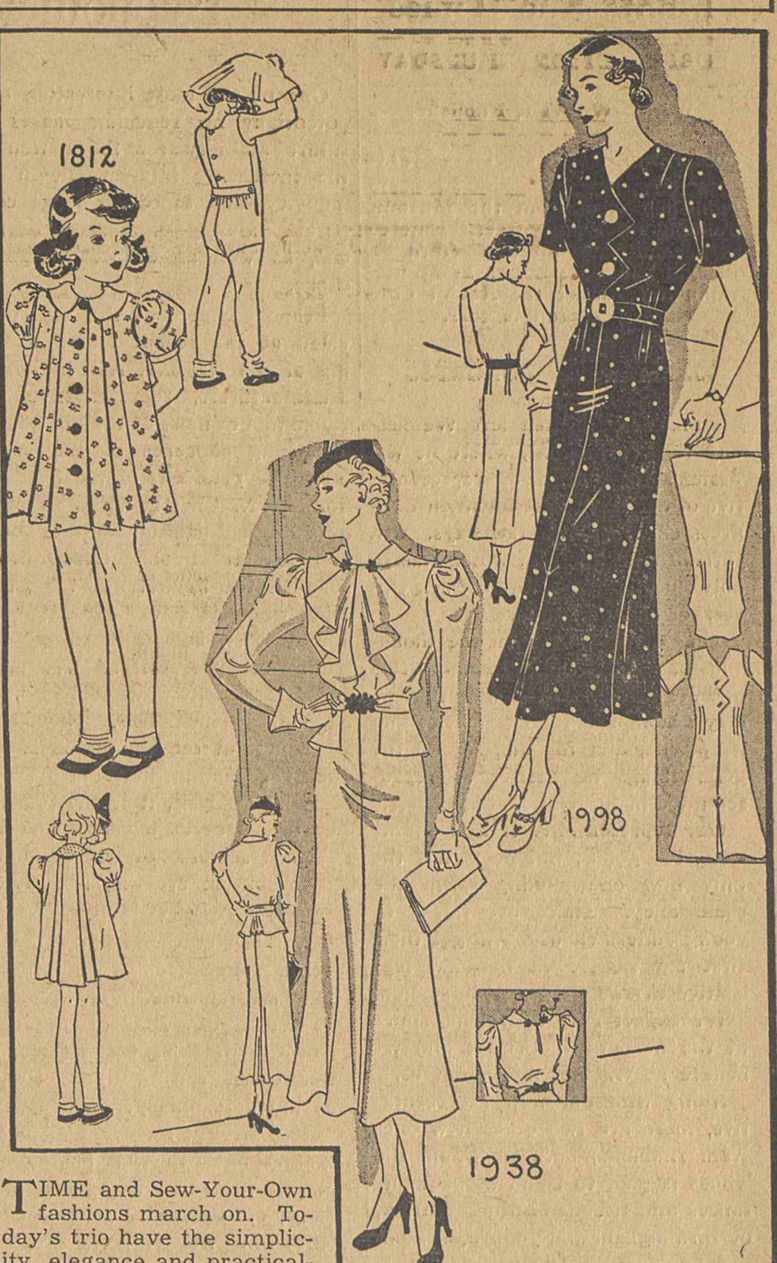
When William Randolph Hearst came from California and bought the New York Journal he hired Mr. Brisbane—at a reduction in salary of almost 50 per cent. But there was an agreement that as the circulation increased, so would his compensation. His earnings on the World were multiplied in almost no time.

The association with Hearst became a life-long friendship, and Mr. Brisbane soon became regarded as next to Mr. Hearst in importance in the chain of newspapers. When he died, Mr. Hearst said: "I know that Arthur Brisbane was the greatest journalist of his day."

It was Arthur Brisbane who was credited with bringing the trend of newspaper style "down to earth." He believed that newspapers should be written for the ordinary man, not the intelligentsia. He wrote that way —and his columns appealed to college professors as well as to merchants and farmers.

He dictated his 1,000 to 1,200 crisp, unwasted words daily in half an hour to an hour. There was a dictaphone beside him wherever he went. He would even wake up in Pullman berths and begin dictation at two or three in the morning.

Simple, Elegant, Practical



TIME and Sew-Your-Own fashions march on. Today's trio have the simplicity, elegance and practicality so vital to the up-to-the-minute well-groomed woman—and so within reach of the modern, progressive members of The Sewing Circle.

Pattern 1812—Little Miss Two-To - Five can manage her own dressing with the aid of this frock that buttons down the front. She will be the picture of daintiness too, with such clever aids as princess lines, puff sleeves and an intriguing little collar. The one piece step-in is the essence of practicality—a great boon to the youngster's comfort. This ensemble is available in sizes 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 3 requires 2⅝ yards of 35 or 39 inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting.

Pattern 1998—This new dress "belongs" in almost any company. Its great simplicity will endear it to homemakers, and business women alike. It is a combination of charm, good lines and youthfulness. You'll want two versions of this style — one with short sleeves, the other with long. Pique, silk crepe or velveteen will serve nicely as the material. It is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4⅔ yards of 35 inch material, with long sleeves 4⅞ yards.

Pattern 1938—Daytime distinction takes on a new meaning in this super - styled frock. The squared shoulders, swing skirt and peplum fulness are the important details which give it such perfectly balanced finesse. Yet not one part of it is difficult to cut or to sew. This is a dress which is adequate for every occasion—save the strictly formal.

Available for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material. The collar, jabot and belt in contrast take ⅝ yard.

Don't miss these grand numbers. A detailed sewing chart accompanies each pattern to guide you every step of the way.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well - planned, easy - to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

JARMAN TO CONGRESS

Hon. Pete Jarman left Wednesday for Washington, where he will assume the duties of representative of our Sixth District when Congress convenes in a few days. Mr. Jarman takes the seat which was so ably filled by the veteran, Buck Oliver, for many sessions.

The Times joins with the thousands of other friends and supporters of Pete Jarman in the wish that he may accomplish for his district and its people, and for himself, all the good things he desires as representative in the National Congress.

Our representative is new in the Congress game; but he is not the only new one looking down the same alley. There are flocks of young statesmen who will get their first experiences in national legislative affairs in the next session. We expect Pete to win his spurs at the head of the class; and we believe he will not disappoint us.

Along with our new representative, there are two other new ones from Alabama, both of whom the Times is glad to claim as acquaintances and friends—Luther Patrick, of Birmingham and John Sparkman of Huntsville. We have great hopes for them too, and best wishes.

THE POSTOFFICE

The name "United States Post Office" has been tacked on to the new federal building in Montevallo. It is composed of large aluminum letters that string out in a long and graceful line across the front and above the main entrance. The words "Montevallo, Alabama" are engraved in the marble slab that arches the front door.

Interior finish of the building is being completed rapidly. The construction office building is advertised for sale and removal from the lot January 1st. It will not be long now until we shall be looking forward to the date when our postoffice force will take up their new and handsome quarters.

COTTON REPORT

There were 6,358 bales of cotton ginned in Shelby County from the crop of 1936 prior to December 13, as compared with 5,661 bales ginned to December 13, crop of 1935.

CCC CAMP VACANCIES

There are more than one hundred vacancies in CCC Camps in Alabama for white war veterans without disabilities. Veterans desiring to enroll in one of these camps should make application immediately to the United States Veterans Administration at Tuscaloosa, Alabama.—D. Trotter Jones, Department Adjutant.

30,000 FAMILIES AIDED

More than 30,000 families in Alabama have been aided by the Resettlement Administration up to November 1, according to reports released in Washington.

The report said that 136,661 acres of land were purchased in Alabama for 24,881 families. Loans given totaled $2,520,027. The grants affected 5,169 families and involved $83,538. Only the loans to Georgia, Arkansas and Mississippi farmers exceeded the Alabama loans.

The Resettlement Administration reported loans of $93,738,597 to 386-412 farm families and grants of $18,316,967 to 468,471 families over America.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Acid helps to keep red color in vegetables, such as red onions, red cabbage, and beets, so vinegar may be added to the cooking water or the vegetables may be served with a sour sauce to bring the color back. To keep beets from losing color by "bleeding," cook with skins on and about one inch of the tops.

Economic Highlights

One of the most interesting and potentially far reaching phases of future stability for the nation is the increasing interest shown by industry—and especially large corporate industry—in matters of social, as well as economic significance.

Prime example of this was provided at the recent annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers, representative organization of most of the big goods-producing concerns of the country. The president of the Association, C. N. Chester (who in business life is Chairman of the Board of General Foods Corporation) sounded the keynote of the gathering when he said, "Industry cannot just sit back and enjoy the fruits of prosperity. We must understand better what has been happening since 1929. Now that the course of the depression is behind us, lending itself in its entirety to analysis, it is the job for industry, general business and all affected sectors of our economic life to join in creating a national depression study committee."

Mr. Chester then presented 11 specific suggestions which he believes industry should follow. Business Week briefs them thus: 1. To continue making better goods to lower costs, raising living standards but defending personal opportunities; 2. Put all possible unemployables back to work; 3. Keep its house in order; 4. Oppose monopoly; 5. Engender greater confidence in workers; 6. Promote Public understanding; 7. Share the proceeds of industrial operation fairly among workers, management and investors; 8. Help create economic security for all; 9. While accepting its responsibilities, insits that all other interested elements, including labor organizations, be made equally responsible; 10. Cooperate with government; 11. Join their groups in a preventative study of depressions.

These goals were approved by the delegates to the meeting. Most serious dissension arose over the Social Security Act which has many enemies as well as friends. But finally, the purpose of the Act was approved though the Act itself was criticised in detail, a criticism that has been made often before and will very possibly lead to some revision of the measure in the next Congress.

The meaning of all this is that industry is making a determined effort to strengthen every phase of industrial activity to improve employment and safeguard steady jobs.

The service industries are following suit. For example, the railroads and the electric utilities are doing everything possible to stabilize and increase their operations so as to employ the greatest number of persons and render the higest public service.

National political interest has naturally been focused on Washington during the past year. As a result, local gaverments have come in for only a modicum of attention.

In 1937, however, local politics will be of vital importance. During January, no less than 43 state legislatures will convene.

Before these legislatures will be many highly important questions. One of these questions is that of relief—Federal appropriations for this purpose are gradually being reduced, and tremendous pressure will be brought on states to appropriate funds to supplant the lost Federal dollars.

Only a handful of states have yet passed laws to bring their citizens completely under the Social Security Act. In the bulk of the states such laws will be up for debate and considerable dissension is in prospect.

Furthermore, in practically every state local problems of more than ordinary significance will be an issue. The question of public economy and taxation is looming larger every day—and the collection and disbursement of public funds is being more closely scrutinized. In at least one state, California, revision of the state constitution is considered.

Thus, during the next month or two, more of the political news in your newspapers will be given to state activities.

Long debated has been the proposal that the President of the United States should be restricted, by law, but to a single term of six years duration.

Prime argument in favor of the proposal is that under present conditions, presidents are virtually forced to build political fences during their first term in an effort to assure their reelection. The single term would stop that long established practice.

A bill to pave the way for a Constitutional amendment making the proposal the law of the land will probably be introduced in the Congress.

'Possum Hunting

Like softball in other recent years 'possum hunting has come to town and risen to a new favor. Consequently, on many a starry—or, for that matter, stormy—night, not a few of our usual sedate citizens and citizenesses are leaving town for the deep gullies, the precipitous crags in the far woods.

Now this is all right. 'Possum hunting seems to be one of the more praiseworthy of the hunts, because so often the catch is so unappealing that real fear or something else sets in when the critter is caught and is freed on sight.

But there are dangers in this business, ladies and gentlemen, and a part of our business, of course, is warning against dangers even when of this kind.

Something of this danger was illustrated recently in Judge Ab's court. A defendant related that he was hunting with a shotgun, for any likely game. He saw something bobbing about in the weeds. And he thought it was a 'possum. He fired, but the object turned out to be a furcapped head. And the head's possessor was seriously wounded. And he was only looking for loose coke, so he said. Moreover, the judge accepted the hunter's story and the defendant was freed.

Now, 'possum hunters themselves, as we know them, seldom if ever carry guns. But they should be reminded that other hunters do and that, besides hunters, there are often other armed prowlers in the woods.

The lesson, then, is plain. For it is a well attested fact that though they are a gentle, forbearing and usually unarmed lot, 'possum hunters are noted for getting themselves into all sorts of suspicious positions and places. And the mere searching in the weeds for loose coke is practically apparent innocence compared to the ambigious and incredible postures and localities in which, we are reliably informed, some 'possum hunters have been known to be.

Anybody coming upon fully adult men and women, going on allfours up or down a wooded mountainside in the dead of night, easily might mistake them for a pack of bears. and naturally, if armed, these startled observers would fire as if in protection of life itself.

Or, if some of these 'possum hunters were spied through the gloom, negotiating—or should the word be wading, or swimming—a creek at an unearthly hour and for no readily imaginable reason, there's no telling what a shocked onlooker might take them for—maybe hippotami, or something. In short, 'possum hunters should beware being taken for a 'possum, or worse, themselves.

Then there are lesser dangers. One might walk or fall or roll or jump or dive right off the top of a mountain. One might get lost and have to waken an irate farmer in the middle of the night. One might, by mistake, cut down a shade tree by a family home. One might walk oneself into a coma.

'Possum hunting is great, all right. But let nobody tell you it is not a perilous, adventurous business.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

David's New Year's Inspiration

by Alice B. Palmer

DAVID had escorted Dorothy May to the New Year's grand ball for the last three years and they had danced the old year out and the New Year in, while whispering sweet "nothings" into each other's ears. But this year David was possessed with the New Year's spirit. He felt a strong desire to make someone else happy.

"What on earth is the matter lately, David, you seem to be so exuberantly happy?" spoke mother, in her kindly observant way. "Has Dot promised to marry you, or are you contemplating a proposal from her?"

"Something better than that, mother. I am planning New Year's resolutions," replied David.

Several days before the great holiday, David found himself in a large department store, buying a new gown for his mother. He felt rather out of place in a ladies' dress section, but with the aid of an understanding saleslady, he soon found just the thing, a golden brown floral design, his mother's favorite color. Then he thought of slippers to match and a pretty nosegay to pin upon her dress, and he was quite finished. He left the store simply bursting with enthusiasm. Just as he turned the corner toward home, he ran into Dorothy. "Why Dot, I'm so glad to see you."

"Looks like you have been shopping, Davy."

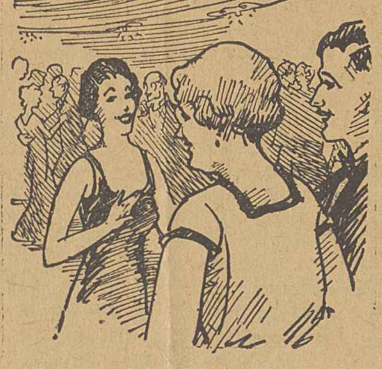
"Yes, but I have something important to ask you, Dot. Would you mind having your brother Joe see you to the New Year's ball? I have something very important to attend to first, but I'll be there later."

"Why David Morely, what do you mean?" said Dot, indignantly. "Are you really breaking the spell of our annual rendezvous?" Then, before he could reply, she continued with pretended indifference. "Very well, I'll go with Jean Raft. I know he'll take me. I suppose you are driving Dolly for a ride. Well, you are welcome to her. Good-by!"

Voices and laughter proclaimed the approach of another happy New Year, as David came charging into the cozy living room where his mother was just finishing the home paper.

"I have your things laid out, Davy, your best shirt and favorite tie."

"You are always so thoughtful, mother, never thinking of yourself," said David, as he chuckled, contemplating the great surprise.



Dorothy Spied Them First and Came Charging Over.

Some hours later David appeared, quite ready for the evening. He did really look charming and mother did not hesitate in telling him so.

"I'm off," he shouted, and then he was gone.

But it was not long before mother heard the loud peal of the door bell. "Who in the world can that be on New Year's eve?" thought she, hurrying to the door. She stepped back in surprise as she saw David, himself, standing there smiling.

"What is it, my boy, have you forgotten something?"

"No, mother, I am your gallant knight, come to take you to the New Year's ball. The cab, without, awaits your pleasure, Madam!" And David laughed merrily. They both roared with laughter.

"To prove that I really mean it, mother, go up and look in your room."

Although she did not comprehend what it was all about, she climbed the stairs with vague misgivings. But when she beheld the beautiful outfit her son had selected for her, she stood still and stared.

The silence was broken by David shouting impatiently from below: "Hurry, mother, or we shall be late for the ball!"

Mother called out, "All right dear," as she slipped into the new finery, truly feeling like a girl again. As she pinned the flower upon her dress, she marveled at David's ingenuity.

An hour later David and his mother arrived at the New Year's ball. Dorothy spied them first and came charging over, flushed and excited.

"Oh, Davy, can you ever forgive me?" she sighed, beaming upon him, adoringly.

David's reply was drowned out by the Happy New Year wishes on all sides of them, but his eyes expressed the joy of an inspiration fulfilled.

MISS LUCILLE HUDSON WEDS MR. BRIDGES

The marriage of Miss Lucille Hudson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Hudson to Mr. Mark Jagoe Bridges, of Lexington, Kentucky, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents on Felder Avenue at 3 o'clock.

The entire floor was elaborately decorated. In the drawing room, an improvised altar, tall waxen tapers, white roses and ascension lilies, furnished a cathedral-like setting for the beautiful and impressive ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Pierce N. McDonald, rector of the Church of the Ascension.

The artistic program of music, rendered preceding the ceremony was by Frances Marks Seibels, violinist, and Bessie Savage, pianist.

Selections were "Souvenir," "Poetique" and Kriesler's "Old Refrain."

During the ceremony the old English air "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," was played softly.

Harriett Owen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Owen, of Roanoke, Alabama, was flower girl. She was dressed in a period frock of pink chiffon and carried an old-fashioned nose-gay.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The groom's best man was Mr. James Mullins of Gastonia, N. C., formerly of Dothan.

The bride was lovely in white satin which was also her mother's wedding dress.

It was in molded lines, with yoke of rose point lace.

The veil of illusion, was worn with a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of white roses showered with lilies of the valley.

A small reception which followed was for the bridal couple and for intimate friends of her family.

The bride's cake, in wedding ring form, was in all white and held in the center a showered arrangement of lilies of the valley.

The wedding candies were in form of lilies, and these filled antique silver comports.

Mrs. F. A. Flowers presided at the coffee table, which was in adornment of flowers in the traditional bridal colors.

Mr. Bridges and his bride are on a southern wedding trip. The bride is an ornament to younger society in Montgomery.

The bride graduated with Bachelor of Arts degree from Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts.

She received her Master's degree in psychology from Duke University with the class of 1935. She is literary in her tastes and has written and published on scientific subjects.

The groom holds academic degree from Duke University and is a graduate of the Law School of Duke.

Among out-of-town guests at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Owen, Miss Harriett Owen, of Roanoke, Mr. James Mullins, of Gastonia, N. C., Dr. and Mrs. S. L. Parkinson, of Columbus, Mississippi. —Montgomery Advertiser, Dec. 24.

Baptist Church

"Forward with God" will be the pastor's subject Sunday morning. In the evening we join in the union service at the Methodist Church. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Mr. Augustus J. Cox.

The Sunday School hour is 9:45 a.m. Dr. M. L. Orr will speak to the Brotherhood Class on "The Return of Religion," the recent book written by a noted psychologist. It is one of the most significant books of recent writing. A large group should be present in the men's class room Sunday morning to hear the discussion. Come and bring your friends.

Sheriff C. H. Fore, of Columbiana was a visitor here Tuesday.

A New Year Opportunity
by
Helen Gaisford Waterman

THE New Year's party at Southwood Country club was in full swing, with Fred Gordon, directing the dance orchestra of college boys, putting out sweet music. He was especially anxious to show off his particular variety of syncopated rhythms this evening, as there would be some men there who could, if they wanted to, "do him some good."

He watched Beatrice, his girl, dance by in the arms of a handsome stranger. With a mustache, too! Darn it, he'd grow one!

He brought the rhythm to a crashing climax, and signaled for an intermission. Then his eyes hunted out Beatrice, and he started toward her.

He was delayed by an older man, who wanted to talk to him.

It was a better offer than Fred had dreamed of. What a New Year's opportunity! Pater would be sore, of course—

He nodded his acceptance, shook hands heartily, and dashed off toward the conservatory. Beatrice and her companion were just coming back to the dance floor.

"Say, Bee—I've just got to see you a minute. Excuse her, won't you? Bee," he asked suddenly, "will you marry me?"

"Why, Fred!" she exclaimed, amazed at his outburst. "I suppose so—some day, maybe."

"I mean now, right away."

"How could we? You know we have to wait until you finish school and get your start."

"I've got my start. I'm going to lead a dance orchestra and be broadcast. We'll have plenty to live on and a good chance for more."

"I'd like to, Fred. I'd rather marry you than anybody. But if I married you now, your father would always feel that I had been the one to get you to quit school."

"I'd tell him—"

One of the orchestra boys looked out. "Say, Fred, excuse me, but the crowd's getting restless."

"In a minute. Please, Bee."

"If they really want you, they'll wait. I really want you—and I'll wait."

Fred stuck his hands in his pockets, and traced a pattern on the floor with his toe. "And I thought this was going to be such a swell New Year," he muttered.

"You won't win all tonight, dear," Beatrice said gently. She kissed him suddenly, softly, and slipped quickly to the doorway. "But, Fred," she added, "see the year through."

Baseball's Pages Turn Back at Port of Aching Dogs

THEY have been moored for long hours in the Port of Aching Dogs—this haven high above Forty-second street where baseball men gather when worn down by the official futility of their annual meetings.

There is gossip about Kelley of Yale. Paul Krichell, the scout who watched over him all last spring, reveals that the youngster is a tidy first baseman with fair hitting ability. There is a leaning forward at this but then the gathering settles back. Krichell relates sadly that professional sports have no lure for the best ballyhooed athlete of the year and that he likes baseball least of all. If the Yankees cannot make him see reason the others know they have no chance.

The conversation switches. A minor manager, somewhat perturbed over the decision which gave Cleveland full rights to Bob Feller, wonders how England might have made out if it had a Judge Landis instead of a Baldwin as arbiter of the niceties. He gets the floor for a moment, but then Gene McCann, the veteran scout, comes in, fully arrayed in white lawn tie, red stickpin and gray checked suit. After the applause has subsided they resume playing over games of 25 years ago, debating each called strike of that bygone era, arguing frantically over the events leading up to each base hit and error.

A heavy set man, tanned face scarcely more lined now than it was those many seasons ago when he was the game's first and greatest pinch hitter, enters the room. This is a Yankee party but National leaguers are welcome, especially welcome when they have done so much for the sport as the present insurance broker whose name is Moose McCormack.

Moose, as is befitting a man who hit so well and so often, starts talking about pitchers. He tells about attending the Chicago World's fair along with Ty Cobb and meeting Mordecai Brown. Years ago some of baseball's most thrilling duels were waged between these two great hitters and the three-fingered hurler who still is remembered as one of the best of all time. McCormack chuckles as he mentions that Brown remembered their faces but was far wide of the plate when it came to names, thought Cobb was Fred Snodgrass, that Moose was Red Murray.

Recalling Bitter Feuds Between Giants and Cubs

He tells about Chicago of another day. That was when the Cubs and the Giants were mortal enemies and two great cities rallied to the causes. It was in those days that the Chicago Board of Trade used to hold meetings in the heart of the Loop. There would be fiery speeches about the necessity of repelling this invasion of hated Easterners. Then a huge bonfire would be lighted and McGraw would be burned in effigy.

McGraw

This brings other tales of the days when the Giants would be returning from spring training and little Mac would be inciting small town citizens to buy tickets in huge numbers for the mere privilege of booing him in person. Of that afternoon when the fighter in him rebelled against what the showman had done, when he took off his coat and challenged the 5,000 jeering customers who packed the old park in Birmingham. Of Arthur Fletcher and Fred Snodgrass, whose sheer desire to win forthwith increased by 25 per cent the chances of any ball club which signed them.

About days in Austin, Houston and other Texas towns when bush league teams fought tooth and nail to beat their big time colleagues.

About free for all fights between opposing players and fans in Atlanta. About how Arthur Devlin pleaded with a badly battered opponent to stop and about how this sorely bruised opponent (I think he was a minor leaguer named O'Dell) refused to holler "nuf." About how the next day the home towners sought something softer and challenged little Bridwell. How Bridwell, probably the best boxer in baseball of that day, won with such ease that even Atlantans were charmed.

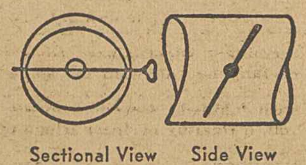
How to Check "Chimney Loss," Greatest Waste in Home Heating

WHAT is "chimney loss"? Well, that's a term we heating experts have for heat that goes up the chimney and is wasted.

Yet it's really a simple matter to save money by reducing this loss—convert "chimney loss" to "useful heat," as we call it. Here's the remedy:

Next time you refuel the fire, move the handle of the turn damper (that disc or plate-like damper inside the smoke pipe) 1-16th of an inch toward the closed upright position. Then, if the fire keeps on burning too freely, turn the damper another sixteenth of an inch. Repeat this operation until you find the correct adjustment—one that will deliver the greatest amount of useful heat with the least "chimney loss."



Sectional View Side View
Turn Damper in Smoke Pipe

Once you have found this ideal adjustment of the damper, mark the position on the smoke pipe with a piece of chalk or something that can be plainly seen, and leave the damper set at that mark.

Bear this in mind: The nearer the turn damper is set to the closed position the smaller the "chimney loss" and the greater the volume of "useful heat" that goes to properly heating your home. And, of course, the lower your fuel bills.

Don't Irritate Gas Bloating

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable.

You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adlerika the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adlerika rids you of gas and cleans foul poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika. Get rid of GAS. Adlerika does not gripe—is not habit forming. At all Leading Druggists.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle aged surgeon, is possessed of seemingly supernatural powers. Occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, however, is in love with Dan Carlisle, a professor at the University who has little means. They discuss marriage, but decide to delay talking to her father about it. Nancy, who has been playing tennis with Dan that afternoon, tells her father she had been playing with a girl friend. Greeding knows this is untrue and is secretly enraged. Stepping into his wife's room, his eye falls on a marble statuette which he dislikes. He picks it up, wishing he could smash it to bits. Suddenly it is snatched from his grasp as by an invisible force and burst asunder. Mrs. Greeding is greatly disturbed over the mysterious destruction of the statuette. The doctor reveals that Ira Jerrell wants to marry Nancy. On the way to a dinner party a car cuts in front of Greeding's. He angrily expresses the wish that the driver would break his neck. An instant later an accident occurs in which this very thing happens. At the dinner the Greedings meet Prof. Carlisle, Dan's father, and his daughter Mary Ann. Dr. Greeding is intrigued by Mary Ann, who is a surgical nurse. Mrs. Greeding tells Prof. Carlisle about the destruction of the statuette and he indicates it might have been caused by a "poltergeist," a "racketing, mischievous spirit." Dr. Greeding induces Mary Ann to take a position in his office. Eventually he finds he loves her. Jerrell continues to see Nancy, whose love for Dan is unchanged. The Greedings invite the Carlisles to dinner. Dr. Greeding discusses with Prof. Carlisle the subject of "poltergeists," the doctor telling of some of his own experiences, but attributing them to a friend.

"That's outside the bounds, of course," he commented, not smiling.

"I wonder whether it is," Doctor Greeding stubbornly demurred; and he said thoughtfully: "You know, the human body has an infinite capacity to rise to emergencies. If a man loses sight, or hearing, his other senses become more acute. If a vein is destroyed, even the jugular, others take up the burden. If fingers are amputated, the thumb redoubles its usefulness. Isn't it possible that in some cases, when a man approaches old age and the impairment of his muscular strength, he may by way of compensation develop such a—power?"

"Old men acquire wisdom," the professor pointed out. "That is weapon enough!"

"But in a primitive society," Doctor Greeding urged, "old men, when their increasing weakness made them a burden to the tribe, would have been eliminated, unless as their strength failed they learned other ways to defend themselves. For instance, to imagine a wound, and have that wound appear—"

And he said, his eyes gleaming strangely: "A man able to do that would be a dangerous enemy."

Professor Carlisle said reflectively: "I expect he would be more dangerous to himself than to others. The world seems to be organized for the general rather than the individual benefit. Probably some counter-force would arise to deal with him."

"Yet it's a fascinating thought," Doctor Greeding insisted.

Professor Carlisle retorted gravely: "I should be inclined to remind such a man that he who eats with the devil will need a long spoon!"

There was something monitory in his tone; the Doctor felt it, and suddenly wary, was silent. Before he could speak again, Mrs. Greeding came to the door.

"You two have been alone long enough," she suggested. "Dan and Nancy have disappeared, and Mary Ann and I are talked dry. Professor, I thought you might care for bridge?"

"By all means," Professor Carlisle assented, and rose so quickly that Doctor Greeding suspected the other man was glad to see an end to this conversation. They settled at the table in the other room, the Doctor and Mary Ann as partners.

But almost at once the telephone rang, and Ruth came to call Doctor Greeding. When he returned, it was with apologies.

"I'll have to break up the game," he explained. "This is a call I can't very well refuse. Up in Kennebunk. An old friend, an emergency." He looked at Mary Ann, smiled. "It's a grand night for a drive, Miss Carlisle," he suggested. "But if you'd rather not—"

"I'll come, of course," Mary Ann assented. "You will want the kit—"

"We'll stop by for it," he said.

Mrs. Greeding protested: "Ned, it can't be necessary to subject Mary Ann to this—nor yourself either. You could send Doctor Mayhew!"

Mary Ann insisted: "Oh, I don't mind. After all, it's my job, you know!"

"I don't know at all," the older woman argued. On the surface there was in her words no more than solicitude for Mary Ann. "Surely your regular work is—"

But Doctor Greeding interrupted. "Tosh, Myra," he said cheerfully. "A doctor's work is never done; and a nurse is just as much abused as a doctor. Come, Mary Ann."

And Mrs. Greeding yielded, though reluctantly. So they were presently upon the road.

CHAPTER IV.

There was in Doctor Greeding when he set out tonight with Mary Ann a deep intoxication which he rigorously controlled. They took the roadster, and the top was down. The long miles unrolled in a ribbon before their wheels, and the night was jeweled by the headlights of approaching cars. Apple orchards were bright with belated blossoms along the roadside, and the night was warm and fair.

Doctor Greeding drove rapidly and surely, and Mary Ann slipped down low in the seat and relaxed there, her wrap loose about her shoulders, her hair flying in the breeze. He told her the nature of this summons. "The idiot is an old friend of mine, or I wouldn't go," he explained cheerfully. "Some one else could do it just as well, or he could wait till tomorrow. But his wife is alarmed, wants me."

She nodded, and he said in amused irritation:

"The visited us at the lake last summer. I told him then that this operation was inevitable. Tried to persuade him to take care of it; but he's a headstrong old man."

And he added after a little; "You and Dan must come up to the lake sometime. And your father. We've a pleasant place there: an island of our own, a couple of good boats, tennis court, golf near by if you want it, target-shooting and so on."

"I like tennis," she confessed. "Dan and I often play." She spoke sleepily, relaxed and at ease beside him.

"We go up for all of August," he remarked. "You can take your vacation at the same time."

"I hardly rate a vacation so soon," she demurred.

"You've earned one," he insisted. He added, as a saving phrase: "Mrs. Greeding will insist on your coming, I know."

He had, he reflected in a faint astonishment, been near forgetting that Myra would be at the island, had thought only of himself and this girl and Nancy and Dan. In sudden caution, he curbed his tongue, and they were silent for a while. Through Newburyport, and beyond, the road led smoothly on. They drove swiftly. Once he thought she slept, but when he looked at her, she was watching him. Or rather her eyes swung to meet his.

"That's Outside the Bounds, of Course," He Commented, Not Smiling.

He had never felt so awake, so alive. He grudged the fact that they came presently to their destination, and had a task to do; and he attacked this business in haste, eager to be done and on the road again with her; and Mary Ann became an automaton, supplementing his own hands with hers, anticipating his least desire . . . An hour of this, like machines. Then low-toned conversation with the Doctor, words of reassurance to the patient's wife, instructions to the nurse. So toward two o'clock in the morning they set out on the return to Cambridge.

They had been urged to stay the night, but Doctor Greeding would not. "I've five cases scheduled for the morning," he explained.

On the road again, Mary Ann said: "You might have been wiser to stay. There aren't five cases. There are only two, and Doctor Mayhew could do them."

Doctor Greeding chuckled. "He shall," he assented. "I intend to sleep till noon. But I wouldn't miss this drive home with you."

"I expect a night's sleep would have done you more good," she insisted, smiling as though his words were a jest.

He shook his head, intoxicated, alive; and after a little, he began to talk. He was in a confidential mood; and he found himself telling her about Ira Jerrell and Nancy.

"But don't repeat this to Dan," he warned her. "That brother of yours is so conscientious he might feel bound to step into the background and give Jerrell a clear field. I don't want him to do that. I want Nancy to make up her own mind, freely, between them."

"I know Dan feels he—isn't good enough for Nancy," she admitted, and added loyally: "Personally, I think she's lucky to get him. Dan's a peach!" She looked at him, surprised. "But I didn't know you knew about them?" she said.

"I have Nancy's confidence," he retorted; and she nodded. He continued: "Did I take the right attitude? Would you have said the same? Do you feel that—a girl makes a mistake to marry a man twenty years her senior?"

She was silent for longer than he liked. He looked at her, smiling. "Tell the truth," he insisted.

"Not if she loves him," said Mary Ann at last. She added, almost reluctantly: "Not if there is no—reason why she shouldn't love him." And after a moment she remarked, half to herself: "Sometimes a girl is wiser to choose a proved man. Then she knows what she is getting. Young men may change as they—mature."

He laughed in a sudden swift delight; but when she asked why he laughed, he would not tell her. Silence embraced them again, drawing them together; the car ran smoothly. The moon now was low; and Doctor Greeding's eyes fixed upon the flowing road in a sort of fascination. He drove automatically, his thoughts elsewhere.

It may have been that for a moment he slept. But at a certain point where the road forked and their way lay to the left, he kept straight ahead; and where just beyond the fork, this right-hand road turned, he did not turn. The car plunged through a shallow ditch and into the meadow beyond. His foot jammed home on the brakes, and he came to a breathless stop, thrown forward against the wheel, Mary Ann in a heap on the floor of the car beside him.

He was in dismay. "Are you hurt?" he exclaimed. "I'm sorry! I must have gone to sleep!"

She scrambled up on the seat again. "I don't think so," she declared, laughing. "No, I seem to be all here. My eyes were closed. I had no warning—"

"I must have gone to sleep," he repeated.

She touched his hand, on the wheel. "You're so desperately tired," she said gently. His blood, at the touch of her fingers, raced through his veins. "Let me drive. I'm awake now."

He looked at her hand on his, at her. "I'm not tired," he said huskily, breathlessly.

She withdrew her hand, abruptly; but his eyes held hers. He thought that even in the moonlight he could see her cheeks flaming. Then she spoke defensively, laughing, her head high. "Give me the wheel," she insisted. "You men are all idiots—don't know when you're tired. Come!"

He did not trust his voice. Without speaking, he got out of the car and went around to take the other seat. She backed into the road again.

"Now shut your eyes and do go to sleep," she commanded.

He obeyed her; he did shut his eyes. But he did not sleep. It seemed to him he had never been so wide awake before. There may be in the mere circumstance of sharing together even a passing peril something mystic and compelling in its effect on man and woman. For a moment, it might have happened that he and Mary Ann would die together; it seemed to him now that after that moment, their two lives could never take completely separate ways again.

But if Mary Ann had any such thought or feeling, she did not betray it. Somehow she found the proper road again; somehow she brought them back to Cambridge. For all that time he neither spoke nor opened his eyes; but his thoughts were a millrace. Only when she stopped the car did he rouse from his abstraction.

"Can you manage the rest of the way alone?" she asked lightly then. "Or shall I take you home and tuck you in?"

They were, he saw, at her father's door.

"I can manage, of course," he assured her. She alighted; and he got to the ground, and extended his hand.

"Thanks for taking care of me," he said. "I needed some one." Her hand was in his. "Anything might have happened," he confessed.

"But nothing did!" she reminded him, smiling. "Except that it's almost daylight, and we've lost a lot of sleep."

Impulsively, he lifted her hand to his lips; and then he saw the startled light in her eyes, and was quick with a word to make that gesture meaningless.

"This is for a good little girl," he said. "Good night!"

She turned away, quickly, in something like flight—darted toward the house. He waited till she had disappeared, before driving on toward his own home. The car he left at the side door.

Upstairs, he undressed slowly, trying to face and measure this new passion in his life. When he came into the bedroom he and Mrs. Greeding shared, gray dawn was in the windows. His wife roused sleepily; her face was an unlovely mask of cosmetics, her hair awry.

"Ned?"

"Yes, Myra," he said shortly.

"What time is it?"

He protested irritably: "What difference does that make?"

"It's ridiculous," she protested, "for you to be out all night. You could have sent Doctor Mayhew!"

He got into his own bed without replying.

"I believe you like this sort of thing," she asserted. "I declare Ned, you ought to have some sense of your own position."

Cotton Sagged Steadily; But Dr. Greeding Continued to Buy.

"Don't talk, Myra," he said sharply. "I'm dead tired. Let me sleep in the morning."

"It's morning now," she reminded him. "And I sha'n't close my eyes again, you may be sure of that. You might have some consideration—" Her voice went on, unheard, till suddenly a word fixed his attention. "—and driving all over New England all night with Mary Ann! Is that necessary? Of course, I understand; but people are so ready to think and say unkind things about a girl who works—"

He made no reply; but he was conscious of a rising tide of anger at her chidings. He checked and curbed his own wrath, startled, full of a quick and vivid terror, afraid of his own thoughts.

He closed his ears to his wife's words, found solace and contentment in remembering Mary Ann—whom incredibly, he loved!

Incredibly; and also with a great futility. Doctor Greeding was essentially conventional, accepting the decent standards of his world, abiding by them. No matter what he might feel for Mary Ann, he would still cleave loyally to Myra, so long as they both should live.

Or—so long as Myra should live!

Thus insidiously, as he lay half dreaming, there crept into his thoughts a hideous possibility, one of those monstrous specters which need only to be recognized to be abhorred . . . Yet which, if a man contemplate them long enough, may cease to affright him, may come to wear an aspect treacherously beautiful.

Sometimes, in retrospect, it is possible to say that on a certain day, or even at a certain hour, there occurred in an acquaintance a fundamental change; to recognize that he became from that moment another person, almost a stranger.

There was this summer such a change in Doctor Greeding, but even those who knew him most intimately were not afterward able to fix definitely its beginning. His wife's death, it was sometimes suggested, might have been the cause; but Mrs. Greeding had in fact herself remarked the difference in him, and had more than once spoken of it to Doctor Greeding himself, before she died.

To each of the people who knew him best, this change presented itself in a different guise. Paul Master, through whom Doctor Greeding made his occasional investments, saw it in the shape of a reckless turn to speculation. Doctor Greeding had in such matters always heretofore been willing to hear advice and to be guided by sane counsels; but Associated Cottons was not the sort of security calculated to appeal to a conservative man, and Greeding had always been conservative. When during May and June he steadily increased his purchases of this stock, Master was more and more perplexed and uneasy. Cottons sagged steadily; but Doctor Greeding continued to buy, with a stubborn insistence which Master's best arguments could not shake.

Competent Mrs. Simpson
If Edward Has a Son
The Latest Gang Killing
Goose and Gander

"Mrs. Simpson purchases villa on the north coast of Africa, looking out on the blue Mediterranean, for her 'royal honeymoon' with the former king of England."

Arthur Brisbane

Here you see the capable young American woman; she buys the honeymoon villa; if she married an American she would have expected him to buy it.

This incident helps to explain how Duke Edward came to rely on the Baltimore girl.

The former English King Edward in his "instrument of abdication" declared his "irrevocable determination to renounce the throne" for himself and his descendants. All very fine now, but suppose Edward should have a son, and the son should grow up, a man of power and ambition, as he might, with an American mother. He would by inheritance be the rightful occupant of the throne of England, and might reasonably say that his father could not deprive him of his right before he was even born. That might be embarrassing if in troublous times a weak English king or a nervous queen were on the throne.

Europe will turn from important matters to read about the latest American gang killing. Joseph Scaduto, aged twenty-eight, was shot down two months ago while having his shoes polished in New York city. Night before last his brother Dominic, who had hurriedly moved from New York, was with 13 other men in a Chicago pool hall.

Three gunmen entered, herded the 14 into a back room, motioned to Dominic Scaduto to step out from the crowd and stand against the wall. He did so, and was riddled with bullets. The executioners were old for their trade, thirty-six to thirty-nine; young killers, usually, do that work.

New York city ordered $126,795 worth of typewriters, union labor complained that manufacturers were "unfair," and the purchase was stopped.

As far as New York city was concerned that was done to get votes; no New York citizens are involved in the alleged "unfairness."

If all makers of typewriters signed an agreement not to sell a typewriter to New York city for 50 years, and never to repair one, that would not embarrass the city; for the courts would punish that as conspiracy. What is sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander.

H. G. Wells, who has influence in England, was "brought up in a simple, sentimental, low-church English home." Referring to the archbishop's slurs on Mrs. Simpson, he writes: "I learned to think the proper treatment of men who insinuate shameful vague things they cannot specify or substantiate about a woman is horse-whipping."

The archbishop of Canterbury hardly expected all this, or half.

Doctors announce a new compound that kills "sinus germs in the blood stream," a most important announcement. The new compound, called prontosil, is non-poisonous to the patient, kills the germs that cause sinus trouble, and may kill other disease germs. The transfusions of new fighting blood, sometimes not used often enough or early enough in medical practice, may be replaced by chemical compounds that will pursue various disease germs in the blood stream, helping the white corpuscles.

Congressman Fish of New York wants members of the Republican national committee to abdicate, that a liberal Republican party may be built up.

Does anybody imagine that a "liberal" Republican party could have held back the political Johnstown flood last November?

If the Republican party turns liberal now, it may find in 1940 that it has done so just in time to miss carrying an election that conservatism might have carried.

The world would like to know more about the Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, hostess of the duke of Windsor, former king.

She was Miss Catherine Wolf of Philadelphia, has been three times married, and when the king amuses himself with bowling in her castle, she beats him, and all the other men players. Plenty of energy there.

Our good neighbor Chile, anxious to keep gold at home, decided to restrict "luxury importations" and unwisely included automobiles, including trucks, among "luxuries."

As a result Chile's industries face heavy losses, her network of modern highways will fall into decay.

Talking to Advantage of Others and Joy to Ourselves in 1937

TALKING is the recognized medium of communication between persons who are together or who, being absent, use a telephone. It is unfortunate having such a marvelous medium at our command that we so often fail to put it to the use worthy of its value. It is possible to send a glow of happiness through the listener when we speak merited words of appreciation. It is possible to solace those in sorrow by words of comfort spoken from the heart. It is possible to make joy doubly gladsome by expressing our happiness in the good fortune of others. Through talking to our children we can spur them on to do fine things, or encourage them in worthy resolves. In short the good we can do by talking in the right spirit is inestimable. By talking in the right way we bring good to others and joy to ourselves.

"Too Much Talk"

It is when we swerve from the best use of the spoken word that we drag it down and harm both ourselves and our hearers. There is an expression "too much talk" which is significant of this very thing. The words speak for themselves, declaring that it would be advisable to cease saying the things we are. It is never said of good words. Of them we could say: Let us have more talk of the same sort, it is needed.

Many Words

Have you ever considered how much is said when derogatory talk is going on? Words are spoken and reiterated over and over again, as if by repetition the unpleasant things would be increased. Unfortunately this is what happens. Unkind or unfriendly conversation, by some perverse twist of human nature, is sure to be repeated, and usually with embellishments. Either the one who repeats it cannot believe her ears, and wonders if anyone else knows about the unfortunate circumstances, or else she finds a strange pleasure in repeating slander. It may be the derogatory words are against someone she dislikes. It may be they are about a total stranger. If the talk was commendatory repeating it would foster fine things. Good things should be given frequent repetition.

Pleasure Giving in 1937

We all could add so much to the pleasure and joy of living during the new year 1937, if we would set a watch on our talk, and by a wishful determination use this great means at our command to help others. It is one of the things that costs nothing and yet which can do such an endless amount of good. It is a way open to all alike.

Prize-winning Recipes of the South

CLOVERLEAF CHEESE BISCUITS

Mrs. Mary Owen, Memphis, Tenn.

Mix and sift 2 cups flour, 4 tsps. baking powder and ½ tsp. salt. Rub in 4 tbsps. Jewel Special-Blend Shortening with the tips of the fingers or cut in with a knife. Add ¾ cup grated cheese and mix well. Beat 1 egg yolk and add to ⅞ cup milk. Then add to dry ingredients and mix until soft dough is formed. Cut dough into small pieces, mould into balls and place 3 together in each muffin pan. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. This recipe makes 1½ dozen Cloverleaf cheese biscuits.—Adv.

City of Canaries

Norwich, England, is a city of canaries. People there discuss the fine points of the birds just as Kentucky men discuss those of horses, and were one to walk through the streets with a new specimen, traffic would stop to see the sight. Some dealers in Norwich have as many as 5,000 canaries and export them all over the world.

HAPPY NEW YEAR
1937

EVERY day is a fresh beginning,
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And spite of old sorrow, and older sinning,
And troubles forecasted, and possible pain
Take heart with the day, and begin again.

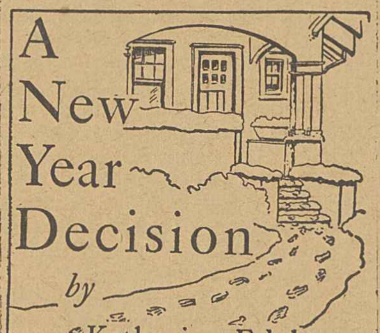
THE NEW YEAR

By GEORGE COOPER
in Indianapolis News

A SONG for the Old,
While its knell is tolled,
And its parting moments fly!
But a song and a cheer
For the glad New Year,
While we watch the Old Year die!
Oh, its grief and pain
Ne'er can come again,
And its care lies buried deep;
But what joy untold
Doth the New Year hold,
And what hopes within it sleep!

A song for the Old,
While its knell is tolled,
And the friends it gave so true!
But, with hearts of glee
Let us merrily
Welcome the bright, bright New!
For the heights we gained,
For the good attained,
We will not the Old despise;
But a joy more sweet,
Making life complete,
In the golden New Year lies.

A song for the Old,
While its knell is tolled!
With a grander, broader zeal,
And a forward view,
Let us greet the New,
Heart and purpose ever leal!
Let the ills we met,
And the sad regret,
With the Old be buried deep;
For what joy untold
Doth the New Year hold,
And what hopes within it sleep!



A New Year Decision

by
Katherine Edelman

PERHAPS it was something about the closing of the year that brought Paul and Ethel to the final decision. Anyaway, it was New Year's eve when they talked the matter over in a business-like way, and definitely decided upon the break. Months of growing irritation seemed to leave no other alternative than the court, they agreed. Both seemed relieved when the decision was made, and both agreed the quicker everything was over and settled, the better. They would begin packing up right away: the smaller things could be put away tonight.

Outside snow was falling in thick, white flakes. Every now and then sudden gusts of wind rattled the doors and windows. But neither of them seemed to notice. Perhaps the tumult in their own hearts dulled them to the fact that a storm of a different kind was venting its anger outdoors.

"What about this old clock Uncle Henry gave us?" Ethel asked, as she took it down from the mantel.

Paul laughed a little harshly. "You keep it," he said; "time isn't going to mean a thing to me from now on."

"But it came from your Uncle," Ethel protested; "he would want you to have it."

"I tell you I don't give a darn about the clock—or—or about anything else for that matter." Paul threw a pile of books that he had just picked up across the length of the room. "Let's get some one else to do this—this sort of thing makes the whole business seem awful."

"Why, Paul, we just decided that we would be business-like—that we would make no fuss, or—"

"Well, I thought I felt that way, but I was wrong. I just can't fool with this stuff tonight . . . Ethel, this may sound crazy, but is there any reason, now that we've decided to part for good, why we can't go out and celebrate the New Year together. We—we don't have to really like each other to do that—we can go down and watch the crowds. Anything to get away from this gloom!"

"Do you really mean that?" There was a queer little catch in Ethel's voice as she spoke, and her blue eyes seemed a bit misty. "Of course I'll go—I'll be glad to—there's too many ghosts around here tonight; it does make packing a bit difficult . . . But, can you get a cab this late?"

"I'll get one." Paul's voice was firm. Relief and eagerness shone from his dark eyes. "You hurry and doll up. I'll see to the cab."

In half an hour they started away. Both were flushed, excited. It seemed a bit daring, adventurous, to go out celebrating the New Year together, when they had decided only an hour ago that life under the same roof was unbearable any longer.

In spite of the crowds in the hotels and cafes, they found a little table, with a delightful view of everything that was going on. Paul ordered a bit recklessly. Since this was to be their last evening together, he was going to do the job right. But when the food came, they both ate rather silently. The small talk that had come so easy on the way down seemed to suddenly fail them . . . Every once in a while Paul glanced across the table at his wife. What a pity, he thought, they couldn't make a go of things! In his eyes Ethel was easily the best looking woman in the room—distinguished, different . . . Once his glance caught hers and held it for a moment. They both flushed and turned hurriedly to their plates.

Some one asked the orchestra to play "Love's Old Sweet Song." As silence followed the opening of the familiar melody both of them were swept by emotion . . . Their love had been the most wonderful thing in the world! How had it died so soon? What had happened? That was the question taunting both of them as the song went on.

Looking back they saw a hundred little things, magnified until they assumed tragic proportions — small hurts left unhealed, sharp words, silence and misunderstanding. There had been nothing terribly serious; neither could find any big, bitter thing accountable for the wreckage.

One Glance Caught Hers and Held It for a Moment.

Again, Paul looked at Ethel. This time she made no effort to look away. Tears shone in her eyes. Suddenly his hand stole across the table and found hers. "I love you, Ethel," he breathed; "can't we begin again?—can't we prove to ourselves and to the world that "Love's Old Sweet Song" is really the sweetest song of all?"

For a moment they did not realize that the orchestra had changed to a livelier air. Then as they sensed its swinging rhythm Paul reached out his arms. In a moment they were gliding with the happy throng of dancers, a newer and deeper love throbbing in their hearts.

Resolution That Fails

It is sad but true that never yet has a New Year's resolution paid the Christmas bills.

Public Welfare Is Solving Great Need

We have been constantly stressing and calling your attention to the fact that the Department does not have the money with which to carry on an adequate program of welfare services. Probably we have harped too long on the same note. Probably you as interested citizens are wondering what welfare workers do in the absence of funds with which to work, and you have a right to know.

Contrary to the general opinion, public welfare means a great deal more than the giving of "relief" in the form of food, cash, and clothing. The writing of checks is only one of the responsibilities of a Director of Public Welfare. There are many cases in which the problem is not one which money can solve. For instance: there are children neglected by parents; fathers failing to support wives and children; boys and girls becoming delinquent and in need of help and protection from the juvenile court; children truant from school for many reasons; children sick and in need of special diets, tonsillectomies, dental care, etc.; crippled children; unmarried mothers; deserted babies; families torn by dissension and discord because of nervous and mental disorders of some of its members; children in need of institutional care because of mental deficiency, delinquency, or other causes, children in need of foster home care; and still other cases which baffle classification. In such cases as these the social worker is challenged to help families and individuals in planning a way out of their difficulties. Help of this kind calls for the same kind of knowledge and skill which a doctor needs in treating a sick person and the standing which a teacher needs in same type of patience and underteaching. Money cannot solve all problems.

At the present there are 100 cases receiving service other than financial assistance from the Shelby County Department of Public Welfare. Many of these cases are in need of and are eligible for financial assistance, but in the absence of the funds the workers have tried to make plans so that the families might either be assisted by relatives or people in the community.

"What do welfare workers do when they have no money?" Their work is doubly hard, because they must use their initiative to find other resources to take the place of the money which is needed but which is not available.
